LONE ENSIGN TAKES $500,000 RUM CRAFT, SUBDUES 22 IN CREW

KNOCKS SEAMAN SENSELESS

Coast Guard Officer Seizes Helm and Runs Vessel Onto Reef as Captain Balks.

FORCES CREW BELOW DECKS

Then Stands Guard Until His Two Aides on a Launch Bring Assistance.

Ensign Charles L. Duke of the Coast Guard jumped aboard a moving rum-runner in the upper bay early yesterday morning, seized her liquor cargo worth $500,000 and then, by an amazing display of bluff and cool daring, subdued and arrested her entire crew of twenty-two Nova Scotian seamen.

He had chased the liquor ship up the Narrows in a thirty-foot Coast Guard launch, riding in the teeth of a forty-mile gale which was kicking up whitecaps in the harbor. Twice he had fired shots across her bow as warnings, so that when he drew alongside he had only three bullets left in his pistol to board the liquor vessel and confront her crew.

But through the whole harbor drama he swaggered as confidently as if he had had a machine-gun battalion behind him. One seaman tried to resist him, but he was knocked senseless with the butt end of Ensign Duke's pistol. The ship's captain refused to stop his vessel when Ensign Duke ordered him to stop, but he found the pistol poking him in the ribs and heard the 27-year-old ensign threaten to shoot. Later, through the long, dark hours of early morning, Ensign Duke stood guard on the boat all alone with a crew of hostile sailormen below decks while he waited for help from the Coast Guard stations ashore.

His Feat Acclaimed.

High officers of the Coast Guard hailed his feat yesterday as the most heroic exploit since they began raiding rum runners under the Prohibition law. They called it even more noteworthy because he had only had two years of Coast Guard experience when he made his single-handed capture. During the war he had served as an enlisted man in the navy. Later, from 1921 to 1925, he had picked at typewriter keys as a reporter on The Washington Star. Late Sunday night he was patrolling the harbor on the tiny launch CG 2327, with a crew of two men. It was a pitch black night, with a wind blowing up from the ocean and the stars blotted out by black clouds. About 9 o'clock the new German liner New York anchored off Quarantine, with its light outlining it sharply against the Brooklyn shore.

The New York stopped for the customs inspection, but another vessel, hiding behind the liner, did not stop. Ensign Duke noticed this boat creeping along the Bay Ridge shore—a salt-caked, dirty vessel, with only two lights burning dimly in the darkness. She was the British freighter Greypoint, renamed the Economy for its rum-running escapade. She kept right on past Quarantine, up the Narrows toward the upper bay. Ensign Duke, who had a "hunch" that rum-runners might try to slip by over the week-end, grew suspicious.

"It had that rum-runner look," he explained yesterday. "You'd think they would be wise and paint their boats, but they always pick out the worst old tubs for their rum ships. I can tell one, almost every time."

Orders Freighter to Leave.

He steered his little gray launch in the wake of the freighter, and drew so near that he could read her name, "Economy." Then he called to her to heave to, but the mysterious vessel kept right on defiantly.

From the zig-zag course the freighter was taking, past Bay Ridge and then across toward New Jersey, Ensign Duke knew that here was a pilot who did not know New York harbor. Again he called, and this time he got an answer.

"I'm going to dock at Greenville," called some one on the ship. "If you want me, you can find me there. I don't intend to stop now."

And the black liquor ship, with its two lights flickering dimly, kept on. Ensign Duke plunged through the waves in his speedy little launch until he was about opposite the freighter's bow. Then he fired two shots as a warning. Still the freighter kept on.

By now the tiny Coast Guard launch was poking its nose into every wave, raising a shower of spray which drenched the three men inside. Already soaking wet and cold in his blue service uniform, Ensign Duke stood up on the bow while his steersman maneuvered closer to the freighter. At every wave the little Coast Guard launch lurched and rolled, and once it came close to striking the black, rusty sides of the liquor ship.

Clambers Aboard Alone.

Both vessels were still moving when Ensign Duke reached out, grabbed the freighter's rail and clambered aboard. He knew how defenseless he was, with only three

Even Dead Men Must Obey German Police Regulations

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Co. By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 4.—Even dead men have to obey police regulations under the still flourishing bureaucratic system of the German Government.

The widow of Erich Waldow, a Charlottenburg merchant who died recently, has just received the following notice from police headquarters:

"It has come to our notice that your deceased husband gave up his business in Windscheidstrasse, Charlottenburg, without reporting this fact. Kindly explain the neglect."

COOLIDGE AS COWBOY WINS WEST'S HEART

President Celebrates July 4 and His 55th Birthday in Full Riding Regalia.

SINGS WITH THE VISITORS

"Cal's Our Pal" Is the Day's Refrain—President Defers Mounting Gift Horse.

From a Staff Correspondent of The New York Times.

RAPID CITY, S. D., July 4.—In typical Western fashion Calvin Coolidge today celebrated the nation's 151st natal day, his fifty-fifth birthday and the fifth birthday that he has occupied the office of President of the United States.

In an environment truly representative of the progressive and vigorous West, he suppressed his natural reserve and became a part of the country. He showed a new personality to those who came from the hills, the cowboys of Montana, the Boy Scouts from Custer and the thousands who stood on the fringe of his lawn watching him throwing himself into the life of the plains.

He won the West by his genuine participation in the celebration planned for him by its people; at least he won those who gathered about him and saluted him as "Cal, our pal."

The cowboys and the tourists who gathered about the lawn and fringed the roadway encircling the Summer White House saw in Mr. Coolidge as he came upon the porch at 1:30 and greeted them a different President from the one who later entered into the day's events. He appeared first dressed in a blue suit and wearing a straw hat, and he said good-bye to his guests at the end of the day wearing a cowboy outfit—chaps, a red shirt, blue bandanna around his neck, "ten-gallon hat," spurs and boots. Thus dressed he mingled with the crowd, patted his gift horse but did not mount, although urged by the Boy Scouts to do so.

Sheds His Presidential Reserve.

Mr. Coolidge started the day as President of the United States, dignified, reserved and retiring. When the cowboy band played "The Star-Spangled Banner," at 3 o'clock, he had become one of them, and they seemed satisfied that they had won not only his sympathy but his heart.

It was a colorful scene all afternoon as the cowboys in bright shirts and chaps played and cheered and the Boy Scouts made presentation of the horse and riding outfit to the President. But the last scene was the one that made the hit with the crowd.

Mingling with the cowboys, the President used their language and without restraint entered into the singing. He steeped himself in the atmosphere of the West and wrote a new chapter in his book "have faith in the masses" by becoming a citizen of the West.

The President's birthday celebration began when "Aunt Mary" Hisley, at 1:15 modestly ascended the steps and presented him with a sour-cream chocolate cake, which she had baked yesterday. The President thanked her and later insisted that she preside at the table while the birthday cakes were cut by him.

Mrs. Coolidge, dressed in white and carrying a bag presented to her by Sioux Indians, appeared on the porch and filmed the crowds with her movie picture camera. The President joined her and walked to the lawn, where the mounted Boy Scouts formed to the shape of a letter C. Preparatory to the presentation of horse and riding outfit, the cowboy band of Terry, Mont., played Western music.

The Rev. C. H. Loock, Scoutmaster, presented the horse, saying the West loved the President and hoped that he would enjoy the gift. Then Carl Loock, Richard Arnold and Roy Hayes, Scouts, in a neat speech, presented him with the outfit. Following this the Scouts shifted to the back of the scene and the band played, with Kourasy W. Johnson singing:

> You're invited to our blowout,
> Put on those chaperon and bandanna;
> And please remember that we are with you, Cal,
> With you and your gal.

Francis Hewitt in behalf of the cowboys presented Mrs. Coolidge with a bouquet and stood with her and the President while the cowboys and the scouts were received.

Passes the Cake Around.

The scene suddenly shifted; the Boy Scouts and cowboys seated themselves in a semi-circle, the President and Mrs. Coolidge returned to the house and came back with immense birthday cakes. These the President cut, with Mrs. Hadley and

GUNS STOP CONVICTS CLAMORING TO SAVE 3 BOYS WHO DROWN

Six of 1,200 Men in Yard at Sing Sing Volunteer, but Guards Bar Way.

INMATES WEEP FOR YOUTHS

Holiday Spirit in Prison Dimmed—One Missing Canoeist Thought to Be From New York.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, N. Y., July 4.—The sense of duty of guards in Sing Sing Prison held 1,200 convicts helpless while three unidentified young canoeists fought a fifteen-minute losing battle against drowning in the Hudson River off the gray walls of the penitentiary today.

The inmates were in the prison yard for early morning exercise when the frail craft and its passengers came uncertainly down the river, whipped to patches of whitecaps by a fresh wind. The canoe overturned, and with shouts the three men went into the water.

There was an instinctive movement in the gray-clad ranks of the convicts toward rescue, but the rifles of the keepers came up suggestively. Eager themselves to save the struggling men, the guards had learend fro experience that even in the work of rescue some of the prisoners might break for liberty. They had been ordered never to relax vigilance, and orders were orders. Faced with the problem of choosing between letting the prisoners attempt to save the three men, or holding them back of the twelve-foot iron fence, they elected to follow the latter course.

Warden Exonerates Guards.

Major Lewis E. Lawes, warden of the prison, expressed regret tonight that word of the accident had not reached him promptly. He exonerated the armed sentries, pointing out that the law gave them no leeway even in an emergency and said that he was the only official of the prison authorized by law to exercise discretion in such a situation. He said one of the canoeists had gone down for the last time fifteen feet from the end of the pier where guards and convicts looked on. He said that had he known in time he would have permitted some of the stronger convicts to make an attempt at rescue.

The accident had a profound effect on the inmates of the prison, ranging from lifers to short-time men, and, Warden Lawes said, some of them wept. Many of them were unable to eat at dinner time, although the Fourth of July is one of the three days in the year when a chicken dinner is served.

"Everybody around here feels sad about it," said the Warden. "All of the inmates were anxious to do something to help. I understand a dozen of them begged to be allowed to risk swimming out to the canoe. Some of them cried at the dock. The officers had to threaten to shoot them to hold them back.

"I do not blame the officers. They could not, of course, take the responsibility of letting any prisoner, who might be permitted to go into the river, either to escape or to be drowned himself in trying to do something for the distressed man.

"The keepers hurried around trying to get ropes and trying to get a boat. There was no boat to be had.

No Boat at Prison.

"They sent [illegible] word to me, but I regret that I didn't learn of it in time. It might have been too late to save two of the lads, but the third one, I think, could have been rescued. He got within fifteen feet of the dock and then became exhausted and went down. They put the situation up to me too late. We have no boat here. We certainly ought to have one.

"The water was awfully rough when the three men went out of the canoe. One of the unfortunate fellows was trying to save another one who evidently could not swim. The lad who could swim kept shoving his helpless companion up onto the overturned canoe. Every time he would be washed off he would push him back on again. The third lad was trying to make shore in the rough water. The two sticking to the canoe went down from sheer exhaustion, and the third soon followed them to death.

"The men, who were mere youths, according to the information supplied to me, came down the river from the direction of Croton Point, north of the prison. Their cries were first heard when they were opposite the north end of the prison property. They kept calling for help and shouting that they were drowning."

Fully three-quarters of Sing Sing's population was in the exercise yard which slopes down to the river edge. A pier juts out from the yard and about ten feet from the stringpiece there is an iron fence built in 1877, which is twelve feet in height and extends 200 feet along the water front. Seven guards were on duty between the fence and the end of the pier.

When the canoe was about 300 feet from the pier it turned over suddenly and the men began their fight for life. The wind and the tide were

PARIS, July 4.—If it had not been for the fog and a temporary affection of our compass there would have been nothing to it.

We had a good plane. Our motors never gave us any trouble. Not once during the whole flight did I have to crawl out on the wings to wipe the engine. That, besides relieving Acosta, was to have been part of my job when Commander Byrd kindly asked me to go along.

But those engines needed no wiping nor fixing. They would have landed us right at Paris if the fog had not interfered. During the last part of the trip I piloted the plane. It was up to me to find Le Bourget or some other place to land.

For the kind of landing we made I take full responsibility. I believe it was a good landing, considering that I had to land with a land plane on the sea, something which is not ordinarily done.

Gets No Thrills Out of Flying.

Why did we not land on land? Every one is asking that question. It could not be done. When you are flying you cannot attempt to land before you are sure of what is under you. In that fog I could not be sure of anything.

People seem to be surprised that I did not see the Eiffel Tower. No, I did not see it, and I was mighty glad that I didn't see it. I should not have liked to shake hands with the Eiffel Tower before knowing it was there.

Everybody is talking about it having been a thrilling flight. I am not accustomed to writing articles. I am a Norwegian with only my first citizenship papers and as yet I cannot express myself well in English.

But the truth is that I do not get that "thrilled" stuff of the people who talk about flying. I never get any "thrills" out of flying. It is no different to me from driving a motor car, except that personally I prefer flying. I think it is safer.

Flight One of Dullest and Most Monotonous.

So far as this flight across the ocean is concerned, it was one of the dullest and most monotonous I have ever been on. Fog, fog, fog. You could not see anything. I got tired of it.

Anyway, it is wrong for people to get into their heads the idea that flying is a circus stunt, thrilling and dangerous. What people should learn is that flying is a safe way to travel, one of the safest there is.

I used to fly planes full of dynamite across Hudson Bay on construction work for the Canadian Government. I felt much safer doing it in a plane than I should have felt in a railroad car. My friends up there in the Canadian woods used to warn me that if I ever fell my plane and I would be mistaken for the aurora borealis, but I never had a crash.

Twice I jumped from a high altitude with a parachute. But I did that for fun. There was nothing wrong with the plane. I have flown mail planes, passenger and dynamite planes, and my experiences convinces me that flying is nowhere as dangerous as a lot of things foolish people do on earth every day of the week.

"Simple as Eating Pie," but for Fog.

I am only 27 years old. I cannot say what is coming to me in the future and I knock wood when I say it, but so far I can say that the years of my life which have been the least dangerous have been my flying years. Certainly they have been much less perilous than the year I spent as a soldier in the Norwegian Army, especially during the war, when Norway did not know whether she would stay neutral or not.

On this flight across the ocean, if we had had good weather the whole business would have been as simple as eating a piece of pie. There would not have been anything to talk about except that we left and arrived according to schedule.

When we left New York I expected an even break with the weather. Colonel Lindbergh had it. But we did not have it. It was raining even when we started. But that was nothing. We could stand the rain, and during the first five hours, or practically until we reached Nova Scotia, we could not complain.

All Ready to Crawl Out on the Wings.

I sat in the rear compartment with Commander Byrd so that the plane would not be nose-heavy. We had on board a big load of gasoline in cans. Until we could empty some of PARIS, July 4.—To put it mildly, I have been astonished by the reception given to us by the French people.

When Mr. Wanamaker, Bennett and I first conferred about our proposed transatlantic flight, our principal reasons for attempting it were the promotion of international good-fellowship and the progress of aviation.

Lindbergh made a remarkable flight and we really were delighted that he got to Paris ahead of us, because he did more for international amity than it would have been possible for us to do. Then Chamberlin and Levine's flight did still more for international good-fellowship, so that I felt that as far as such relations were concerned our flight would be an anti-climax and that all we could hope to do would be to accomplish a little toward bringing about transatlantic and long-distance flying.

Therefore we were tremendously surprised when we reached Paris by train from Caen at 12:20 on the morning of July 2 to find a wildly enthusiastic greeting.

Feared Injury to Welcoming Crowd.

It was with great difficulty we got through the crowd to our automobiles, and yet the people were, I believe, so happy that we were safe that they only wanted to give a visible demonstration of their joy.

When we finally got into our automobiles we could not use the engines for fear of running over some one. The crowd was jammed against the cars and a dozen policemen hanging on to the sides of the automobiles could not keep the people back.

The crowd itself pushed the automobiles along. I was extremely apprehensive for fear some persons would get mashed. This did happen, although the injuries caused were minor.

The glass in one of the cars was broken. At one time our car was nearly pushed over and I was greatly worried for fear it would fall on some of the people and injure them seriously.

I was greatly pleased by the expressions of the people and the ingenuous, sincere enthusiasm and joy which have been apparent from their countenances, without the shouting and shoving.

Seeing "The Heart of France."

I was seeing the heart of France in such a way as would be impossible under ordinary circumstances, and as I had never seen it before.

Nor shall I as long as I live forget the reception we got at Ver-sur-Mer. They took us into their homes, gave us dry clothes and warm food. The spirit with which they received us was remarkable for its good fellowship and gentle hospitality.

They were most eager and enthusiastic about helping us, but in being of service to us and showing us kindness they were

AMERICAN DINNER AT NIGHT

There French Leaders Join in the Tributes—Chamberlin and Levine Share in Honors.

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 4.—America's transatlantic fliers, Commander Byrd, Lieutenant Bert Acosta, Lieutenant Balchen and Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, held the spotlight today in a Fourth of July celebration marked with a spontaneous enthusiasm by the thousands of French and American participants such as Paris has not witnessed since Independence Day, 1917, when on the arrival of the first battalion of the American Expeditionary Force the French Government proclaimed it a national holiday in France.

The remarkable change in sentiment from last year's observance by a determined few of both nations, who would not admit that a shadow could fall across the clear understanding of the two countries and who watched with tear-dimmed eyes a few days later the tragic demonstration of France's veterans led by the poor human wrecks of war mutilated, parading against the debt agreement, was undoubtedly wrought by the admiration which the American aviators, led by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, had aroused in France for their achievements and, by reflection, for their country.

America and Fliers Cheered.

Large crowds gathered wherever the airmen went today. They took part in many services and functions and everywhere they were greeted with shouts of "Vivent les Aviateurs Américains," inevitably followed by cries of "Vive l'Amérique." These excited and incoherent shouts of the people found more articulate expression in speeches celebrating the tenth anniversary of the United States' participation in the war by officials and individuals who praised America's air prowess and gave unstinted praise to the United States.

Only once throughout the day the unpleasant topic of war debts, which in the past twenty-four months has been a terrifying spectre over every Franco-American ceremony, was mentioned and that by an American. Charles H. Hicks, Commander of the Paris Post of the American Legion, speaking at the Seeger statue to the American volunteers, appealed to Americans to preserve the spirit which blossomed with Lindbergh through the coming Legion convention, "by refraining completely from discussion of all questions which might give rise to misunderstanding." The suggestion was greeted with cheers and with smiles, as if the thought of such a thing seemed once again impossible.

Visit to Lafayette Tomb.

The day's ceremonies opened, as does every Fourth of July in Paris, with a pilgrimage to the tomb of the Marquis de La Fayette in Picpus Cemetery, this time headed by Sheldon Whitehouse, Chargé d'Affaires in the absence of Ambassador Herrick, whose name repeatedly cropped up throughout the day, when he was singled out as a man who turned the tide of French opinion, who saw the proper moment and succeeded in restoring to full favor the waning spirit of Franco-American friendship.

At the next ceremony, before the Volunteers' Monument, the aviators first appeared when Commander Byrd and Lieutenant Balchen stood in the places of honor. The statue, representing Alan Seeger, the American soldier and poet killed in the French Foreign Legion, on a pedestal, with a French and an American soldier clasping hands beneath, is framed with towering chestnut trees and shrubbery, making a splendid setting. The approach to the statue was banked with flowers and wreaths and lined by standard-bearers holding the flags of the numerous famous divisions and units in the great war.

Flags of Famous Units.

Among these flags were those of the Foreign Legion, the Lafayette Escadrille, the American Volunteer Flying Corps, the American Field Service Ambulance Corps. The color guard of the American Legion and blue-uniformed young women carrying the flags of the Legion Auxiliary were also there.

These banners dipped and inclined in unison before the statue as the Legion bugler sounded taps.

The ceremony was under the auspices of the Association of American Volunteers With the French Army, presided over by J. W. Ganson, President of the association. Among the speakers were Sheldon Whitehouse, who recalled the mutilation last year of this statue by a Russian student, Jarvenko, in the spirit of the Soviets, "working for the end of all governments," and then thanked the French war blinded for their noble gesture in repairing the statue with funds collected among their members.

Paul Doumer Among Speakers.

Paul Doumer, President of the Senate, was present, and several others spoke, including Louis Delsol, President of the Municipal Council. But one of the most moving addresses was made by George Scapini, a blinded veteran and President of the War Blind Association.

"It is with the same emotion and the same respect that I come each year to salute the memory of the American volunteers," he said, and afterward he asked to be led to shake hands with Commander Byrd, whom with a smile he described as "the first American Bird to reach Europe."

The blinded soldier grasped Commander Byrd's hand and shook it warmly, murmuring something about his pleasure at having touched his hand and his regret at being unable to see the valiant American. He was then led to shake hands with Lieutenant Balchen, and the stolid Norseman was visibly affected.

Byrd Visits Mme. Nungesser.

After this ceremony Commander Byrd, accompanied by Mr. Whitehouse, Captain White of the embassy, and Herbert Adams Gibbons, Rodman Wanamaker's representative, went to call upon Mme. Nungesser, who has been two months without news of her famous son since he flew toward New York. Commander Byrd was deeply moved as he presented a large bouquet of flowers to the gray-haired woman, who attempted to smile while struggling against tears. She bravely told Commander Byrd that she still hopes for her son and related how she had followed the bulletins of Commander Byrd's flight, so like that of her son, "the first to fly the Atlantic."

Commander Byrd's eyes were moist as he gravely assented and told the mother of the uninterrupted searches going on for Nungesser and Coli. He also informed her that funds being raised in America were at her disposal, to which she replied that she was prepared to leave at any moment for America to rejoin her son.

In taking leave Commander Byrd assured Mme. Nungesser that the women of America would proudly welcome the mother of the French air hero.

Bleriot Entertains Six Fliers.

A distinguished gathering attended a luncheon given by Louis Bleriot in his apartment in Avenue Kleber, near the Arc de Triomphe, in honor of the fliers. Chamberlin and Levine were cheered with Balchen, Byrd and Acosta when they arrived by motor car and later when they appeared on a balcony to salute the applauding crowd of several thousand who waited throughout the lunch hour to watch the aviators leave.

Among the guests were André Tardieu, Minister of Public Works; Georges Leygues, Minister of Marine; Minister of Commerce Maurice Bokanowski, former Under Secretary for the Air Layrez Eynac, Louis Loucheur, former Finance Minister; André Citroen, the automobile manufacturer; Mr. and Mrs. Whitehouse, Mme. Bleriot, Mrs. Chamberlin and Mrs. Levine.

At the close of the luncheon M. Bleriot, who was the only speaker, congratulated Commander Byrd and his companions on making "the first commercial transatlantic flight." He recalled his friendship for Colonel Lindbergh and greeted Levine as the first passenger. M. Bleriot praised the careful preparations for the Byrd flight and concluded by saying:

"What is most to be admired about Commander Byrd's transatlantic effort is that these four men, shut in as if in a tomb, could continue through the long hours to maintain themselves as a part of the world which they could not see. France cannot but be happy to witness such progress in aviation, and for my own part I am personally proud that this French conception of flying the ocean with a land monoplane, which I have advocated for the past twenty years, has brought about this victory."

For ten minutes following the luncheon the inhabitants of the great apartment building, leaning from balconies and applauding, were treated to the rare comedy of watching the fliers with M. Bleriot and the other notables being photographed and filmed in all imaginable postures, groups and poses by a phalanx of nearly fifty photographic operators representing many nations.

In the afternoon big limousines with beflagged radiators took the airmen through the streets, whose nearly every balcony bristled with red, white and blue, to the hospital where former Ambassador Jules Jusserand lies recuperating from an illness. The diplomat who championed friendship with America for twenty years was greatly touched by the visit.

Earlier the aviators paid a visit to the offices of the morning newspaper Le Matin, which by arrangement with THE NEW YORK TIMES, has been publishing Commander Byrd's personal narratives of the flight in France. Escorted by a group of American volunteers and the Legion Color Guard, Commander Byrd, Noville, Acosta and Balchen, with M. Bleriot, M. Leygues, M. Whitehouse and others who attended the Bleriot luncheon, were conducted to the Salle des Fetes, where they were received by the editors and publishers and presented to numerous representatives of French aviation, including Colonel Antoinat, Commandant Pierre Weiss and other fliers from Le Bourget.

In response to the insistent acclaim from a large crowd gathered along the boulevards outside, the airmen appeared upon the Matin balcony to receive a long ovation.

Honored at American Banquet.

France's war heroes, Marshal Foch and General Gouraud, and leading statesmen, including Paul Doumer, President of the Senate; M. Bokanowski, Minister of Public Works; former President Millerand and Ambassador Claudel, joined upward of 1,000 Americans in paying homage to the fliers at the annual American Chamber of Commerce banquet in the Hotel Palais d'Orsay.

The entire assemblage rose, applauding, when the fliers entered the banquet hall, cheering fully ten minutes before they would be seated.

Here again the feeling of refreshed vigor the flights had given to Franco-American relations dominated the speeches, which for the first time were conveyed to the large audience by the use of loud speakers and an attempt was made to broadcast the fliers' addresses to America. Speeches by Commander Byrd and Chamberlin reflected this sentiment.

"Although we thought that Colonel Lindbergh's very dramatic flight would detract from the enthusiasm of our reception," declared Commander Byrd, "we were glad he arrived first. He did great things to revive the friendship of France and America, which we learned to our benefit, even in the little village of Ver-sur-Mer, in Caen and here in Paris.

"When he returned to the United States he told President Coolidge that the message he brought from France to America was one of friendship and affection.

"I am perhaps taking too much on myself, but I wish to thank the people of France for the wonderful reception to Colonel Lindbergh and wish to return to France the affectionate greetings sent with Colonel Lindbergh to America."

Chamberlin, announcing that making a speech was more terrifying to him than flying the Atlantic, discoursed upon the esprit de corps among aviators regardless of nationality, and, explaining that it was the custom among the fliers of America to drink a silent toast to any comrade who failed in an enterprise undertaken, he asked the spectators to stand and drink to Nungesser and Coli.

Colby Forecasts Atlantic Bookings.

Bainbridge Colby declared that while the flights of Lindbergh, Byrd and Chamberlin were a challenge to the professional aviators, Levine's achievement was a challenge "to you, to me, and to every one" and forecasts the time when "we will be booking transatlantic tours by airplane."

The evening would be notable regardless of all its exceptional attractions if only for the fact that on this occasion Marshal Foch made a speech. The allied commander and General Gouraud shared prolonged ovations during a review of the war events by Benjamin Conner, President of the Chamber, in his opening address.

Foch, who can seldom be persuaded to do more than bow, made an extremely long statement for him, which, as recorded verbatim, was as follows:

"On this glorious day I send my cordial remembrance to my loyal comrade, General Pershing, and the valorous soldiers whom I myself saw accomplishing their task. I hope they will come in as great numbers as possible when they hold their convention here next September."

Sheldon Whitehouse in concluding his address, which included a telegram from Ambassador Herrick, offered a toast to the absent Ambassador.

The Paris Municipal Council at a meeting today decided that the signal honor of a reception at the Hotel de Ville, which was first accorded to a non-official representative of a foreign country when Colonel Lindbergh came, would be extended to the crews of the Columbia and the America. The date for this ceremony has not definitely been fixed, but will probably be Thursday or Saturday.

Tomorrow Commander Byrd and his companions will lunch at the Ministry of Marine as the guests of Georges Leygues and in the afternoon will be honored by the aviators of France at a reception at the Aero Club.

Byrd Calls on Marshal Foch.

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, July 4.—During the day Commander Byrd called upon Marshal Foch, who showed keen interest in hearing about the America's flight.

"It was one of the great feats in history," he said.

"There is no one in the world I would rather hear say that than you," Commander Byrd replied.

BALCHEN'S VIVID TALE OF DIVE TO THE SEA

By LIEUTENANT BERNT BALCHEN.

them the matter of equilibrium was something we had to think about.

I had all my tools right handy so as to be able to climb out on the wings at the first sign of motor trouble. That would not have been hard to do, because the wings had catwalks along which I could crawl safely, no matter how fast or how high we were traveling. But those three motors behaved themselves. They hummed right along.

Between Nova Scotia and Newfoundland our weather luck changed. All the rotten weather in the Atlantic seemed to be chasing up our way and closing us in. Commander Byrd told me to take the wheel and I did. It took me about half an hour to pilot the plane into an altitude where we would not be bothered by banks of clouds. The only thing to do under those conditions was to keep the bad weather under us. But some of those cloud banks drifted as high as 3,000 feet.

Flew Nineteen Hours Above Mist and Rain.

There was nothing dangerous about the situation so long as there was no necessity of landing. I was accustomed to that sort of flying. I saw no reason to worry.

For nineteen hours we flew that way, staying as high as we could above the fog, mist and rain. In other words, we flew not through the bad weather during those hours but above it. At intervals of three or four hours Acosta and I relieved each other.

We were not thinking of sleep or food. As a matter of fact we never felt sleepy or hungry. I admit that I ate more than the others. Some French papers, which were translated for me, said that I ate a whole roast chicken. What had that to do with the flight? I ate it not because I was hungry but because I like chicken. They put four roast chickens on board. I supposed that they were to be eaten. I ate mine. That was all there was to that.

"Then It Grew Dark and Weather Grew Worse."

Toward the last of those nineteen hours over the bad weather Lieutenant Noville managed to catch a message telling us that it was clear weather near the surface. We dove through a bank of clouds and ran along for 400 or 500 miles with the wind on our beam.

Over Brest we saw the sunset and for an hour or so we had some decent weather. Then it grew dark and the weather grew worse. Clouds jammed in on us from every direction. Aside from clouds we had to contend with fog, which blotted the coast of France out of our sight.

The greatest difficulties of flying will be solved the day some one invents a light that will penetrate the clouds and let the aviator know where he is.

But to add to our troubles, our earth induction compass all of a sudden went dippy. I believe it was some magnetic affection outside the compass. We had not much gas left—enough, perhaps, for three hours. Lieutenant Noville shot a message by radio to that effect.

Realized He Must Finish the Flight.

I was at the wheel. I realized that it was I who would have to finish the flight.

Now I do not believe in taking any risks. All my experience as a flier has taught me that the big point about flying is to land your plane and passengers safely. I believe in doing that every time. Any fool can crash and smash up a plane, but a good pilot should land gently.

This business of calling a man a hero of the air just because he has killed himself is something I have never been able to understand. I have no ambition to be that kind of hero.

When I saw what we were up against, with fog all around us and only a few gallons of gasoline left in our tanks, I thought it was time to think of landing. In my opinion there was no use trying to land at Paris if we could not see Paris. We dove through the clouds and cruised around at an altitude of between 1,000 and 1,500 feet.

Thought He Saw Solitary Flash of Light.

It seemed to me that I caught a flash of light on our right wing. It was probably the flare of the Mont Valerian beacon. It did not repeat, and again we found ourselves flying around in the pitch dark. We might just as well have been blindfolded, for all we could see of land or ocean.

From somewhere out of that darkness Lieutenant Noville caught a message telling us that it was misty and nasty below, I should say it was. But what kind of ceiling were we traveling over? That is what I should have liked to know. I could not tell. I could only guess.

One guess I made was that there might be a lot of roofs and steeples under us. I did not like the idea of landing on that kind of field. I had to think not only of ourselves but of the other people we might kill if we came down some place where we were not expected.

We must have been thirty miles from Paris at this time. Perhaps we were nearer or further away, or even directly over it. I could not tell anything about it. We were cruising around, blind.

"A Place to Land Was All We Were After."

Following the course set by Commander Byrd, we headed away from Paris. A place to land was all we were after. To think of anything else when our gas was running so low would have meant running the risk of killing the whole bunch.

Looking over my shoulder, I could see that Commander Byrd and Lieutenant Noville were exchanging messages. It was a conference. Commander Byrd finally passed a message to me to land on water as soon as we should come to it. Our course took us to water. We could tell that by the light from a lighthouse.

We threw out some carbide flares. By the light they gave us we could see dimly the shore line and the beam of the beacon of Ver-sur-Mer. Well, I decided that that was as good a place as we could hope to find. There was water beneath and a shore several hundred yards away.

I then had to do something I had never done before in all my experience as a flier. I had to land a land plane in the sea. I have landed many seaplanes in the sea, but never land planes. That was a new one on me

Pulled Out by Neck, Told Flight Was Over.

I slipped down gently enough and took off speed, but the moment we hit the surface our landing gear left us. With the weight of the motors the plane went nose under and tail up, and Acosta flew out the window like a shot. I do not know what made him do it, because the landing, in my opinion, was a gentle one.

I stuck to the wheel until I felt the plane strike bottom. We were in about ten feet of water at the time. When the plane struck bottom I thought it was time to crawl out. As a matter of fact it was Commander Byrd who pulled me out by the back of my neck and told me the flight was finished.

He and Lieutenant Noville were yelling for Acosta in every direction. I was afraid I had lost a passenger, and was certainly glad to see Acosta's head come up, finally, on the other side of the plane. I did not lose any one.

There seemed to be nothing wrong with my landing except that I got everybody wet. But that is to be expected if you land in the sea with a land plane.

Since then we have learned that Acosta had a light fracture of the collarbone. But he did not know that until the doctor told him. Acosta himself told me today that it was not giving him any pain at all. I am glad that things ended as well as they did. They could have ended worse.

Ocean Air Service a Certainty, He Says.

Commander Byrd is in a better position than I am to discuss the scientific elements of the flight. I shall not even attempt it. One thing, however, I should like to say. Transatlantic flying on a big scale, with freight and passenger-carrying airplanes, is going to come without a doubt. Just a one-way trip, however, does not prove much. It is necessary to make a round trip.

But there is no reason to believe that flying from Paris to New York is impossible. Captains Nungesser and Coli must have run into some rotten luck. That was all. Give me the plane and the time and I'll do it.

Even with prevailing winds against them, aviators flying from Paris to New York could not encounter worse conditions than those which we had to meet coming from New York to Paris.

On the basis of a contrary wind most of the way, a trip from Paris to New York would mean enough gas to last about forty-three hours. We stayed in the air about forty-two, and most of that time we were over bad weather.

Glad of Trip, "Though Not Very Exciting."

In crossing the Atlantic, of course, the question arises of whether it is better to pass two days or two nights over the water. I myself would like to do it in two nights and one day rather than in two days and one night. Flying at night, no matter what the weather conditions, is not dangerous so long as you have daylight in which to land. When you land, it is important to be able to see where you are landing.

I am glad I had this experience, even though it was not very exciting. What interests me now is the flight to the South Pole, which I hope to do with Commander Byrd in several months.

I like to fly with Commander Byrd for the same reason that I like to fly with Captain Amundsen. I like men who are not only fliers but also explorers. Being a Norwegian, I have the blood of sailors and explorers in me. I like to go where people have never been before, and I like to go by air because it is a fast and safe route to some place that is far away.

Balchen's Debt to Byrd and How He Paid It.

Lieutenant Bernt Balchen, whose thrilling story of the last hours of blind flight of the America through the darkness, culminating in the safe landing in the water off the French coast, is printed above, showed in this expedition his loyalty and devotion to Commander Byrd, who brought him here a year ago from Spitzbergen after the North Pole flight.

Balchen, an excellent pilot and mechanician, a prominent sportsman in his own country of Norway, where he held boxing championships and took part in ski races, went to Spitzbergen to aid the Amundsen expedition. He was attracted by Commander Byrd's personality, however, and helped the American North Pole flier whenever he had an opportunity after his other work was done.

Lieutenant Balchen incurred some unpopularity among his own people as a result, and Commander Byrd offered to bring him to the United States. Since then Balchen has made an unusual reputation for himself among pilots in this country as a pilot and air navigator.

He handles the big Fokker planes with unusual skill, and was test pilot for Anthony Fokker for part of the past year. That skill and his calm courage probably saved the lives of all on the America when he dropped through the night to the sea.

thoughtful in a most intelligent way. They put us to bed right away and did not let any one disturb us. Nor did they bother us with a lot of questions. They held back their curiosity until we had some rest and food.

I shall go back there some day, and I am sure I shall be among friends whom I will be very glad to see again.

Great Public Interest in Flight.

Since we have been in Paris we have been overwhelmed with kindnesses and attention, but what has astonished and pleased me beyond measure is that every one seems to have taken the greatest interest in our flight.

They seem to have read every word that has been published about it and they show a most intelligent interest, asking many questions which show that they have studied our problems. That to me demonstrates the great interest this country has in aviation.

The President of France, M. Doumergue, former Ambassador Jusserand, Marshal Foch and the Ministers of the Cabinet showed that they knew about our flight in great detail; but just so the butler who looks after me, and so did the taxi drivers. In fact, every one we have met from every walk of life has shown the same sort of interest.

When we passed through the cheering crowds I did not take the matter personally. They were showing their great interest in the wonderful new science of aviation and they were cheering the American flag which we carried.

We were simply the standard bearers of the moment. The French people were given a chance to show their real affection for America, which I believe has always been in them, and it took something of a dramatic nature such as the transatlantic flights to make it show itself.

Every taxicab driver, who, the last time I was here, I thought had overcharged me, would not let me pay for riding this time. I am very glad indeed to have had this opportunity to see the real Frenchman, and I believe that one of the happiest recollections of my life will be the experience I am now going through.

This is the fourth of the series of articles which Commander Byrd is writing exclusively for The New York Times describing his flight across the Atlantic, the thrilling experience of himself and his three companions while lost in the fog over France, their descent into the sea, and later his views on aviation's progress and future. The fifth article is expected in time for tomorrow's issue.

STAMPS ARE MISSING FROM AMERICA'S MAIL

Letters Delivered in Paris Without Canceled Stamps, Valued at $10 by Collectors.

PARIS, July 4.—The mail which was brought to France aboard the America and was rescued from the water-filled plane as the first act of the fliers was being delivered in Paris and France yesterday and today.

Curiously, this mail is believed the first on record to be delivered at its destination entirely free from fines, though bearing no postage stamps of any kind. Practically every recipient of one of these letters complains that the stamps have been removed, while the cancellation at Ver-sur-Mer has been placed on the envelope along with the New York cancellation.

The postal authorities advance the theory that the letters were water-soaked and that the stamps came off, but by a strange coincidence most of these letters were otherwise fairly dry.

In the Paris stamp market, which for days has been greatly excited over these stamps, which have been quoted at $10 each, it is surmised that some astute collector with access to the postoffice succeeded in getting a corner on the Byrd stamp market.

BRITISH FLIER HOPES TO LAND AT BATTERY

SOUTHAMPTON, England, July 4 (AP).—Captain F. T. Courtney, who may spend the next week-end flying the Atlantic in a seaplane, now plans a night landing off the Battery, New York City. Arrangements are being made for searchlights and other guiding beacons for him in New York Harbor.

He will be accompanied by F. W. M. Downer as navigator and radio operator and R. F. Little as mechanician. They expect to hop off from some spot on the Irish coast Friday or Saturday, weather permitting. The first descent on the other side will be off Newfoundland. After refueling they will take the air again for New York.

Their flying boat, driven by two engines of 450 horsepower each, will carry 1,000 gallons of gasoline, giving it a range of 2,600 miles.

First reports were that Captain Courtney would attempt a non-stop flight from England to the United States and that if successful he would return by air. He recently flew his plane, a Dornier Wal metal seaplane, from the Dornier works at Friedrichshafen, Germany, to England.

'LINDY' FAVORITE NAME OF NEW CORPORATIONS

Sobriquet of Flying Colonel Considered Lucky—Fewer New Companies This Year.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, July 4.—As a result of Lindbergh's flight to Europe a dozen or more companies engaging in various enterprises from a laundry to dressmaking quickly seized the name of "Lindy" under which to incorporate and popularize their business. This was revealed today when Robert Moses, Secretary of State, gave out the figures of new corporations for the first six months of the year.

It was shown that during the period a total of 13,845 companies were chartered in the State, or twenty-three less than during the same period in 1926. The first five months showed an increase over the same months a year ago, but last month witnessed a slump in the number of stock companies as compared to June of 1926, the decrease being 173 companies.

The decrease of thirty-three companies for the first six months is not considered of great importance and is attributed to many things. Last year a total of 25,888 stock companies were incorporated in the State during the twelve months, and judging from the record of the first five months this year the 1927 total will no doubt equal, if not exceed, that of 1926.

In June 2,160 companies were chartered, and of this number 1,838 gave New York City as their principal office. The other 322 were scattered among the various counties in the State.

No let-up is noticeable in the number of real estate and construction companies being formed, these being confined to a large extent to New York City and Westchester and Nassau Counties where large real estate developments are under way. In counties having large cities, however, a number of real estate and construction companies are incorporating each month. Real estate and garment making featured the purposes of many of the new concerns, there being 73 of the former.

PARIS, July 4.—In recognition of their work in propagating a spirit of friendship between France and America, the National Union of Evadés de Guerre (Escaped War Prisoners) have elected Raymond Orteig and Howard Houston of Philadelphia as honorary members.

Mr. Orteig was thus honored, M. Bron, Vice President of the organization, announced, because "of his work in encouraging transatlantic flights and thereby bringing home to France a knowledge of American valor and her noble devotion to our country."

Mr. Houston was honored for his "splendid aid in France's reconstruction." He rebuilt the entire village of Arcis le Ponsart, near Fismes, where his son was killed while with the American army during the war. A modern electrical installation and sewer system have been installed in the village by Mr. Houston and its church has been magnificently restored. Schools, nurseries for children and many other improvements have been constructed, the citation states.

The Union of Escaped Prisoners has just been recognized by the French Government. A special medal has been struck by the mint and numerous members will be decorated on July 14.

BYRD MAKES GIFTS TO FLIERS.

Presents Propeller to Chamberlin and Rafts to Droughin.

PARIS, July 4 (AP).—Commander Richard E. Byrd today presented one of the three propellers of his transatlantic plane America to Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine.

At the same time he presented his two collapsible rubber life rafts, to one of which he and his three companions probably owe their lives, to Maurice Droughin, the French aviator, who is now preparing for a flight to New York. One of these rafts can carry four persons, while the other carries two. Commander Byrd said that they could weather any sea.

Chamberlin and Levine have been using a German propeller in their plane Columbia since they smashed their original propeller on landing near Kottbus during their flight from New York to Germany.

LINDBERGH FLIES HERE FROM CANADA

ADMIRERS MAR HIS DINNER

Canadians Give Him a Warm Send-Off, Thousands Gathering to Watch.

In striking contrast to the manner in which he entered this city three weeks ago, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh slipped quietly into town late yesterday afternoon observed by only a few hundred persons who were at the Teterboro airport at Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., where he landed. Colonel Lindbergh flew his own plane, the Spirit of St. Louis, from Ottawa, Canada, in three hours and ten minutes flying time, a remarkably fast time for the distance.

The Colonel took off from Ottawa at 1:28 P. M., New York Daylight Saving Time, and spent forty minutes in flying over and about the Canadian capital before he pointed the nose of his ship for this city. He flew over the Adirondack Mountains and was sighted over the Teterboro airport a few minutes before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

As his landing place here had been kept secret only his personal representative, Captain Harry Bruno, and officials of the Atlantic Aircraft Corporation knew of his scheduled arrival. There were a few hundred people at the airport, the headquarters of the Fokker airplanes, who were making flights as passengers in the large Fokkers across the Hudson River and over the city.

Takes Pains to Avoid Crowds.

As soon as the Spirit of St. Louis landed it was recognized by those at the field and a rush for the plane followed. Captain Bruno and R. C. Noorduyn, Vice President of the Atlantic Aircraft Corporation, sped out on the field in an automobile and Colonel Lindbergh was taken to a hangar. From there he slipped out through a side door and with his hat pulled well down over his eyes jumped into Captain Bruno's machine and was driven to Edgewater and came across on the 125th Street Ferry. At Edgewater the Chief of Police facilitated his escape from crowds by letting the flying Colonel onto the ferry slip through a private entrance.

Captain Bruno said last night that Colonel Lindbergh will probably remain in the city for ten days or two weeks, putting the final touches to his book "We," which will shortly be published.

Almost Mobbed at Sands Point.

Last night Colonel Lindbergh was an unexpected guest at the Fourth of July dinner-dance at the Sands Point Casino, which was attended by 500 prominent residents of Long Island. The aviator arrived with his party at 8 o'clock and was quietly eating when the band leader suddenly announced his presence. The guests waited until the band had played the national anthem and then rose from their tables and made a dash for the flier.

Disconcerted by the rush of the crowd, Colonel Lindbergh fled through the front door, while some of the guests gave chase. On the lawn outside the Board of Governors of the Casino rescued the aviator from the crowd. They assured him that if he returned they would see that he finished his dinner in peace. Upon receiving these promises the aviator returned. He did not dance during the evening.

While Colonel Lindbergh remains in town mechanics from the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, builders of the Whirlwind engine with which the Spirit of St. Louis is equipped, will go over the engine. It has been run for ninety hours, carrying the Colonel across the Atlantic and on his flights from Washington to New York, to St. Louis and to Canada and back.

Gets Big Farewell From Ottawa.

From a Staff Correspondent of The New York Times.

OTTAWA, July 4.—With his ears ringing from still another Canadian ovation, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh left Ottawa in the Spirit of St. Louis at 1:28 o'clock this afternoon and soared away to the south bound for New York.

Colonel Lindbergh refused to say at what field he would land because of his fear that another crowd might gather and there would be insufficient protection to keep them out of danger. It had been understood here that he would fly back to St. Louis by way of Chicago, but he announced late last night he was going to New York. The purpose of his New York visit, he told a NEW YORK TIMES correspondent today, was to see to the finishing touches on his book telling of his voyage across the Atlantic.

Colonel Lindbergh stayed up much of last night talking with Major Lanphier, Commander of the First Pursuit Group of Selfridge Field, which has provided his air escort, and with other members of the army group. He stayed at the Chateau Laurier and rose late this morning.

For some time he chatted of commercial aviation with the American Minister, William Phillips. Major Lanphier and others, and just before his departure was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Phillips at an informal luncheon in their apartment at the Chateau Laurier. Major Lanphier and a few others were present.

The officials in charge of Lindbergh's activities here had endeavored to keep the hour of his departure a secret to prevent a jam at the field, but when Colonel Lindbergh emerged from the hotel at 11:30 the street was massed with people and the police had great difficulty in clearing a path for his car and the cars of his escort.

Mr. Phillips rode with him, and others went to the field to bid him good-bye, including Senator George P. Graham, Chairman of the Canadian Jubilee Committee; Charles Cowan, its Secretary, and Colonel F. Coghill, a veteran of the Princess Pats, who was in charge of the funeral procession yesterday for Lieutenant J. Thaddeus Johnson, killed on Lindbergh's arrival on Saturday.

Before leaving Colonel Lindbergh expressed gratification at the reception accorded him in the Canadian capital.

"I was very much pleased," he said. "It was wonderful."

Colonel Lindbergh's visit to Ottawa has been the least trying on his time and strength of any official visits that he has made since his conquest of the Atlantic. Most of the functions he attended were private and without speeches, and he spent much of the time quietly in the residence of the Prime Minister, W. L. Mackenzie King.

In the course of his stay here Colonel Lindbergh revealed a hitherto untold incident of his arrival in Paris. As the crowd surged around the Spirit of St. Louis on the field at Le Bourget, he said, a quick-witted man alongside him put Lindbergh's helmet on another man, put the other man's hat on Lindbergh's head and got him through the crowd. The unknown hero with Lindbergh's helmet was hoisted on the shoulders of the crowd and carried clear up to Ambassador Herrick, before whom he arrived, with his clothing in rags from the grasps of hysterical admirers.

Thousands Watch his Departure.

Several thousand Canadians lined the field at the Hunt Club, now named Lindbergh Field, when the American flier arrived there shortly after 1 o'clock. Six mounted policemen kept them behind an imaginary line in perfect order by making cavalry charges on the few who attempted to break over.

Lindbergh bade his friends here good-bye, climbed into his plane, tuned up and soon was high over the field. He sailed over Hull, Quebec, then turned and dipped and circled around the Memorial Tower of the Parliament House, then returned and soared over the field until the pursuit aviators were in the air.

Then Lindbergh headed straight south for New York. The pursuit group sped away directly for Selfridge Field, abandoning their earlier plan to stop at Toronto, in order to attend the funeral of Lieutenant

Mrs. Coolidge assisting. The movie picture men worked hard and insisted that the President make a picture. He took a small bite of the cake to lease them, but that did not satisfy them.

"Take a big piece," they shouted, and he bit off a piece that filled his mouth.

The President had sandwiches, coffee, ice cream and cakes passed around to the Scouts and cowboys and other guests.

"Cal's our pal," the cowboys shouted. The President smiled expansively as the Western baritone sang the Montana songs and kept shouting "he's our pal, is Cal."

The celebration lagged for a minute. The sun beat down on the lawn with sizzling heat and the cowboys were about to make ready to journey back into the cool hills. "Wait!" someone shouted as the President and Mrs. Coolidge left the group and returned to the house.

Dons the Western Attire.

In a few minutes the President returned. He had donned the regalia of the Far West—and appeared a citizen of the plains. The metamorphosis was as complete as it was rapid. Into this colorful setting, with cowboys in gay attire, with Boy Scouts mounted on horseback, the President came dressed with the gifts presented to him. He took only a few minutes to change from blue serge suit to a cowboy, a change made so quickly as to give William S. Hart and Tom Mix some excellent points in preparing their next scenario.

Booted and spurred, with flaming red shirt, with a dashing handkerchief of blue about his neck, fancy boots carrying silver spurs upon his heels, chaps about his legs, a belt around his waist, he mingled with the crowd. He led his horse about the lawn, but did not mount him.

Cheer leader Johnson of the band gave the Powder River cheer, made famous by the Ninety-first Division in the World War:

What's the greatest river? Powder River.
How wide is the greatest river? One mile wide.
How deep is the greatest river? One inch deep.
What kind of fish has the greatest river? White fish.
What river did you say? Powder River.

The President bowed and laughed as the cowboys repeated the cheer and rensng their song inviting him to Montana.

The crowd grew less dense. The gift mare, Kit, presented by the scouts, was led into the stable and President Coolidge slowly mounted the steps in his cowboy outfit. The cowboys shouted: "Cal and his gal; may God be their pal," and the first Western birthday for President Coolidge ended.

Tomorrow he will get another taste of the real West when he and Mrs. Coolidge attend the rodeo at Bellefourche.

Thus made into one of them, the President won a great personal triumph; but, regardless of whether he has won the West, the West, judged by today's celebration, has won him.

The map of the United States, with a candle bearing the name of the State and the signature of the Governor, was displayed on a table on the lawn, and the President pulled out the Western States to the cheers of the cowboys.

Before "Aunt Mary" returned to Rapid City Mrs. Coolidge sought her and said:

"I did not cut your birthday cake. I told the butler to put it in the pantry. I was afraid if we cut it out here we would not get a taste of it. My mother use to bake cold cream cakes and I have always liked them so much. We will eat it for supper."

Many Birthday Messages.

Cables congratulating the President on his birthday were received from rulers of the world, and many of the leading men in this country also sent felicitations. Scores of cards telling the President that the writers also had their birthdays on July 4 brought cheer to the Chief Executive celebrating his fifty-fifth birthday and that of the nation in the Black Hills Summer capital.

Some of the birthday congratulations expressed the hope that the President would have another term.

There were nearly 100 of such expressions urging the President to break his silence and accept the Republican nomination next year.

Mrs. Frederick B. Gilbert Jr. of 4,617 Trinity Place, Philadelphia, said:

"Hearty wishes for many happy years, likewise for a third term."

H. C. Harris of Highmore, S. D., said: "May the future bring you much joy and happiness and another term."

Helen Maxis Charloton of Chicago wrote:

"I am a little girl who also has a birthday on the glorious Fourth. I will be 10 years old. My home is in Chicago. I was over to Hammond, June 14, to see you and Mrs. Coolidge. Best wishes."

Mrs. A. B. Carter of Merrimac, Mass., Sarah E. Jones of Milwaukee and Mrs. Lena E. Tibbets of 228 Euclid Avenue, Lynn, Mass., sent cards along with many others, saying that they were born on July 4.

Harian Johnson of Bancroft, Neb., said:

"My birthday is on the same day. I will be 7. My daddy and grandpa all voted for you. I am going to vote for you, too."

Vivian Fritsch of Delray, Ill., wrote:

"My birthday and my sister's come on July 4. I am proud of the fact that my birthday occurs on the same day as the President of the United States."

This pathetic appeal brought an acknowledgment by telegraph from the President this morning:

"Happy birthday greetings from a shut-in who has been an invalid confined to bed for ten years. I should be very happy and joyful if you would be so kind as to acknowledge this message. Bernice Strieb, 549 Sixth Avenue, South Clinton, Iowa."

RAPID CITY, S. D., July 4.—"Aunt Mary" Holley, who baked the birthday cake for President Coolidge, thus describe her experiences:

"I had a day of days. I suddenly found myself the centre of a group, pleasantly received by President Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge. I never thought when I stayed away from church yesterday to make a modest sour-cream chocolate cake, the recipe of which I got from my Scotch grandmother, that I would become the centre of such festivities and nervously forced to aid the President in cutting his birthday cakes.

"I was very nervous as I rode out in the bus with the newspaper men. I kept thinking what I would say when I gave my cake to the President. The boys kept telling me, 'Don't be nervous Auntie, just be natural.'

"But I had never faced a President before and I kept looking over the hills for strength and words of inspiration.

"When I got to the Lodge and stood among others on the lawn I wanted to go back home. The President beckoned to a secret service man. He came to me and escorted me to the Lodge. I trembled. I forgot my little speech. I just told him that I wanted him and Mrs. Coolidge to have a taste of my sour cream cake on his birthday. He thanked me, talked about the hills.

Tells Mrs. Coolidge of Going West.

"He seemed interested in me. This gave me confidence, but I got more confidence from the smile and the handclasp of Mrs. Coolidge. She said that she had always liked sour cream cakes because her mother had made them so well. She told me about the books she had been reading, how she liked the Black Hills and asked me to come to see her again.

"I wanted to get away because I knew that they were eager to see their guests, the cowboys, Boy Scouts and my people, who had come from far and wide.

"But Mrs. Coolidge would not let me run away. She wanted to know how long I had lived here. I told her I had come from Washington, D. C., as a bride and had ridden in a stage coach from Pierre in 1882, at a time when the Indians were still attacking the whites.

"Finally I descended the steps happy and pleased that I had thought of baking a cake for the President of the United States. He invited me to be his guest and have ice cream and cake. I stood on the edge of the lawn, glad that my ordeal was over.

"The cowboys sang and cheered and the Boy Scouts presented gifts to the President. I enjoyed it all and was happy. But the happiest moment was when the President sent Major Coupal to me and said that the President desired me to stand with him and Mrs. Coolidge while he cut the cakes for his guests.

"That was another new experience. I was not so nervous at first. But my legs began to get shaky as those awful photographers and movie men kept shouting not only at me but at the President, telling us how to stand and what to do. I thought that the President would get mad when one movie man roared at him, 'Eat a bigger piece!'

She Refuses to Tell Recipe.

"'And now, Auntie, put a piece in your mouth,' they said to me.

"I am not accustomed to being ordered around so, but I did it."

"I was disappointed when I did not see my modest widow's mite on the table among the other birthday cakes. Mrs. Coolidge, I guess, saw my face. She said to me, 'I am keeping the best until the last. I thought if I cut it here I would not get a taste. I like sour cream cake so much and we are going to have it for supper. My mother always baked such good sour cream cake.'

"It was a glorious day for me—much beyond my expectations. I don't know much about politics. I am a Republican and always vote the ticket straight. I hope President Coolidge will be a candidate again. If he is, I am sure he will be elected, and I will bake another cake for him when he is inaugurated.

"I think he is winning the West by his simple, genuine manners. Certainly he won me and I guess the West won him today.

"Oh, the recipe of the cake? The President did not ask for it and I guess I will keep it to myself."

GRACE PLANE FALLS AT START IN HAWAII

Flier and Dog Are Unhurt, but Transpacific Machine Is Badly Damaged.

RUNWAY ROUGH AT HOP-OFF

Tail of Monoplane Breaks as the Aviator Circles Island — May Force Abandoning of Flight.

MANA, Island of Kauai, Hawaii, July 4 (AP).—The stunt flier of the movies, Richard Grace of Hollywood, Cal., crashed to earth in his plane here today soon after he had taken off for the California mainland.

Grace and the dog which accompanied him were unhurt, but the plane was so badly damaged that the transpacific flight of more than 2,400 miles may be abandoned.

Grace made a good take-off at 5:24 A. M. from the rough and bumpy Barking Sands runway, which had previously punctured the tires of his plane's wheels, halting two attempts to fly. He circled the island of Kauai, testing his machine before sailing out across the Pacific.

Trouble developed when the plane was over the village of Koloa. The tail of the monoplane was seen to flutter, and then the plane plunged to earth in thorny bushes at the edge of the flying field. Grace had flown fifty-one minutes when he crashed to land at 6:15 A. M. The fuselage and one wing were wrecked and there was other damage, but the propeller and motor were intact.

Grace returned heartbroken to the residence where he had been a guest. His mechanic, Easton B. Koger, completely broke down with disappointment and was unable to see any one to explain the cause of the accident.

"I did my best, and that's all that I can say," Grace said brokenly.

Future plans for a transpacific flight have not been formulated. Materials were ordered to rebuild the plane, but it was said that Grace and Koger might return to Honolulu Wednesday.

The cause of the rudder trouble was not determined. Experts thought that it might have been due to a strain brought upon the machine as it roared down the uneven runway with a load of more than 4,000 pounds.

Today's crash was the twenty-fifth for Grace since he began flying, at the age of 16. He is now 28. To provide thrills for picture audiences Grace wrecked sixteen planes. His other airplane wrecks were accidental, most of them in the performance of his work as a stunt flier. His only serious accident was nearly fatal. It cracked a vertebra in his neck and earned for him the sobriquet of "the broken-necked flier."

The flight which failed was to have been either to San Francisco, 2,400 miles, or to Los Angeles, about 115 miles longer, dependent upon gasoline supply. Grace came to the islands June 24 and had made several attempts to take off before the accident today.

PRAISES BRITISH COLONIZING

General Beech at Canadian Banquet Recites Debt of America.

MONTREAL, July 4 (AP).—"We of the United States are proud of our country, and every time we think of our greatness we go back and thank God that England was our parent; all that we have we practically owe to Great Britain," Major Gen. Lansing H. Beech of Washington, D. C., who during the war was commander of the American Army engineers, said at a Confederation banquet on board the White Star liner Regina last night.

"It was a fortunate thing for civilization," said General Beech, "that Great Britain acquired as much of the Western Hemisphere as she did, and unfortunate that she did not acquire more, since wherever Great Britain has established colonies or extended her guardianship, the country prospered, the world has been better, and these lands have developed."

He declared the United States was thankful that it had Canada on its northern border. He cautioned against accepting "tail-twisters" as being representative Americans. With the English-speaking countries standing together for peace and the preservation of civilization, he felt sure the world would be conducted to happiness and prosperity.

Bond Man Predicts Good Business in Real Estate Securities in 1927.

There is a definite promise of prosperity for the real estate bond business in the last half of 1927, according to W. J. Moore, President of the American Bond and Mortgage Company. He said that there was no longer fear of a building slump and predicted that building volume would approximate the record of 1926.

"The building industry is proceeding on a sound basis," said Mr. Moore. "Thorough study of the situation will show that the much over-emphasized talk of over-production is without basis fact. The pessimist is having a hard time in forecasting gloom. There are too many men in business today who have lived too long to be pessimists and, furthermore, the outlook for business is better than it has been in many years."

CROWD HAILS SMITH AS NEXT PRESIDENT

Demonstration for Governor Marks Tammany Society's Celebration of the Fourth.

A LEADER LIKE JEFFERSON

VOORHIS, 97, AT EXERCISES

Grand Sachem Reads Message From Governor Ritchie of Maryland—Attends Flag Raising.

Governor Smith was cheered as "the next President of the United States" by a crowd at Tammany Hall at yesterday's Fourth of July celebration of the Tammany Society, when hailed by State Senator William T. Byrne of Albany as the reincarnation of Thomas Jefferson.

It was the only allusion to the Governor and his Presidential aspirations made by any of the speakers at the celebration. Before he made his reference to the Governor Senator Byrne sounded a warning against the third term. His speech was devoted principally to a eulogy of the Tammany Society and the part it had played in the history of the country.

"The history of this society," he said, "presents a cross-section of the history of the development of the ideals of liberty and progress in America."

The Tammany Society, he added, had been the chief instrument in introducing manhood suffrage in this State in 1820. It had been the principal agency for the abolition of the debtors' prison, it had obtained for this city, in 1834, the right to elect its Mayors who, theretofore, had been appointed, and, he declared, its influences brought about the election of Andrew Jackson and Martin Van Buren as Presidents of the United States.

Hails Smith as Leader.

"We of the State of New York approach our present situation in a spirit of extreme modesty," he said. "We realize that our Commonwealth assumed the leadership among the States as the Empire State in 1789, and that in 1927 that leadership has not been taken from us. We who are of the Thomas Jefferson type of thought, have prayed that we might impress upon the rest of the country that among us we have developed individual leadership of a high order that we are ready to offer to the nation.

"We have been waiting for the crucial hour when we might tell the rest of our country that we have developed a leader of the Thomas Jefferson type, a man with trenchant power fitting him to guide the thought and actions of other men, a man who has gained fame for the impeccability of the policies he has applied in government, a man of the sterling integrity and great foresight of Thomas Jefferson. We can present to the rest of the country when the hour strikes, a man, shoulder to shoulder with Thomas Jefferson, a man who has developed his principles of democracy from childhood up and who has practiced them every day of his life—our Governor, Alfred E. Smith.

The cheering that followed lasted more than a minute, and then the Sixty-ninth Regiment Band struck up "The Sidewalks of New York."

Supreme Court Justice Thomas C. T. Crain, who is a Sachem of the Tammany Society, in his address praised the courage of those who signed the Declaration of Independence and pledged their all to the realization of what that document contained. He referred to the naval armament conference now in progress at Geneva, and in this connection accused Great Britain of not having acted in good faith under the terms of the Washington Treaty. "In the same spirit that actuated our forefathers when they signed the Declaration of Independence and on this occasion when we celebrate the 151st anniversary of that deed," he said, "I urge that this country have a navy commensurate with its needs and equal to that of any other power."

Voorhis, 97, Presides.

Grand Sachem John R. Voorhis, who will be 97 years old later in the month, presided at the exercises, which included a salute to the flag, recitation of "An American's Creed," and the reading of the Declaration of Independence. Mr. Voorhis said that Governors of several other States had been invited to participate in the exercises, but that they had sent regrets, with much praise for the Tammany Society and what it stands for.

Governor Ritchie of Maryland, himself an aspirant for the Presidential nomination, sent a telegram in which he said: "I like to think of Maryland as fighting side by side with the great State of New York for those principles of civil liberty and religious tolerance which are the faith of democracy and the hope of America. Since I cannot do it myself, may I ask you to convey to the distinguished Governor of the State of New York my personal esteem, my warmest good wishes and assurances of the high regard in which he is held by a host of friends in Maryland?"

Other speakers were Assemblymen Frank R. Galgano and John J. Ryan, and Bernard H. Ridder, who paid tribute to the memory of Charles F. Murphy, long the leader of Tammany Hall and a Sachem of the Society.

Prior to the exercises the Grand Sachem and Sachems, with an escort of Boy Scouts, went to Union Square, where they officiated at a flag raising.

SOLDIER KILLED IN SALUTE.

Wife and Daughter See Fort Collins Man Wounded by Cannon.

FORT COLLINS, Col., July 4 (AP).—Mack Albean, 28, an enlisted soldier stationed at Colorado Agricultural College, was fatally wounded today during the forty-eight-gun salute to the Union. After the twenty-second gun had been shot, Albean took a ramrod to the mouth of the cannon to release the twenty-third, which was stuck.

Unseen by his comrades, due to smoke which a strong wind sent back in their eyes, Albean stood at the cannon's mouth as the shell was fired.

Albean's wife and five-year-old daughter were standing back of the cannon when the accident occurred.

City Has Coolest Fourth in Bureau's History; Mean Low of 64.5 Breaks Record Set in 1895

New Yorkers who awakened yesterday with the dread of having to swelter through another hot Fourth of July received a welcome surprise. The day had the lowest mean temperature of any Independence Day anniversary on the records of the New York office of the United States Weather Bureau, which was established in 1871.

The mean temperature yesterday was 64.5 degrees, .5 of one degree lower than the mean temperature of July 4, 1895, which was 65. On July 4, 1909, was recorded the lowest minimum temperature of any Fourth of July since the weather office was opened here, 57.5 degrees. The minimum temperature yesterday was 58 degrees.

The maximum temperature for the Fourth in 1909 was 73 degrees, while that of yesterday was 71 degrees, according to W. G. Riley, Assistant Weather Observer. The hourly temperatures yesterday were:

CENSURES OUR COLLEGES

Also Decries Apathy of Voters in Address at K. of C. Patriotic Celebration in Park.

Limiting or the elimination of scientific and other courses to allow time for the proper daily teaching of American citizenship in public and private schools as well as universities and colleges was urged yesterday morning by Justice Jerry B. Sullivan of the United States Customs Court, Vice President of the Catholic Club. He gave the chief address at the Independence Day celebration of the Charles Carroll General Assembly, Knights of Columbus, held on the Central Park Mall.

"I would give a lot to know more about geology, botany and biology," declared the Judge, "but I would throw them all in the waste basket if they crowded from the curriculum American citizenship. Open up the laboratories, yes. But the laboratories of American citizenship."

"I ask that boy who is attending college in a $10,000 Rolls-Royce in which he takes chorus girls riding whether or not he is building up democracy?" continued the Judge, after asking, "How many schools are teaching the Constitution?" and declaring, "the colleges are not!"

"The greatest grand army this country possesses," said Judge Sullivan, "is the grand army of teachers who are teaching your children and mine what is right and what is wrong."

Judge Sullivan decried the apathy of American citizens toward voting, and excoriated their tendency toward exhibiting greater interest in golf and bridge than voting for men and principles "so necessary to maintain this great Republic."

Ninety-five per cent. of the electorate in Australia voted at the last election as the result of the recent passage there of an act imposing a fine equal to $10 on each individual who does not vote, according to the Judge.

At the Presidential election of 1920 in the United States 49 per cent. of the electorate voted, he asserted, while at a Senatorial election in 1924 in New York State made its choice on votes cast by only 26 per cent. of the electorate. Two weeks ago at an election in Ireland 50 per cent. of the electorate voted, he declared.

"Yet with all the grumblings of our political parties," continued the Judge, "we cannot get 50 per cent. of the people to vote. This country will not be free if only those who are now voting continue to vote. Remember, this country was not created to make men rich but to make men free, and this country will not be free if you fail to exercise the right to vote."

Tribute to great Americans for the part they played in building the nation and for their contributions of spirit and principles was voiced by the Rev. Joseph A. McCaffrey, Chaplain of the New York City Police Department and of the 102d Engineers, New York National Guard. Both he and Colonel Timothy J. Moynahan of the Rainbow Division, who presided, as well as Judge Sullivan, referred to the "insidious propaganda" being disseminated in America and in other countries against America.

Colonel Moynahan was introduced by Edmund A. Cosins, Faithful Navigator of the Charles Carroll General Assembly, who delivered the address of welcome to the audience of 2,000 persons. The opening prayer was offered by the Rev. Daniel C. Cunnion, Faithful Friar of the Assembly. Louis A. Dinan read the Declaration of Independence.

Patriotic musical selections were given by the Police Glee Club and Di Matteo's Boys' Band, with G. Di Matteo leading.

1,000 LEGIONAIRES IN BRONX PARADE

Many Other Civic and Military Units Join in Marking Independence Day.

COL. HINES CHIEF SPEAKER

Garibaldi and G. A. R. Veterans in Line—Harmonica Band From P. S. 3 Plays.

The Bronx posts of the American Legion turned out 1,000 strong yesterday afternoon to parade through the streets of the borough and listen to speeches after four o'clock in an unnamed square at Arthur Avenue and 182d Street. The principal address was by Colonel Frank H. Hines, Commander of the 105th Field Artillery, National Guard, who said:

"We don't need a black shirt or a bed sheet to make us good citizens."

A feature of the parade was the Harmonica Band of Public School 3, led by seven-year-old William Eisenbach of 386 East 157th Street. This juvenile group of musicians vied with the negro band of the 369th Infantry in supplying patriotic strains for the occasion.

Among those who participated in the parade were three veterans of the G. A. R. and two members of the army of Giuseppe Garibaldi, the Italian patriot. These five rode in automobiles, being, indeed, too feeble to march for two hours in a Summer sun. They were Thomas P. Tuite, 79 years old, of 372 West 120th Street, Commander of the Vanderbilt Post of the Bronx G. A. R.; James L. Lyons, 82, 940 Fox Street, and David Crowley, 81, 540 East 142d Street, both members of the Vanderbilt Post, and Giovanni Balcone, 86, of 2,859 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, and Salvatore Paladini, 79, of 499 East 176th Street, the Bronx, who appeared in the red shirts of Garibaldi's legion.

Many Units in March.

Besides Colonel Hines, Rabbi Dr. Julius G. Price and Dr. P. D. Badia spoke. Twenty-three posts of the American Legion were in the line of march, as well as the Eighteenth Regiment of the United States Infantry, a company from the cruiser Raleigh, the 212th Coast Artillery of the N. Y. N. G., the United States Spanish War Veterans of the Bronx, the Archbishop Hughes General Assembly of the Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus; the Holy Name Society of the Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, the Bronx Gold Star Mothers, the Columbus Legion, the Sons of Italy, the Italian-American Business Men's Association, the Loyal Labor Legion, the Tepecano Democratic Club and the Boy Scouts of America of Bronx County.

The Declaration of Independence was read by Lazar Frankel, Commender of the Bronx posts of the American Legion.

Fete for Ill Veterans.

While the parade was in progress a garden party was held for the 900 inmates of the United States Hospital for Psychopathic Veterans, Kingsbridge and Sedgwick Avenues. Cake and ice cream, as well as cigarettes, were supplied for the veterans and their relatives and friends by Dr. George F. Brewster, medical officer in charge of the hospital; Miss Anne Pennebaker, who arranged the program and who is Red Cross director at the hospital, and by William J. Hayes of 502 West 173d Street, representative of the Hebrew Welfare League. The band of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum provided music.

In the morning the Archbishop Hughes General Assembly of Fourth Degree members of the Knights of Columbus met in Poe Park, corner of Grand Concourse and 193d Street, to hear speeches by Mgr. Patrick N. Breslin, James A. Hamilton and John Maroney. The Police Band played.

7,500 FIRST VOTERS RALLY AT CITY HALL

Hear Walker Urge That Congress Lower Bars Against Their Fellows Overseas.

RECITE AMERICAN'S CREED

Nathaniel Phillips Informs Them America Holds No Place for Intolerance.

Seven thousand five hundred men and women, most of them recently naturalized and some just come of age, attended a Fourth of July celebration last night in City Hall Park held by the Mayor's Committee on Independence Day Receptions to First Voters.

The meeting was considered unique in the interest and the seriousness shown by the new voters in the exercises, which included a recitation by all present of The American's Creed, the singing of patriotic songs and speeches by Mayor Walker, Nathaniel Phillips, Chairman of the Committee; Hanford MacNider, Assistant Secretary of War, and Dr. John H. Finley. The Police Department Band played from the balcony, and Boy Scouts advanced with the colors and recited the pledge of allegiance. The plaza of City Hall was decorated with the national colors and was brilliantly illuminated.

"You are here tonight as my guests," said Mayor Walker, "but I am here tonight, and will be here tomorrow, as your servant. To every one of you this city offers the same consideration, the same rights and privileges, that are accorded to those whose ancestors came over on the Mayflower.

Objects to Bar on Aliens.

"I do not want to inject a controversial note into this happy gathering, but I must declare here and now that this inspiring gathering of thousands of naturalized citizens, who have given up their holiday to come here, should be a lesson to those in the two houses of our national Congress who have helped to place bars across the gateway to this great country and who have made it difficult, if not impossible, for many more like you to come here to take their places as citizens with you and me.

"I wonder," he said after the applause had ended, "how many of those same Congressmen are engaged tonight in performing the patriotic services in which you of foreign birth are aiding."

He paid his respects to "100 per cent. Americans" with the assertion that "they are the ones who have forgotten the language of our Declaration of Independence."

"They have forgotten," he said, "that no one can be a true American who will not attribute to every citizen the same rights he claims for himself. The only ones who practice 100 per cent. Americanism are those who do not talk about it."

He said the presence of new voters in City Hall Plaza was the "most natural thing" he had ever seen there, that the plaza "never looked as beautiful, as inspiring and as useful," and that he intended to make the reception an annual event during his administration.

How Immigrants Have Helped.

Mr. Phillips and Dr. Finley spoke of the contributions of immigrants to the national structure of the United States, where all nations, they said, were absorbed without the loss of individuality.

Mr. Phillips urged the new voters to use their franchises earnestly and intelligently, to associate themselves with a political organization and to forget all lines of race, creed and color.

"Be a good neighbor," he said. "In our citizenship we have no room for the Ku Klux Klan, for anti-Semitism. We want no ugly nicknames, no 'Mick,' or 'Dago,' or 'Wop,' or 'Sheeny.' Forget the hates of the Old World and remember only the aspirations of the New."

Mr. MacNider, who flew from Washington by airplane, told of being forced down in Pennsylvania and arriving in New York and flying over the City Hall just as the voters were arriving. He said the Fourth was a "good day to take stock of ourselves as American citizens" and to ask ourselves if "we have justified the faith of the men who risked all they had on that Fourth of July a century and a half ago."

"Unless we are contributing something to America," he said, "we do not deserve what America offers us. The name American belongs to no man who is not in some way giving more to America than he receives."

Each of those present received from the committee a scroll on which was surprinted over a copy of the Declaration a congratulation on his or her attainment of citizenship. The exercises were broadcast by WNYC.

KLAN CELEBRATES ON MERRICK ROAD

5,000 Gather in Ten-Acre Field to Hear Governor Denounced as Free Speech Foe.

Special to The New York Times.

BABYLON, L. I., July 4.—Five thousand Klansmen, their wives and children, celebrated Independence Day on a ten-acre field on the Merrick Road between here and Lindenhurst. The celebration was started at 10 A. M. It included picnicking, speeches denouncing the New York police and Governor Smith, the christening of 200 children, the initiation of 400 new members, the baptism of thirteen persons, the marriage of two couples, and was ended at midnight with the burning of a cross.

Only about 200 of those present wore K. K. K. costumes, and none wore a mask. There was no parade. The field, owned by John Abrams of Lindenhurst, was dotted with tents and stands, at which the Klansmen and their families refreshed themselves with hot dogs and soda pop. Twenty-four Rangers were kept busy directing traffic.

D. L. Van Ober of Jamaica, an official of the State organization of the order, who was in charge of the celebration, blamed Governor Smith for the police interference with the Klan parade at Jamaica on Memorial Day, and asserted that the Governor was "throttling free speech." He said the K. K. K. wanted those who opposed it to "demonstrate their Americanism" by ceasing "their attack on peaceful assemblage" guaranteed by the Constitution.

"Recently in New York State," he said, "a White Plains armory was obtained from the proper authorities in which Senator Thomas J. Heflin was to speak on the Mexican situation, and Al Smith and his supporters at the last moment had it canceled.

"I charge tonight that he is offering himself for President of the United States, yet throttling free speech in the State of New York, which within itself is enough to defeat him. The actual support that he will receive will be negligible because we do not believe that the man is of proper calibre for the Presidency of the United States who will permit in his State an outrage like that which occurred on May 20 at Jamaica, wherein the police, under instruction from Commissioner Warren, assaulted without any cause defenseless and lawful paraders.

"It was an uncalled-for thing and evidences the bigotry and intolerance of the leading minds of the State of New York. It has been stated that we are intolerant and bigoted, but in respect to our lawful conduct we have a record that speaks for itself; and at no time in the past have we ever disturbed a peaceful assemblage of any kind, interfered with or heckled a speaker who opposed us. We hold that the Constitution of the United States of America guarantees peaceful assemblage and the right of every man to believe as he sees fit. We grant that right to the Catholic Church and its leaders not because it is necessary that we gran it, but because the Constitution makes it perfectly clear that they have that right as well as any other group.

"The Klan is not anti-Jew, anti-Catholic, anti-negro, nor anti-anything; and if those who oppose it want to demonstrate their Americanism they will cease their attack on peaceful assemblage and put an end to the violation of the principle of free speech in the State of New York."

Senator Heflin also said last week at Jamaica that Governor Smith had the armory at White Plains closed to him. Governor Smith denied this at Albany last night.

253 Fire Alarms in 24 Hours; Bronx Forced to Seek Aid

Fourth of July is the heaviest day of the fireman's year not because of the severe fires he is called upon to fight but because of the number of them.

There were alarms in the city from midnight Sunday up to midnight last night. Eighty-two of these were in Manhattan, 66 in the Bronx and 105 in Brooklyn. Most of them were of small consequence, awnings, rubbish piles, &c.

In the evening when sky rockets began to whiss and boom there was an unusually large number of alarms, so many in the Tremont section of the Bronx that the firemen could not answer them fast enough and had to request a relief truck and engine to alternate on calls in that section.

TRUCE IN FASCIST QUARREL.

Both Factions Stay Away From Garibaldi Memorial Meeting.

For the first time in several years the annual struggle between Fascisti and anti-Fascisti for possession of Garibaldi Memorial Hall at Tompkins Avenue and Chestnut Street, Rosebank, S. I., on the birthday of Garibaldi, the Italian patriot, did not take place yesterday. The Sons of Italy, who pay taxes on the hall, had extended the customary invitations to both factions to hold services there in honor of Garibaldi. One group was to hold services in the morning and their rivals in the afternoon, but neither society sent representatives there.

Anticipating trouble, fifty patrolmen guarded the hall all day. In previous years the rival groups would march to the hall and would attempt to prevent their opponents from holding services.

NEW YORK ENJOYS DIGNIFIED FOURTH

Cool Weather and Absence of Noise Make It Pleasant for Those Who Stay in City.

PARKS DRAW THOUSANDS

Many Outdoor Patriotic Exercises Feature Day—Reception at City Hall to First Voters.

New York enjoyed one of the quietest and most dignified Fourth of July celebrations in its history yesterday. The comparative absence of noise and rowdyism gave those who spent the day in the city an opportunity to observe the holiday with fitting patriotic and memorial exercises.

It was the coolest Fourth of July in the records of the local Weather Bureau. This may account for the fact that last night, although 2,000,000 persons were said to have spent the day in the country and at the seashore, Broadway was well filled and the theatres and moving picture houses did an unexpectedly large business.

During the daytime, however, those sections of the city which are busiest on weekdays, such as Wall Street, Fifth Avenue and Broadway, gave the aspect of a deserted village.

The city parks in all the boroughs were popular, partly with those who desired a day in the open without leaving town and also with those who attended patriotic celebrations. Thousands gathered in City Hall Park, Central Park, Prospect Park and elsewhere to attend such events.

Reception to First Voters.

About 20,000 native and naturalized citizens eligible to vote for the first time attended a reception at the City Hall last night as guests of the Mayor's Committee on Independence Day Reception to First Voters. Patriotic addresses and music were broadcast by radio and the City Hall and City Hall Plaza were decorated with American flags.

The annual Fourth of July celebration of the Tammany Society at Tammany Hall, which included patriotic addresses and music, the salute to the flag and the reading of the Declaration of Independence, turned for a moment into a demonstration for Governor Smith. This was when a speaker referred to him as "a leader of the Thomas Jefferson type," whom New York offered to the nation. The crowd cheered for a minute and the band played "The Sidewalks of New York."

Other leading events on the day's program were a parade through Bronx streets of 1,000 members of the Bronx posts of the American Legion, including veterans of the World War, Spanish War and Civil War; a Knights of Columbus meeting on the Mall in Central Park and a gathering of 10,000 persons in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, for the annual celebration of the Long Island Knights of Columbus.

Lindbergh Park Dedicated.

Thirty-five hundred persons attended exercises yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Sea Gate Association at Norton's Point, on the tip of Sea Gate, at which Lindbergh Park was dedicated in honor of the first New York to Paris flier. Letters five feet high will proclaim the name to every ship entering the harbor.

School children carrying small American flags marched through the streets to the park and witnessed the unfurling of a large flag purchased with money they had collected. heress Murphy made the formal presentation, after which the flag was unfurled with a salute and the singing of The Star Spangled Banner." The speakers included Cornelius G. Callaghan, President of the Association; George V. McLaughlin, former Police Commissioner, and Dr. Philip I. Nash of the Coney Island Chamber of Commerce. Mrs. W. K. Wilson, wife of Col. Wilson of the Army General Staff at Washington, sang patriotic selections.

Eighteen patriotic organizations, including the American Legion and the Boy Scouts, participated in the celebration yesterday afternoon at Isham Park, Seaman Avenue and 208th Street, under the auspices of the Parents' Association of Public Schools 52 and 98, located in the Inwood section of upper Manhattan. The speakers included State Senator A. Spencer Field, Assemblyman A. A. Falk, the Rev. Walter E. Knight of the Mount Washington Presbyterian Church and the Rev. Abraham Burstein, rabbi of Inwood Temple.

Exercises at Settlement.

The children of the Henry Street Settlement enjoyed games yesterday afternoon at the settlement house, 265 Henry Street, and a block party with dancing last night in front of the settlement. There was community singing, with music furnished by the Municipal Band.

Five celebrations were held at the Rockaways. The largest crowd attended the raising of two flags at Temple Beth-El, Rockaway Park, under the auspices of the American Legion and the Boy Scouts. County Judge Algernon I. Nova, Municipal Court Justice William C. Wiener and Assemblyman William F. Brunner were the principal speakers. At Arverne the school children paraded and sang patriotic airs. The Veterans of Foreign Wars held athletic games at Far Rockaway, following a baby parade. Addresses were made by Assistant District Attorney George Dowling and Peter McCahill, commander of the post. A flag pole was dedicated at the Jewish Orphans Home at Far Rockaway. The Central Boat Club held races off Simis Beach, Far Rockaway.

Many local parades were held in different parts of Staten Island, and the Elks entertained 3,500 children from all parts of the island at their country home at Oakwood. The children were taken back and forth in automobiles. After playing athletic games they sang patriotic airs.

K. OF C. IN PROSPECT PARK.

Grand Knight Walsh Says Source of Democracy Is in Catholicism.

At the Fourth of July exercises of the Knights of Columbus in Prospect Park yesterday the various councils taking part in the ceremonies were divided into two divisions, one of which assembled at the Soldiers and Sailors' Memorial Arch at the main entrance to the park, while the other met at the Willinck entrance, Flatbush Avenue and Empire Boulevard. Both divisions marched simultaneously through the park to the music stand. Preceding the ceremonies St. Malachy's Boys' Band rendered a concert program.

The invocation was by the Very Rev. Mgr. John B. Gorman, pastor of the Church of St. Catherine of Genoa. Michael F. Walsh, Grand Knight of Columbus Council, who was Chairman of the day, asserted that while Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence, the latter never claimed to be the originator of the principles of democracy contained in the document.

"In Catholicism, and in Catholicism alone, do we find the source of American democracy," said Mr. Walsh. The speaker asserted that in the early days of the Roman Catholic Church, while the Roman Empire still existed, the Church was responsible for the freeing of women from a condition close to slavery.

"The Catholic Church established for the first time," continued Mr. Walsh, "that the rights of the individual were the foundations of democracy."

"The crowning glory of the Knights of Columbus is American patriotism," said Arthur J. W. Hilly, Acting Corporation Counsel of the City of New York, who was introduced as the orator of the day.

"We sought no conquest, we sought no glory," said Mr. Hilly in referring to our participation in the World War. "We sought but to amplify the principles of justice. But for the part we took there might yet be no peace in the world. There was never in America so much prosperity as there is today. We have the balance of the credit of the world. Are we seeking to care for it?"

The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. William T. Conklin, pastor of the Church of St. Saviour.

All-Day Celebration in Plainfield.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., July 4.—Independence Day observances here began with a sunrise meeting at City Hall under auspices of the D. A. R. The address was made by the Rev. Dr. L. W. Warren of the First Presbyterian Church. The annual parade was followed by an athletic meet in the afternoon and a concert and fireworks in Greenbrook Park in the evening.

Fireworks at Princeton.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., July 4.—Thousands attended the exhibition of fireworks here today at Palmer Memorial Stadium on the Princeton campus, the principal feature of Princeton's July Fourth celebration. The exhibition was preceded by a band concert.

260 CHILDREN HURT HERE BY FIREWORKS

Youngsters Get Explosives Despite Police Vigilance and Casualties Result.

100 INJURED IN JERSEY

Trunk Full of Fireworks Is Ignited Near Police Headquarters by Match Tossed Into Auto.

Despite the vigilance of the police the small boys and girls of the city managed to get fireworks, although in nothing like the volume of years when the noise-makers were not under ban, and the result yesterday was many accidents. Few of the injuries were serious, but a total of 260 young patients were treated Sunday and yesterday.

The principal hospitals reporting accident cases attributable to the holiday celebration and the number each treated were:

Fordham	15	Bellevue	45
Lincoln	21	Broad Street	0
New York	16	Presbyterian	10
French	10	Knickerbocker	7
Polyclinic	10	Columbus	2
Roosevelt	12	Harlem	4
Gouverneur	8	Mount Sinai	25
St. Vincent's	30	Beekman St.	25

In the suburbs and in New Jersey, where the ban on fireworks was not in force, an old-fashioned din was maintained all through the holiday and the number of minor casualties was correspondingly larger. In Hudson County alone 100 children were treated at hospitals, with a large number of others attended by family or near-by physicians.

Edgar Musser, 9 years old, of 285 Targee Street, Stapleton, S. I., was one of the first victims of the Fourth. The boy was celebrating in the back yard of his home, and when a giant salute failed to explode he picked it up to see whether the fuse had gone out. It went off in his hand. He was taken to Staten Island Hospital, where physicians began efforts to save the sight of his right eye.

Leo Budavsky, 15, of 358 West Fiftieth Street, Manhattan, also picked up an unexploded firecracker to examine it. It exploded as he held it at Eighth Avenue and Seventeenth Street and the index finger and the tip of his thumb on his left hand were blown off. A taxicab chauffeur took him to New York Hospital and Detective Creeland of the West Thirtieth Street Station made an unsuccessful canvass of stores near Budavsky's home to find the dealer who had supplied the boy. Creeland's orders were to arrest any one offering to sell fireworks in violation of the city ordinance.

Emergency Clinics for Victims.

At most of the hospitals emergency clinics and staffs were established to care for the fireworks victims. Burns and slight wounds from blank cartridge pistols, big firecrackers, skyrockets and Roman candles were treated quickly and the small patients, in the majority of cases, sent home with a warning against fireworks as a means of celebrating their independence. Harlem and Bellevue Hospitals had the largest number of cases.

One of the largest fireworks displays of the day was an accidental one and was staged in Mulberry Street, a block from Police Headquarters. Louis Dargenio of 1,546 Seventy-sixth Street, Brooklyn, went among his friends several days ago and collected a fund for fireworks. He drove his automobile to Ossining early yesterday and at noon parked in front of 169 Mulberry Street to distribute the purchases. The fireworks, nicely assorted, were stored in a trunk on the rear seat of Dargenio's car. Some one tossed a match into the trunk.

There followed a shorter and more intensive display than the would-be celebrants had contemplated. The cover of the trunk snapped up and down with each explosion, shooting burning firecrackers, Roman candles and other pieces out of the windows of the machine. The banging of the fireworks sent a squad of detectives hurrying down from headquarters, with visions of machine-gun gangsters.

Firemen End Pyrotechnics.

Some one turned in a fire alarm and Deputy Chief Henry Helm and a detachment of apparatus responded. A spurt of water ended the pyrotechnics and added to the damage already done. When it was all over, Dargenio's car was scarred and scorched, a mudguard had been blown off and the glass of the rear window and parts of the side windows had disappeared.

Two fires in Queens were attributed by the police to fireworks. The first was at the Melba Recreation Pier, Melba Drive and East River, Astoria. The damage was slight. The second was under the platform leading to the paddock at the Jamaica Race Track, Jamaica, and also was slight.

Among the injured in the suburbs, the most serious was Donald Ambrose, 28 years old, of 113 Washington Avenue, New Rochelle. In an effort to prevent children from injuring themselves with firecrackers, Ambrose called a group of them together and began to caution them. The better to illustrate his point, he picked up a cannon cracker. It went off as he held it, and at the New Rochelle Hospital two fingers of his right hand were amputated.

Frank Policrasto, 8 years old, the son of a garage owner on the White Horse Pike, near Hammonton, N. J., was nearly blinded by the explosion of firecrackers thrown by companions. The explosion destroyed his left eye and affected the sight of his other eye.

Edward Combes, 12 years old, Grant Terrace, Baldwin, L. I., lost two fingers and the thumb of his left hand at 8 o'clock last night when a cannon cracker which he was lighting exploded in his hand.

About 100 children came to various hospitals in Hudson County, N. J., to have their burns and injuries dressed, besides the uncounted hundreds who ran crying to mother and were sent out to play again after having a home-made first aid bandage applied. All the children who came to hospitals received an injection of tetanus anti-toxin serum as an additional safety measure.

One physician on duty in the emergency ward at the City Hospital in Jersey City estimated that Hudson County had spent more than $500 for the anti-toxin used yesterday. There were seventy-five patients treated there. The majority of the injuries were burns on the face or hands.

St. Mary's Hospital in Hoboken treated ten patients, and North Hudson Hospital at Weehawken six. Christ Hospital in Jersey City had two patients on the record because Edward Shinnick of 606 Newark Avenue was a repeater and came back with a second injury after he had been sent home.

ONE BOY IN HOSPITAL TWICE

Two Fourth of July Accidents Happen to Jersey City Lad.

At Christ Hospital in Jersey City there were two Fourth of July accidents reported, both of which befell Edward Shinnick, 10 years old, of 606 Newark Avenue, Jersey City, who thus gained the distinction of being the only accident "repeater" of the day.

When indulging in a little preliminary celebration on Sunday night Edward had the misfortune to have a two-inch salute thrown by a playmate land down his back. He was taken to the hospital, his injury was dressed and tetanus antitoxin was administered. Then the surgeon in the emergency ward told him to go home and be quiet yesterday.

Edward stood it until the afternoon. Then vicarious celebration of the day, listening to the noise made by other boys, palled. He took his blank cartridge pistol to the street to do his share at making the day a success. The first shot sent powder into one of his eyes. Back to the hospital he went, this time as a patient, into a ward and to bed, not only to care for his eye but also to keep him out of the way of more harm.

WEARY TRAVELERS POUR BACK TO CITY

All Roads Choked and Rail Lines Burdened as Influx Hits Peak at Midnight.

MILES OF CARS AT FERRIES

Boats Are Run on 'Load and Unload' Headway— 600,000 at Coney, Record Crowd in Rockaways.

The multitude which went out of town for the three-day holiday began to pour back last night, a migration by train, motor and boat, and resorts in the mountains, at lakes and at the shore counted the money left behind and called it a record Fourth of July.

Reports from Atlantic City and from the twenty resorts along the North Jersey Coast gave some idea of the strain put on facilities by the returning host. Approximately 300,000 put in the day along the famous Boardwalk in Atlantic City and then as evening fell turned homeward, the majority entraining for this city. Ideal weather there and in the vicinity of New York generally had given them a fine holiday and they were ready for the return to work and the humdrum. Asbury Park, another centre for the day, saw a similar exodus.

Press at Grand Central.

Officials at the Grand Central Terminal reported that they expected 300,000 persons would have entered the city through the station by midnight. This is a 10 per cent. increase over any holiday of record. The incoming traffic at the station began at 7 P. M. and increased steadily as regular trains, supplemented by thirty-five specials, pulled in. Figures on the traffic in and out over the New York Central and over the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroads for the holiday period were given as 1,656,000.

Extra attendants at the station kept the crowd moving and there was no congestion. The big terminal, however, was thronged all evening.

Similar conditions prevailed at the Pennsylvania Station, where William Egan, station master, said that the holiday crowd had broken all records.

Sixty extra trains, each of ten coaches, were operated by the Pennsylvania into and out of the city. The official estimate of the number of trains, including those of the Long Island Railroad, was approximately 700. Mr. Egan estimated the number passing through the station at 200,000.

Ferry Terminals Taxed.

The ferry terminals of the West Shore, the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western and the Erie gave ample testimony of the influx. At the West Shore terminal in Weehawken officials said they expected about 80,000 persons in the homeward rush. They pointed out that 60 per cent. of the passengers who left the city over this road went out on regular vacations of two or more weeks. At the Central Railroad of New Jersey ferry, wheer the bulk of the Jersey coast sojourners arrived, boats were being operated on a "load-and-unload" headway.

As the night wore on the lines of motorists at the ferries grew in length. At 10 P. M. there was a mile of automobiles waiting at the West Shore ferryhouse. The electric ferryboat between Weehawken and West Twenty-third Street was being operated at capacity.

On the Manhattan side of the Twenty-third Street ferryhouse cars returning to New Jersey or points beyond were in double ranks as far east as Tenth Avenue. Incoming cars were dispatched with police orders to "keep going" and were detoured to avoid clashing with the outbound motor traffic. Traffic on the municipal ferry to Staten Island was comparatively light early in the evening, but by 9 P. M. thousands of passengers and hundreds of cars began to board the boats. The traffic on that line became heaviest between 10 P. M. and midnight because most of the visitors to the Staten Island beaches lingered there as late as possible.

As early as 4 P. M., however, there were crowded boats on the running schedule from St. George. They were leaving all seats as they reached the lower assembly. Nine of the boats were going to Whitehall Street, four to Thirty-ninth Street, Brooklyn, and four to Sixty-fifth Street, Brooklyn.

Coney Island's crowd yesterday was somewhat smaller than on Sunday—a mere 500,000—said the expert estimators, which to Coney Island, accustomed to packing humanity along its miles of beach and boardwalk is just an ordinary crowd such as any fair Sunday may bring. The drop in attendance was ascribed to the cooler weather and the tremendous press there on Sunday which suggested to many other spots for the Fourth.

Record for Rockaways.

The largest crowd that ever visited the Rockaways over the Fourth of July or any other holiday added its numbers to the homecomers. The visitors numbered 400,000 yesterday, and with Saturday's and Sunday's crowds, brought the total that the Rockaways entertained over the week-end to 1,000,000. Transportation facilities were taxed to the utmost and homeward bound automobiles moved slowly along the Cross Bay Boulevard and other roads. More than 100 policemen attempted to keep the long lines of automobiles moving without serious delays.

The throngs on the beaches of the Rockaways during the day kept the police busy, but not in making arrests, for the crowd was orderly, and less than twenty summonses were issued. The police were chiefly occupied in returning lost children to their parents. More than fifty lost children were reported, a record number for the Rockaways. At one time twenty-two lost children were in the Rockaway Beach Station waiting for their parents to claim them.

No matron was on duty in the station, and Lieutenant Joseph Herzing took over the task of buying lollypops and toys to keep the squalling youngsters quiet. He assigned six patrolmen to assist him. At the end of the day, fatigued by his efforts, he said that he thought that parents who lost their children through negligence should be fined $10 for each "lost" one.

Thirty-five rescues from the surf were reported by the municipal life savers in the Rockaways. Stocks of food in the restaurants were exhausted during the morning, and many visitors had to patronize frankfurter stands until the restaurants could get fresh supplies.

CRUSH AT ATLANTIC CITY.

Beach and Boardwalk Jammed Under a Clear Sky.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 4.—The sands of Atlantic City were black with humanity today and the Boardwalk was jammed with gayly garbed promenaders and roller chair riders. Old-timers called it the greatest Fourth of July in the history of the resort, at least from the standpoint of crowds.

The sky was clear and the hot sun was tempered by a cool northwest breeze. The sea was smooth but cold, and the majority of bathers remained in the water only a few minutes. Lifeguards reported that they had little, if anything, to do.

Crowds of record-breaking proportions were here yesterday and these were augmented by new arrivals today. Several excursion trains rolled into town this morning. The motor influx over both the White Horse Pike and the New York Road continued almost as great as that of yesterday.

Last night accommodations in hotels and boarding houses were at a premium, and many were reported to have parked for the night in automobiles or along the beach with single blankets tucked around them.

Everywhere along the Boardwalk business of record-breaking proportions was reported.

Shortly after 4 o'clock this afternoon the homeward trek began and it continued in ever-increasing proportions until long after midnight. State troopers were stationed at intervals along automobile roads. At the three rail terminals thousands packed and jostled to board outgoing trains. Women swooned as men fought one another to get through the gates.

JAMS IN WESTCHESTER.

New Rochelle Holds Water Carnival —Villages Display Fireworks.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., July 4.—Holiday crowds today jammed Rye Beach and other county-operated shore resorts in Westchester. Clear weather and warm water attracted thousands to the beaches.

In New Rochelle there was a water carnival, with swimming and boat races in Echo Bay. In the evening Mayor Benjamin B. Dadeau started a municipal display of fireworks by firing the first skyrocket from Harrison Island.

Hastings and Dobbs Ferry also had village displays, while the sale of fireworks was permitted in nearly every community in Westchester County. The Westchester Biltmore Country Club and other clubs provided evening spectacles for themselves.

In the late afternoon traffic jams were reported on the Boston Post Road, the Shore Road, the Albany Post Road and other arteries leading from the New England States back to Manhattan.

TRAVEL RECORDS ON SHORE.

Exodus From New Jersey Resorts Taxes Railroad Lines.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 4.—The exodus of holiday visitors from twenty North Jersey resorts between Atlantic Highlands and Point Pleasant got under way this evening. Traffic was the heaviest in the history of this section.

In addition to the tremendous volume of motor traffic forty-five special train sections were moving to North Jersey and New York, with many more over the Jersey Central Railroad and the Pennsylvania lines. Trainmen said not recall a Fourth of July in many years when the passenger traffic had been so heavy.

Shore towns placed scores of special traffic policemen on duty to handle the record motor traffic.

AMERICANS IN LONDON HOLD BIG CELEBRATION

Houghton Presides at Dinner, With Kermit Roosevelt, Lord Darling and Steed Speakers.

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to The New York Times.

LONDON, July 4.—Independence Day was celebrated in London tonight at the largest dinner ever held by the American Society in London. Ambassador Houghton was Chairman and speakers included Kermit Roosevelt, Lord Darling, noted as England's wittiest magistrate, and H. Wickham Steed, ex-editor of The London Times.

The company present received the felicitations of President Coolidge by cable.

A feature of the celebration was singing by the Ohio Wesleyan Glee Club, which, earlier in the day, held a memorial song service on the estate of Lady Astor for American soldiers buried in her grounds who died of wounds or illness during the World War at her home, which was then a hospital.

Kermit Roosevelt, replying to the toast of "The day we celebrate," gave recollections of the Fourths he had spent with his father on British soil, characterizing the late President as "a great friend and admirer of the British Empire."

Lord Darling, saying he was a species of twentieth century "caractacus," dragging the chariot wheel of Britain's ancient conquerors, declared:

"It was lucky it was Great Britain from whom you gained your independence, for if it had been any other nation they never would have forgiven you."

Mr. Steed ventured the prophesy that the only day greater for the world than the American Independence Day would be the day of America's declaration for the interdependence, cooperation and advancement of human rights, human liberties and human respect for law."

Independence Day dinners were a feature at all restaurants and night clubs catering to Americans tonight.

LONDON, July 4 (AP).—Lady Beecham, wife of Sir Thomas Beecham, the English composer and conductor, gave a garden party and tea in her Grosvenor Square home and garden this afternoon for 100 American students. Among the guests were fifty American college women who are touring England under the auspices of the National Union of Students of London. They will be guests at another "party" given by the National Union tomorrow.

The Independence Day gathering was part of a new plan of English hostesses to show American university visitors the inside of their homes as well as the outside of their art and architecture.

Other English women of means have promised week-end and all-day entertainment to the student tourists.

CASUALTIES IN WAKE OF HOLIDAY TRAFFIC

Youth Killed as Car Topples on Him When Tire Blows Out —Five Others Hurt.

WOMAN DIES IN AUTO SKID

But Her Brother and Father Escape Uninjured—One Dead as Stone Upsets Machine Near Croton.

Automobile mishaps were numerous yesterday along highways converging on New York as holiday-makers pointed their cars homeward amid unusual congestion of traffic.

Mrs. Lucy Schwartz, 35 years old, of 201 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, was killed when the car in which she was riding skidded and overturned in Mohegan Road near Peekskill. The machine was driven by her father, Jacob Abelson of Warkman Parkway, Jersey City, who was uninjured. Her husband, Joseph Schwartz, the third passenger, was treated for shock at Peekskill Hospital.

Frank Burak, 19 years old, of 416 South Fifth Street, Brooklyn, was crushed to death beneath a car which toppled over when a rear tire blew out in South Broadway, Irvington. Only one of the seven persons in the car escaped injury, the fortunate one being Meyer Newmark of 228 Henry Street, Manhattan, the driver. The injured taken to Irvington Hospital, were: Marion Savoy, 19, of 342 Cherry Street, Manhattan, broken ribs and possibly a fractured skull; Bernard Goldberg, 21, of 310 Madison Street, lacerations of the eyes; Jack Brown, 18, of 33 Gouverneur Street, left collar bone broken; Herman Burak, 21, brother of the dead man, shock; Joseph Weinshenker, 21, of 331 Keat Street, Brooklyn, severe sprains.

Dies as Car Somersaults.

Miss Theresa Larkin, 36 years od, of 518 West 136th Street, died instantly when a heavy touring car somersaulted near the Croton Dam. The machine was driven by Ward Genon of 600 West 138th Street. Just as he drove into the road leading to the dam the machine struck a stone and the steering wheel was wrenched from his hands. In the moment it was out of control the touring car shot through a wire fence and when it hit a slight embankment overturned.

Genon's head was badly injured and he was covered with bruises. He was in a serious condition last night in Ossining Hospital. Another passenger in the car was also in a serious condition. He was John Kenny, 45 years old, of 502 West 177th Street, who had internal injuries, a broken collar bone and deep cuts. Mrs. Bridget Walsh, 42, of 502 West 177th Street, her son, Peter, 19, and her daughter, Mary, 17, were treated for minor injuries.

A collision between cars at Claremont Avenue and Grove Street, Montclair, brought death to Rocco Anadeo, Jr., eleven months old, son of a contractor living at 38 Willowdale Avenue, Montclair. The second machine got away. The infant with three other children of the family and the father were riding with George R. Kelbeck, a Montclair policeman living at 86 Gerard Avenue. The "hit-and-run" motorist swerved directly into the Kelbeck machine, which overturned. The infant was thrown out and dide instantly. The others were unhurt.

Boy Killed by Truck.

A fatality not attributed to holiday congestion was the death of John Murphy 3 years old, of 181 Meserole Avenue, Brooklyn, who was run over by an automobile truck in front of 185 Meserole Avenue. He was dead upon arrival at the Greenpoint Hospital. Policemen said that the accident had apparently been unavoidable, as the boy had run out from behind another car. The driver of the truck, Richard Murphy, whose address is the same as the lad but who is not related to him, was held.

George Resch, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Resch of Dunham Street, Trenton, N. J., was killed yesterday afternoon when he was struck by an automobile while crossing the street at Tuckerton, N. J. The child was walking along the street with his fathr. Suddenly drawing his hand away, he dashed directly in front of a machine which was driven by Miss Catherine Bishop, 20 years old, of 221 Pine Street, Boonton, N. J. The machine was owned by her fiancé, Joseph McClone, also of Boonton. She was held in bail.

Two persons were injured on the White Horse Pike, near Hammonton, N. J., in automobile accidents, which were due chiefly to heavy traffic. In each instance the car attempted to stop suddenly, skidded off the road and overturned.

Isaac Cantor, 42 years old, of 3,016 Emery Street, Philadelphia, received a fracture of both legs and his left collarbone, injuries to his ears and internal injuries. He is not expected to recover. He was taken to the Hammonton Hospital and later to Mount Zion in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Barbara Etterle, 141 Watson Avenue, Newark, N. J., received a fracture of her left arm a short time after when the car in which she was riding overturned at nearly the same spot. She was taken to the Hammonton Hospital.

Having narrowly escaped being killed when she was thrown through the windshield of a car in a crash at Point Pleasant, N. J., Sunday night, Miss Beatrice Fields of 1,114 Sixth Avenue, Neptune City, is in a serious condition at the Point Pleasant Hospital. Miss Fields was riding in a car driven by Edward Johnson of Toms River, which crashed into the rear end of another auto driven by Clirt Peice of Philadelphia when the forward car stopped suddenly.

BOMB ON ROAD EXPLODES.

Three Men Alighting From Auto in Westfield, Mass., Are Injured.

WESTFIELD, Mass., July 4 (AP).—Three youthful bystanders are in a critical condition in Noble Hospital as the result of an explosion of dynamite contained in a metal bomb resembling a piece of fireworks on the Granville Road late today.

John Baptisoni, whose right leg was blown off, lost so much blood it is feared he may not live. Stanley Kraszkha's right knee and left leg were fractured, small holes were blown through every finger of his right hand and a hole the size of a baseball was torn through his left leg by a piece of flying metal. Peter Konczka, whose brother Jacob was shot in an altercation in Southwick only a week ago, lost his right hand at the wrist and suffered also from heavy loss of blood.

The three youths had just driven up in an automobile and were alighting when the contrivance, being set off a hole by other youths, exploded.

HONOR HERO OF BERKSHIRES

Officials and Sons of Revolution Dedicate Tower at Cheshire.

Special to The New York Times.

CHESHIRE, Mass., July 4.—Berkshire Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution, today, here, dedicated a memorial tower on Stafford Hill, at 1,600 feet elevation, to the pioneers and patriots of New Providence and especially to their leader, Colonel Joab Stafford, who was wounded at the Battle of Bennington and who died Nov. 23, 1801. William B. Browne of North Adams, President of the chapter, presided, and the speakers included United States Senator Frederick H. Gillett, Governor John E. Weeks of Vermont and John C. Hull, Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, representing Governor Fuller.

The native stone memorial, which is a replica of the old Norse mill at Newport, is on Colonel Stafford's 200-acre farm, which he bought in 1766. Colonel Stafford's skeleton was found intact in an ancient burial ground half a mile distant and was moved on an army caisson to the memorial tower crypt.

This was "Berkshire County Day" in connection with the sesquicentennial observance of the Battle of Bennington, which, Senator Gillett said, "was not only the direct precursor but inspired the spirit and confidence which resulted in Saratoga."

Patriotic organizations participated in a parade this morning and the town was gay with the national colors.

FAVORS FULL CONSCRIPTION

Senator Copeland, at Newburgh, Calls Step Essential in Next War.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., July 4 (AP).—Universal conscription and the establishment of pension policies during peace time would do much to prevent the discontent that follows war, United States Senator Royal S. Copeland declared today.

Speaking at the Independence Day celebration at Washington's headquarters here, Senator Copeland said he did not believe the discontent of ex-service men was due to the fact that the soldier had to make a personal sacrifice to join the colors.

"The men who wore the uniform, the men who suffered in camp and hospital, the relatives of those dear men who died in Flanders fields or elsewhere," he said, "are indignant beyond words because the non-service citizens made high wages and accumulated fortunes out of the miseries of warfare.

"There are certain fundamentals this nation should establish. The first one is that, should we have another war—which God forbid!—every citizen will be called to the colors. Not only shall there be a conscription of man power, the force which must face the cannon's mouth, but there shall be a conscription of wealth and labor of every sort."

DESCRIBES TRAVELS OF THE DECLARATION

Representative Stengel Addresses Oldest Inhabitants Association at Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The Declaration of Independence was today described as "the most traveled" of the important political documents of the United States by ex-Representative Charles L. Stengel of New York, addressing the Oldest Inhabitants Association at their Fourth of July celebration.

The Declaration was adopted and signed by members of the Continental Congress on July 4, 1776, and posted outside Independence Hall in Philadelphia, following the passage of a resolution, July 2, by Congress declaring the thirteen colonies free and independent States, he said.

"Shortly thereafter, the British ransacked the city," he declared, "and it was rushed to Baltimore. After the evacuation to Philadelphia it was returned.

"Upon the second attack on Philadelphia by the British, the document was taken to York, Pa., and placed in a safe. After the second evacuation it was returned to Philadelphia. For some unknown reason the Continental Congress began to meet in various places and always took the Declaration with them. It was carried to Princeton, to Annapolis, to Trenton, to New York, and afterward back to Philadelphia.

"In 1800, when Washington was selected for the capital, it was brought to this city and for many years was tucked away in one of the desks in the War Department.

"After that it was turned over to the State Department and placed in the Patent Office, which was then a Bureau of the Department of State. Here it was framed and hung on the wall of the Patent Office beside the original commission of George Washington as Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Armies.

"In 1876 it was taken to Philadelphia and placed on exhibition at the Centennial.

"Philadelphia begged very hard to have it remain there in Independence Hall. This was denied and it was returned to the State Department.

"In 1921 it was taken under guard to the Library of Congress, where it remains for all to look upon."

Five Negroes Escape Prison.

BILL TO RAISE TARIFF REACHES REICHSTAG

Nationalist Plan Would Boost Sugar and Potato Duties to Aid the Farmers.

CABINET SPLITS ON PROJECT

Finance Ministry and Left Members Attack Proposal as at Odds With German Policy.

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 4.—The German Government is fully resolved the Reich's tariff wall must be razed at some time. It is fully in accord with the decisions reached at the World Economic Conference at Geneva that these so-called protective barriers are bad for Germany and for all of Europe.

However, the Marx Cabinet has introduced a bill into the Reichstag, which was debated on the first reading today, to prolong the tariff law of August, 1925, for more than two years, making it effective until Jan. 1, 1930.

Instead of breaking down the customs walls, it appears to find it necessary to do a bit more building in several sections in order to keep out foreign competition. The bill proposes that the duty on sugar be increased 50 per cent. and that on potatoes by 100 per cent. This move on the part of the Nationalists is meant to furnish protection to farmers from losses and to promote the intensive cultivation of the home acreage.

The bill is sponsored by Herr Schiele, Nationalist Minister of Food and Agriculture, who insisted throughout his presentation of the reactionary measure that he was a most ardent supporter of free trade and was working diligently to wipe out customs barriers, but that for the present the Reich's economic condition made a prolongation of the present law, the highest and most far-reaching protective tariff bill Germany ever had, absolutely necessary. He said the additions asked for were needed to protect the farmers. He even expressed the conviction that the increases proposed in the bill were wholly in accord with the Geneva idea.

Finance Ministers Oppose It.

Herr Koehler, the Catholic Centrist Finance Minister, let it be known that the proposed advances were incorporated against his opposition. He made no attempt to hide the fact that the bill was objectionable to him personally and that he would not deplore a reduction in tariff revenues, which have increased from 500,000,000 marks to 940,000,000 marks since 1925.

Herr Koehler's criticism was not unexpected, on account of the attitude of the Centrists to their colleagues in the coalition Government, which has developed because of the Nationalists' failure to support the measure for prolonging the law to prevent the German courts from settling claims against the State by members of the former ruling houses.

The Centrist Party meeting yesterday approved of the independent stand of its faction in the Reichstag and instructed the members to act in future according to their policies and not to support the Government merely because the party was represented in the Cabinet.

The tariff bill introduced into the Reichstag by the Government is also opposed by the National Council, which decided against its introduction in the present form. Dr. Curtius, the Minister of Commerce, did not join in the discussion of the bill, but contented himself with nodding approval or grinning sarcastically while the bill was lauded or assailed by party speakers.

After bitter attacks by Socialists and Democrats, the bill was sent to the Committee on Commercial Policies, but it is expected that it will be returned in a few days, as it must be acted on before July 15, when the Reichstag adjourns for the Summer recess.

Ex-Kaiser's Wife Gets His Former Palace In Berlin for Her Vacation in Germany

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 4.—Princess Hermine will take up her residence in the Wilhelm, the great palace on Unter den Linden, on July 12, according to the radical Welt am Abend.

The wife of the ex-Kaiser is coming to Germany for her annual vacation, as provided for in her marriage contract with the former monarch, and this time, instead of visiting a watering place or her former Silesian home, will reside, at least for part of her holiday, in the erstwhile royal house awarded to the Hohenzollerns by the Prussian Government. Several months ago four large rooms of this building were renovated and fitted as living quarters.

For the first time since Wilhelm the Great relegated an unused tub to the attic, with the remark he would go to a watering place when he wanted a bath, the palace has been fitted with a bathroom.

Hermine has fitted up as a salon the historic room with a large bay window from which the former Emperor daily viewed his bodyguard goose-stepping down Unter den Linden. There was fear here that the presence of any of his family in the famous window would cause crowds to gather and endanger the public safety, as well as stir up political troubles.

The Prussian Government has already informed the wife of the ex-Kaiser that it could not guarantee her safety should she insist upon occupying this palace. Monarchistic circles refuse to state whether rumors are true or not that they are contenting themselves with the view that Hermine is a German citizen and as such should be allowed to live in the Reich where she chooses.

BRITISH RAIL UNIONS WILL DISCUSS MERGER

Conference of National Union to Consider Amalgamation of 370,000 Workers.

LONDON, July 4 (AP).—A proposed amalgamation of the three great British railway trades unions, with a total membership of 370,000, will come before the Annual Conference of the National Union of Railwaymen at Carlisle this week. The proposed amalgamation would embrace a membership of 250,000 in the National Union of Railwaymen, in the association of 70,000 locomotive engineers and firemen and 50,000 members of the Railway Mail Clerks' Association.

The three organizations frequently have followed different policies, and supporters of amalgamation declare that a unified policy would obviate difficulties of the past.

J. H. Thomas, Colonial Secretary in the late Labor Government, who is General Secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, speaking on the eve of the conference at Carlisle, said a general strike was the wrong way to achieve the right thing. He declared the general strike of May, 1926, had cost the National Union of Railwaymen £1,800,000, which had been taken out of its reserve fund. However, the union was economically sound again, he added.

COLD HITS NORTHERN CITIES

Snow Falls in Montreal—Low July Records in Buffalo.

MONTREAL, July 4 (AP).—Snow in July is a record just established in Montreal. After two days of stifling heat the thermometer took a sudden drop late yesterday and last night the city was visited with a mild, almost imperceptible, snowfall. It lasted only a few minutes.

BUFFALO, July 4 (AP).—A new low temperature mark for July was established today when the mercury fell to 46 degrees at 6 o'clock this morning, one degree below the previous record of July 11, 1898. The weather continued cool throughout the day, although generally warmer than yesterday, when chilling wind swept across the Niagara frontier and made topcoats and warm clothing desirable.

B'NAI B'RITH GROWING IN EUROPEAN CITIES

International President, Hon. A. M. Cohen of Cincinnati, Finds Jewish Order Thriving.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 4.—The growth of the B'nai B'rith is wonderful throughout Europe, but especially in Germany, the Hon. Alfred M. Cohen of Cincinnati, International President of the order, declared enthusiastically to THE NEW YORK TIMES tonight. Mr. Cohen stated that the Reich now has 102 lodges of the Jewish order, numbering nearly 10,000 members, and also many women's auxiliaries doing admirable work.

Berlin alone has nine lodges and seven ladies' organizations. Before coming to Germany the International President visited London, where he installed officers in the Grand Lodge comprising England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland. He also paid a flying visit to the lodges in Amsterdam and Rotterdam and upon leaving Berlin will visit the fifteen principal German cities, later going to Czechoslovakia, Austria, Switzerland and France.

Tomorrow he will be received by Chancellor Marx and tonight he is the guest of honor at a dinner arranged by the Berlin lodges. In regard to the impressions received since his arrival here Mr. Cohen said: "I am surprised by the flourishing conditions, and most of all by the polite treatment accorded by everybody to foreigners not speaking the country's language."

KING FUAD IN LONDON IS CHEERED BY CROWDS

Egyptian Monarch Is Greeted by King George, Prince of Wales and Government Heads.

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 4.—King Fuad of Egypt, attended by his Premier, Sarwat Pasha, and twenty-eight Nubian guards, each more than six feet tall, arrived in London today to visit King George. This is his first visit to England in seventeen years.

After crossing the Channel in a British war vessel escorted by five destroyers and five airplanes, King Fuad was received at Dover with royal ceremony. He was met by the Prince of Wales and taken to Victoria Station in a special train, where he was welcomed by King George, Premier Baldwin and Foreign Secretary Chamberlain.

Between lines of red-coated Grenadier Guards and preceded and followed by plume-helmeted detachments of the Household Cavalry, King George drove his guest in state to Buckingham Palace.

Thousands of people lined the route of the royal carriage to cheer the two monarchs and the Prince of Wales.

After visits to the cenotaph to the war dead and the tomb of the Unknown Soldier King Fuad this afternoon received a delegation from the London County Council. Tonight he was the principal guest at a state banquet at Buckingham Palace.

King Fuad's official visit ends on Wednesday, after which he will leave Buckingham Palace to take up his residence at the Egyptian legation.

During his stay in London King Fuad, who in his youth received a European education, will tour the industrial towns of England.

While in London with the King of Egypt, Premier Sarawat Pasha will confer with Sir Austen Chamberlain on Anglo-Egyptian relations.

CACHIN IMPRISONED, CHAMBER FREES HIM

French Communist Has Leading Role In Another Paris Prison Comedy.

FOUR ABSENT ON EXCUSES

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 4.—Getting into prison and getting out again is becoming a comedy here in France.

Two weeks ago Leon Daudet, Royalist leader, was taken to jail by the Prefect in person, with the whole Republican Guard on horse and afoot, a thousand policemen and a fire brigade. Within a week he was released by a mysterious telephone call, which mystery is still unsolved, although three more people have been sent to jail because of it.

Today it was the turn of the Communists. Nine of them were summoned to surrender today, and five, including Marcel Cachin and M. Gilbert, who on account of war wounds was obliged to use crutches, obeyed the summons. The other four were absent for many curious reasons.

The first could not come because he was doing his reserve service in a training camp. The second could not come and was excused because he was at his mother-in-law's funeral. The third could not come because he was a delegate at a Railway Men's Congress and could not leave. The fourth could not come because he was away from Paris and will not return until tomorrow or the next day.

It was about 3 P. M. that the five Communists presented themselves at the prison door and in exchange for their summons got a ticket admitting them as inmates in La Sante Prison. Then, everything being in order, they went with their supporters to a neighboring café to celebrate their imprisonment.

Such was Act I in today's comedy. Act II took place in the Chamber of Deputies.

Before any Ministers had arrived, the Socialist Deputy Charles Barron got up and demanded that the Chamber vote that M. Cachin's detention be postponed until at least the end of the Parliamentary session. M. Cachin, he said, was a member of an important commission on oil and his presence was absolutely necessary for the work of the commission. His imprisonment, besides being questionable business legally, was exceedingly inconvenient.

Moved by this appeal, the Chamber then solemnly began to vote M. Cachin out of prison again. Louis Barthou, the Minister of Justice, had nothing to say, and all of the Right except a few abstained from voting, while the Left and Centre declared it wanted M. Cachin back.

At 7:30 P. M. the Communist leader walked out of prison again, a free man at least temporarily.

CURLEY SAYS MASS ON THE ILE DE FRANCE

Archbishop of Baltimore Holds Services in the Chapel on the New French Liner.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ON BOARD THE STEAMSHIP ILE DE FRANCE, July 4.—Several hundred Americans bound for Continental Europe attended one of the most impressive religious services ever held aboard ship when Archbishop Michael J. Curley of Baltimore said mass in the beautiful little chapel of the Ile de France yesterday morning. The ship's orchestra played religious music.

At the close of the mass Archbishop Curley thanked the officials of the French Line on behalf of all American Catholics for being the first transatlantic steamship company to provide passengers with a complete church. His Grace expressed hope that other ships would soon be equipped with similar places of worship.

An interesting feature of the service was the presence of a large number of second and third class passengers.

Assisting Archbishop Curley were the Very Rev. Mgr. Stickney of the Cathedral of Baltimore, the Very Rev. Joseph Bruneau of St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore and the Rev. David T. Odeyer, assistant to the Chancellor of the Catholic University.

On her maiden eastbound voyage the Ile de France is carrying a record number of passengers—1,500. The first class passengers were surprised yesterday morning when at breakfast time they received copies of THE SUNDAY TIMES, minus the late news sections.

PLANS TO ROW TO INDIA.

Dane Will Resume Trip Which Ended in a Drowning Off Spain.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 4.—Niels Ventegodt, Danish explorer and a member of the Viking Club of Denmark, left London today on his way to Santander, Spain, where he with two friends will embark in a rowboat for India.

Mr. Ventegodt last year rowed with Christian Hansen from Copenhagen the 2,629 nautical miles to Santander. Off that city his boat sank and Mr. Hansen was drowned. That was the longest trip ever made in a rowboat.

Mr. Ventegodt will start on July 10 in his twenty-seven-foot boat. He will follow the Spanish and Portuguese coasts to Gibraltar, where he will turn into the Mediterranean and row to Syria. He will take his boat overland to the Euphrates, which he will follow to the Persian Gulf, thence going to Bombay.

The explorer and his friends will take only two oars.

French Getting More Irritated With Italy As Reckless Shooting at Border Continues

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 4.—There is growing irritation in France because of the long series of incidents and almost continual friction on the Italian frontier.

Orders have been given by the French Government to avoid trouble at almost any cost, but reports indicate that unless the Italians control the zeal of their frontier guards there is danger of a really serious incident.

There have been many complaints from the Alpine region because of the number of shells which "by mistake" explode in French territory due to the wild shooting of the Italian artillerymen who have a practice field across the border from Chambery.

A dispatch to Le Matin from Chambery today says that last evening about 10 o'clock an Italian guard shot three times at two Frenchmen who were on a road 200 yards inside the French border. The French authorities ordered an investigation, one result of which has been the statement by the Italian Consul at Chambery that this represented only zeal on the part of the Italian border guards.

Residents of the region are asking the Government to investigate a series of such incidents, as well as the repeated falling of Italian shells on French soil.

One report has it that the Italians advised the residents of a French chateau to leave because of danger from the artillery practice. It is recalled that last year the French Government sent Rome a note protesting against the effects of the artillery practice.

EXPERTS WILL INSPECT GERMANY'S FRONTIERS

France and Belgium Will Investigate Razed Fortifications on Eastern Border.

BERLIN, July 4.—French and Belgian military experts attached to their respective diplomatic corps in Berlin have received instructions to accept the invitation of General von Pawelsz to inspect the destruction of the Eastern fortifications carried out by Germany in accordance with the decision of the Ambassadors' Council.

The tour will begin the latter part of this week, and it is estimated that three weeks will be required to view the thirty-eight emplacement ordered razed.

German officials express confidence that the experts will find everything to their satisfaction and that when the trip is ended the entire question of Eastern armaments will be settled permanently. There is surprise expressed here that three weeks should be necessary to view these points, but the Government is determined to allow the Allies to satisfy themselves to the fullest rather than have the accusation brought up that all facilities for the investigations were not freely given.

TWO LOCKED IN VAULT; WHISTLE BRINGS HELP

Bank Cashier and Policeman Imprisoned as They Investigate Why Alarm Is Ringing.

Special to The New York Times.

ELIZABETH, N. J., July 4.—The assistant cashier of the People's National Bank and a policeman were locked in the vault of the bank for an hour and a half this morning when the steel door slammed behind them as they went in to ascertain why a burglar alarm was pounding. W. H. Felton, the assistant cashier, went to the bank to receive a deposit from the Public Service Corporation's collector. When the collector failed to reach the bank at 8:45 A. M., the designated time, the cashier went to a telephone to inquire the reason for the delay.

While he was telephoning, the burglar alarm sounded and brought Patrolman John Whelan. Felton let the patrolman into the bank and the two went to the vault. Felton unlocked the door, leaving his keys in the lock. As they stepped inside the door closed on them.

Whelan blew his whistle to attract attention and a large crowd gathered outside the bank. After some delay some one in the crowd noticed that a transom over the front door was partly open and a small boy was lifted up through the transom. He opened the front door and admitted other policemen who soon freed Whelan and Felton. The sounding of the alarm, it was learned, was caused by a defect in the mechanism.

ASSERTS CITY LET ILLEGAL CONTRACTS

Bullock Says No Public Bids Were Asked on Awards Involving $2,386,064.

SEES TAMMANY'S HAND

Declares Administration Promises to Outdo Hylan's in Awards to "Privileged" Contractors.

Through the director of its City Affairs Bureau, William Bullock, the Republican County Committee attacked yesterday the Walker Administration for letting contracts without public bidding. He asserted that in eighteen months 166 such contracts involving $2,386,064 had been give out, all with the consent of the Board of Aldermen and the Mayor, but, according to Mr. Bullock, illegally.

The contracts referred to vary in size from $1,100 to $150,000 and many city departments are concerned. Mr. Bullock lists all the contracts. His statement says:

"The record shows that the present Administration took up the practice of unlawful contract favoritism where the Hylan administration left off, and has gone still further in eliminating competition and thereby opening the door to waste and favoritism. George W. Olvany, James J. Walker and their high fellow-associates in Fourteenth Street forget or overlook the facts of city contract letting contrary to law when they talk to the public of a 'new' Tammany. But the record proves that the 'Old Tammany' is quietly on the job."

The law provides that a department head may not make an expenditure without public letting for contract work without getting permission of the Board of Aldermen if the amount involved is more than $1,000. In each instance the action taken by the Board of Aldermen has to be approved by the Mayor. The present Board of Aldermen is almost wholly Democratic, having only two Republican members.

Outcry Against Practice Recalled.

Slightly more than a year ago there was an outcry against the practice that Mr. Bullock now assails. The publicity then caused the Aldermen to hold up applications totaling about $400,000 for one week, to give department heads a chance to explain the urgency of each case, as, theoretically, permission to make such contracts without public letting is given only in cases of emergency. At the end of the week the applications were all granted, but Aldermanic President McKee, Charles A. McManus, Vice Chairman, and others condemned the practice. Mr. McManus said he saw no reason why department heads should make the Aldermen "the goats."

Mr. Bullock's list includes the $400,000 involved when the previous agitation occurred, but he lists in addition expenditures totalling nearly $2,000,000 more and says "requests pending for other contracts to be let as Tammany city officials pick and choose carry the total to approximately $2,500,000." The work covered, he says, includes repairs to streets, painting of fireboats, repair of ferries, hire of scows, hire of buses to transport school children, purchase of coal, automobiles, automobile equipments and parts, office furniture, chemicals, oil, gasoline and horses.

Cites Record Under Hylan.

"In the last three years of the Hylan Administration 170 contracts were taken out of competition," he goes on. "In the past six months the present Tammany Administration has been speeding up its contract favoritism, letting eighty-one contracts without competition for $1,143,206, and promises far to exceed the Hylan Administration in the number of contracts freed of bidding and also in the amount released for privileged contractors."

Mr. Bullock goes on to quote a decision of the Appellate Division that to make contracts for ferryboat repair without public letting is illegal. In spite of the decision, he says, the present Administration "hardly entered office before it took ferryboat repair out of competition." He recalls that Commissioner Goldman of the Department of Plant and Structures asked for $14,000 to be spent on such repairs on Feb. 16, 1926, and says it was rushed through the Board of Aldermen.

He takes up the action of the Board of Education last year in asking permission to hire buses to transport crippled children to school. There was no public letting, he points out. The amount last year he gives as $40,000; this year $55,000.

Touches on Fund Granted to Byrne.

Mr. Bullock mentions twelve contracts for furnishing offices in Brooklyn for which Borough President Byrne was allowed $189,017, and says Borough President Connolly obtained $30,000 for furniture and other equipment for the Queens County Clerk and $6,500 for furniture for his own office. The Board of Education, he asserts, similarly was allowed $23,500 for filing equipment, and $20,000 for furniture and equipment for a new Municipal Court was taken out of competition.

The Administration, he says, spent in the Street Cleaning Department in 1926, without public letting, $100,000 for motor vehicle equipment and accessories and tires, and the record to date in that department, he asserts, is $250,000.

Coal costing $249,900 has been bought without public letting, he declares. His list shows $150,000 of this for departments under the jurisdiction of the Mayor. He says that on Feb. 8 Borough President Connolly was allowed $10,000 for motor vehicle parts to be obtained without public letting and that on March 1 the Aldermen voted $59,000 more for the Queens Borough President without making reference to the $10,000. He also attacks allowances of $10,000 and $5,000 to County Clerk William Collins for expenses of moving from the old Court House to the new Court House. He says also:

"Albert Goldman, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, has been voted $50,000 to buy a towboat without a bid.

"Alfred A. Taylor, Street Cleaning Commissioner, has been voted $23,000 to buy a steam lighter without a bid.

"Among the contracts taken out of competition are $7,203 for President Byrne to buy electric office fans; $10,000 for the Board of Education to install a new card record system; $3,300 for the Dock Department to repair the dredge Grabit; $7,500 for draperies and other furnishings for the private dining room of the Justices in the new County Court House, and $45,100 for the Department of Correction to spend without bids on a dumping plant."

All city offices were closed yesterday and no answer from any city officials to the charges was obtainable.

3,000 TO HAVE SHAM FIGHT.

Three Branches of National Guard to Engage at Pine Camp.

Special to The New York Times.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., July 4.—As forty-eight guns were fired for the salute to the Union at the State Military camp here, where 1,300 troops from Long Island observed the holiday today, division staff officers of the New York National Guard announced plans for a sham battle at Pine Camp on Friday; infantry, artillery and aviators will participate.

The engagement will be under supervision of Brig. Gen. Ransom H. Gillett of Troy. Major Gen. William N. Haskell, commander of the guard; Colonel Edward McLeer, chief of staff, and Colonel William B. Wright, assistant chief of staff, will be observers. The units in the manoeuvres will be the 104th Field Artillery of New York City, commanded by Colonel Charles G. Blakeslee; the Twenty-seventh Air Service, commanded by Major George A. Vaughn of Miller Field, S. I.; the 174th Infantry of Buffalo, commanded by Colonel William R. Pooley, and the 105th Infantry of Troy, commonded by Colonel Walter Robinson, about 3,000 men in all.

The Fourth was celebrated quietly. Most of the men of the 106th Infantry, led by Colonel Thomas Fairservis, and the Twenty-seventh Division Trains, commanded by Major Walter Corwin, had a day off. The 106th will engage this week in field manoeuvres.

BLIND MAN WINS ADMISSION TO BAR

Augustin F. Massa, Sightless 19 Years, Realizes Life's Ambition.

HOLDS COLUMBIA DEGREES

Retentive Memory Enabled Him to Keep Scholastic Pace for Seven Years.

Blinded nineteen years ago, Augusti F. Massa of 498 East 167th Street has won his fight with his handicap and on Friday will attain his ambition, admission to the New York State bar. He is 28 years old and the first blind man in fifteen years to win this honor. Mr. Massa plans to form a partnership and hopes to specialize in criminal law along with his general practice.

The story of his struggles is known by most of the men who were graduated in the last seven years from Columbia University, and who marveled at his achievements, and his unfailing interest in the social and athletic life of the campus. Throughout his college career he was a regular attendant at intercollegiate athletic contests. Companions kept him informed of the progress of the games and he maintained a keen interest.

Unable to keep classroom notes, he devised a system of study with fellow law students who read to him and discussed legal points that arose in their studies. His memory has been developed to a state that permits retention of numerous details. When called upon in class he was able to cite points that fellow-students quoted from note books.

In 1907, when he was nine years old, Mr. Massa and some companions found two dynamite caps. He struck one and it exploded, blinding him. He then obtained his education at the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind, at Ninth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, and in 1919 applied for admission to Columbia University. The officials of the university granted him a probationary standing of one semester. His work brought him full admission. He obtained his degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1923 and his Bachelor of Laws in 1925.

His method of financing his education showed in another way that his business ability was not handicapped by blindness. The crowds at Starlight Park, in the Bronx, were attracted in the Summers of 1918-24 by a stand at which it was announced that a blind man would place his abilities as a checker player against the skill of any one in the park and would present a gift to any one who could defeat him. He offered to play eight persons at a time. By collecting a fee of 5 cents from those who tied him and 10 cents from those whom he defeated he earned $4,000 in seven Summers.

At other times he offered himself at St. Luke's Hospital, 113th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, as a subject for blood transfusion and was paid for the blood he gave. He was a regular attendant at campus dances and to the young women he was "Augie," just as he was to the athletic stars, most of whom held him a personal friend.

Since his graduation from law school Mr. Massa has been employed by the New York Life Insurance Company and has been successful. Among his sponsors when he appeared before the Character Committee of the Bar Association of New York were Representative Fiorello H. LaGuardia and Justice Edward J. McGoldrick of the Supreme Court.

Mr. Massa maintains his philosophy of optimism as he approaches his new field. Congratulations have been pouring in from old Columbia associates since it became known that he had passed his bar examinations and was to be admitted to practice.

WANT SCHOOLS FREE FROM POLITICAL TIE

Speakers at National Education Association Meeting Urge Independence.

CHICAGO AS BAD EXAMPLE

Dr. Suzzallo, Ex-Head of University of Washington, Assails Control in That City.

SEATTLE, July 4 (AP).—The 10,000 delegates and visitors attending the sixty-fifth annual convention of the National Education Association here today heard themselves referred to as the "master workmen" upon whose efforts depended the future of democracy in America. They also were exhorted to declare the independence of education from political control.

In his presidential address, Dr. Francis G. Blair of Springfield, Ill., speaking on "The American Melting Pot," declared the American school system was "in the very pit" of the melting pot and the school playground was the "greatest kindergarten of democracy ever conceived."

Dr. Henry Suzzallo, former President of the University of Washington, called upon the educators to oppose the movement toward centralization of control in education. He urged that active direction of educational matters be left to the educational profession, much as engineering matters are left to engineers and health problems left to doctors of medicine.

Dr. Suzzallo deplored the control exercised by politicians over higher education.

Holds Up Chicago as Bad Example.

"Education cannot be declared free of partisan politics until the great national profession of educators and the public, which understands the true relation of public education to government, has effectively turned its attention to the State control of higher schools and to the municipal control of common schools in some of our larger cities," Dr. Suzzallo said.

"Chicago is an example of a city where the most disgraceful demagogy of recent days has dragged the school management through a campaign of misrepresentation which is almost unparalleled. The Mayor of the city should have nothing whatever to do with the control of the schools. A Special Board of Education, elected directly by the people from a Chicago school district, should be charged with their management. There are other less dramatic instances which might be cited."

Dr. Blair asserted the teacher was the greatest force in the process by which the diversified races of the earth were molded into the American nation.

"On this, the natal day of our Republic," Dr. Blair said, "I believe that we can declare, without hesitation, that the perpetuity of this wide-flung nation, its solidarity, its unity of aim and purpose and effort, are more in the hands of the teacher than in any other one influence at work in America.

"As long as the 500,000 teachers of America are painting upon the canvas of the minds and hearts of twenty-five millions of children the great American ideals, the great faces of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, we can feel a large sense of security in the future of this Republic."

TABLET MARKS END OF SHAYS REBELLION

Marker Given by New England Society of Brooklyn Is Dedicated at Petersham, Mass.

Special to The New York Times.

PETERSHAM, Mass., July 4.—A tablet placed on the grounds of the Petersham Historical Society, opposite the Common, was dedicated today. It was presented to the historical society by the New England Society of Brooklyn, N. Y., to mark the rout and capture of insurgents under Captain Daniel Shays at Petersham on Feb. 4, 1787.

This event marked the end of the famous Shays Rebellion against the Federal Government. Captain Shays and 150 of his followers were surprised in Petersham by General Benjamin Lincoln after a night march in zero weather.

The address of presentation was by Harrington Putnam, President of the Brooklyn society and the tablet was accepted by Norman Hapgood of New York and Petersham. Mr. Hapgood's ancestors have been prominent in Petersham since Revolutionary days and Mr. Putnam comes of an old-time Shrewsbury family.

Daniel Shays with 600 followers gathered in Western Massachusetts had revolted against the Federal authorities, due to dissatisfaction with tax regulations, in September, 1786. His force had been increased to 2,000 by January, 1787, when he attempted to capture the Federal Arsenal in Springfield, but was defeated in the assault by General Shepherd and 1,200 militia.

Shays and a number of his men fled eastward, and General Lincoln with State troops cornered them a week later in Petersham. The leaders of the revolt were sentenced to death for treason, but were subsequently pardoned by Governor Hancock.

FOUR DIE AS TRAIN HITS CAR

Three Others Hurt in Grade Crossing Smash in Pennsylvania.

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 4 (AP).—Four persons were killed and three were seriously injured in a grade crossing crash at Manown, Allegheny County, early tonight. The victims were members of the family of Charles Little, 55, of Ella Hollow, near Webster, Westmoreland County.

Little, his wife, Alberta, 50, and two daughters, Mary 12, and Margaret, 8, were instantly killed. Three other children were taken to the Monongahela Hospital in a serious condition. They were: Norman, aged one; Helen, 11, and Jane, 9.

Their automobile was struck at the Manown Crossing by the Fairmont Express of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad Company. Little, who was driving, apparently did not notice the approaching train because of a sharp curve which leads to the crossing. The auto was carried several hundred feet feet down the track before the train could be brought to a stop.

bullets and a flashlight; and he did not know how many men, or how many weapons, he would face. So he turned to Chief Boatswain's Mate Madsen, who was piloting the launch, and gave a supreme exhibition of bravado.

"If I'm not out of that pilot house in two minutes, you turn the machine gun on them."

Madsen knew his little launch had no gun, but he nodded and said he understood.

Lighting his way with his flashlight, Ensign Duke groped into the deckhouse. He was stopped by a burly seaman, who called:

"Where do you think you're going?"

The Coast Guard Ensign did not stop to answer him, but cracked him on the head with the butt of his pistol. The seaman staggered backward and then went sprawling to the floor, senseless.

There was one more flight of stairs to the bridge, and Ensign Duke was anxious to reach the Captain. Every minute the boat was coming nearer to the New Jersey shore; if it reached a pier the crew could easily jump and escape. He was determined to make the Captain stop and if possible reverse engines.

The wind blew his hair as he reached the bridge, with the Statue of Liberty's torch shining coldly in the distance. Quickly he swung his flashlight and found six men, huddling in corners. In the cabin he found the Captain, intent on reaching the New Jersey shore.

"You stop this ship or I'll pull the trigger," Duke told him, and pressed his pistol against the Captain's ribs. The Captain was pleasant enough, but stubborn. He argued. He said he did not know he had already passed Quarantine. Ensign Duke countered by asking where the customs stamp was, and why the boat reeked of alcohol. He ordered the Captain to reverse his engines or turn the vessel, so that it could anchor off the Statue of Liberty and be seized by Prohibition authorities.

Ship Hits Reef.

Still the Captain demurred, and again the pistol was poked against his ribs. Finally Ensign Duke himself leaned hard on the wheel, swung the ship around. There was a jolt, however, and the ship was stuck fast on the mud of Robbins Reef, in ten feet of water.

That finished one part of Ensign Duke's task—to prevent the crew from landing. He herded the six on the bridge together and ordered them below decks saying he did not want them roaming around the decks. He called to his two aides in the Coast Guard launch, telling them to "hot-foot it to the Statue of Liberty and get some help." A suspicious-looking speedboat was circling around the Economy—without doubt the pilots who were waiting to tell the captain where to land the liquor.

He was proceeding to find a safe barricade in case of trouble when a young seaman, smooth-cheeked and boyish, came up to him pleading to be "easy" on the captain of the liquor ship. Ensign Duke pushed him away. In doing so he struck the boy with his flashlight, blackening his eye and gashing his forehead, and completely smashing the flashlight.

"We got together on our differences later," Ensign Duke explained yesterday, a little sorry for what he had done. "He was a nice boy and he didn't mean any harm. The skipper must have been good to him on the voyage, and he wanted me to be good to the skipper if I could."

Launch Speeds for Aid.

Meanwhile the two Coast Guardsmen were speeding in their launch to the army bararcks on Bedlow's Island. They reached the Statue at 12:30 A. M., but for some reason the soldiers refused to let them use the telephone. So they had to cross to the way to the Barge Office, and help was sent out at once. Instead of going to Robbins Reef, however, the Coast Guardsmen went to Weehawken and had to come all the way down the west shore until they found Ensign Duke on his boat.

The cutter Calumet arrived on the scene at about 2 A. M., but could not get close on account of the mud. Patrol Boat 122 went aground on the mud flats; Patrol Boat 143 came dangerously close to grounding. It was not until 6 o'clock in the morning that the first help came to Ensign Duke aboard the captured vessel. He did not get off the boat until 10, when a guard had been stationed to watch the crew.

At 11 o'clock Ensign Duke sauntered in to the floating Coast Guard headquarters at Stapleton to report to Lieut. Commander E. D. Jones, his superior officer.

"He looked as unruffled as if he were just coming down to breakfast after a sound sleep," said the commander. "His uniform was bedraggled from the salt water, and he needed a shave. But you would never have imagined that that man had been on duty continuously for twenty-six hours."

Commander Jones told him to go to bed at once, and allowed no one to disturb him until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. When the Ensign awoke he told his story sitting alongside his pretty, blue-eyed bride of fifteen months in their their apartment at 29 Avon Place, Tompkinsville.

"I wish he wouldn't do things like that," said Mrs. Duke, talking of the capture. "It's kind of risky, jumping on boats like that, all alone."

Duke Served in Navy.

Ensign Duke, six feet tall, with black hair and dark eyes, has a soft, Southern accent. He was born in Washington, D. C. He went through the public schools and graduated from high school there. When the war broke out he enlisted in the navy and was assigned to destroyer duty in Europe. He was discharged in 1921, when he was 21 years old, and joined the staff of the Washington Star. He remained in newspaper work for four years, leaving it to join the Coast Guard. His first assignment was on the cutter Gresham, with the temporary rank of ensign, a grade employed in the enlargement of the Coast Guard to help enforce the prohibition law. Later he was assigned to the floating headquarters at Stapleton.

The Economy, with its guard and prisoners still aboard, remains fast in the mud off Robbins' Reef. An attempt will be made to float her today and also to determine the extent of her liquor cargo. It was reported yesterday that the vessel contained 3,000 drums of alcohol containing fifty gallons apiece and worth at bootleg prices $500,000.

The Greypoint, a steel screw steamer of 785 tons, was owned by the Kirkwood Line, Ltd., of Belfast. She cleared from Antwerp, with her present liquor cargo consigned to the British West Indies. It is believed that she stopped in Halifax to take aboard her Nova Scotian crew, and then, after clearing from Halifax, had her name changed for the entry to New York.

PLATTSBURG ROOKIES HAVE STRENUOUS 4TH

Training Camp Men Join Regulars for Holiday Program After Taking Oath of Allegiance.

Special to The New York Times.

PLATTSBURG BARRACKS, N. Y., July 4.—Tumbling sleepy-eyed out of their tents at 5:30 reveille bugle, the 1,600 rookies in the Plattsburg C. M. T. Camp joined the regulars of the Twenty-sixth United States Infantry today in a typical army garrison national holiday. Included was the impressive ceremony of taking the oath of allegiance in the parade grounds, then a two-mile parade through Plattsburg streets swinging their arms in imitation of seasoned infantrymen behind the regimental band, then the firing of the national salute of forty-eight guns at high noon, athletic events in the afternoon and a band concert and fireworks on the shores of Lake Champlain this evening.

At 9 o'clock this morning Colonel John H. Hughes, camp commander, addressed the student regiment on the aims of the camp, expectations of the army instructors and the elements of citizenship to be taught here. Then, with bared heads and raised right hands, they responded in unison as Chaplain H. D. Southard of the regulars led them in the oath. "I do solemnly swear," they repeated, "that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America and while at this camp I will obey those in authority and observe all the rules and regulations of the camp to the best of my ability, so help me God."

Luther H. Berry of 448 Fourteenth Avenue, Irvington, N. J., got away to a good lead in the individual athletic competitions this afternoon with 13 points. He won the 50-yard sprint, the 50-yard sack race and placed second in the potato race.

The Rev. Francis P. Duffy of war fame, now head of the Catholic Summer school near the barracks, is expected to visit the C. M. T. camp this week.

PLANS NEW TESTS OF HEAT IN STARS

Dr. Abbot, Smithsonian Scientist, Has New Radiometer Made Partly of Flies' Wings.

HOPES TO WIDEN 1923 DATA

Experiments at Mount Wilson Are Expected to Record Spectra of Faintest Stellar Bodies.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Equipped with apparatus which he says is delicate enough to measure a match's heat 5,000 miles away if no atmosphere intervened, Dr. Charles G. Abbot, Acting Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, has left for Mount Wilson in California, to continue measurements there on the heat of the spectra of the stars.

The first determinations of the heat spectra of ten of the brighter stars except the sun, in the history of astronomy, were made by Dr. Abbot in the Summer of 1923. To accomplish this he used the great 100-inch reflector of the Mount Wilson Observatory of the Carnegie Institution and a sensitive radiometer constructed by the late Professor E. F. Nichols of Cleveland.

This combination of instruments was so powerful, Dr. Abbot said, that "if the earth were flat and the atmosphere perfectly transparent, it would have been possible to have measured with it in California the heat of a match struck on the Mississippi River."

The radiometer is a "first cousin" to the black vanes that turn in glass bulbs in opticians' windows.

Even with this sensitive apparatus only the light of the brightest stars could be observed after being spread out in a long spectrum. Consequently, in the intervening years Dr. Abbot, with the advice of Dr. Anderson of Pasadena, and assisted by the Bureau of Standards, has prepared a new radiometer which he hopes will prove ten times more sensitive than the first and which will make it possible to observe the heat of the spectra of the stars fainter than the Pole Star. This radiometer is so delicate, it is asserted, that flies' wings are used in its construction.

In 1923 Dr. Abbot found surface temperatures ranging from 16,000 degree Centigrade (28,000 degrees Fahrenheit) on Rigel, to 2,600 degrees Centigrade (4,600 degrees Fahrenheit) on Betelguese. Eddington has estimated theoretically that in their interiors the stars reach temperatures as high as 40,000,000 degrees Centigrade.

From his temperature measurements and known star distances, Dr. Abbot computed the diameters of the stars measured. The results ranged from 400,000,000 miles diameter for Alpha Hercules to 1,000,000 miles for Procyon. The latter is only slightly greater than the diameter of our sun. Dr. Abbot remarked that in spite of the distances of the stars from the earth—which he said ran up to hundreds of trillions of miles—the heat given off by such a star as Capella if collected over the area of the State of Oregon would be equivalent to one horsepower in energy.

Girl of 7 Is Burned to Death.

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass., July 4 (AP).—Mary Sweeney, 7 years old, was burned to death today when her clothing became ignited as she was exploding firecrackers. Her mother, Mrs. Patrick Sweeney, was severely burned about the arms and body in attempting to save the child.

CONVICTS HELD BACK AS CANOEISTS SINK

carrying them steadily inshore, especially the third man, who apparently could swim a little. Had they been able to hold out a trifle longer all would have been saved, said Warden Lawes.

The movement by the inmates to six men. They were Robert McCabe, aid in the effort at rescue was led by Peter Geis, Harry Burke, William Davidson, Anthony Maximina and Charles Bang. These men offered to plunge into the river and bring the canoeists ashore, when trusties were dispatched to the prison office to notify keepers on duty there to summon Frank Minnerly, Chief of Police of Ossining.

Minnerly and several policemen searched the shore, and just south of the pier they found the waterlogged canoe, which had drifted to the beach. It was a green canoe, with two seats, and bore the number 63777-17. It had a black bottom and was finished in natural wood inside. Two sails were shipped in the bottom near a suitcase bearing the initials "J. H. A." and showing that the owner's home was in New York City. The suitcase contained three lunches.

Policemen with grappling hooks began a search for the bodies but had been unsuccessful up to tonight. Police Headquarters in Manhattan was notified to watch out for canoeists reported missing.

Attempt to Escape.

In connection with the refusal of the guards to permit prisoners to make an attempt at rescue it was explained at Sing Sing that a recent happening had made keepers skeptical of "rescues" in the Hudson. Six weeks ago a prisoner, Norman Randall, pretended to have fallen overboard and was seen swimming in the river off the prison pier. Another inmate "volunteered" to save him. The second man was permitted to plunge into the river, and when he landed with Randall it developed that the "drowning" man had two rubber inner tubes, fully inflated, strapped under his arms. The volunteer rescuer, it developed, was Randall's brother, and they had planned a daring attempt to escape.

"The warden has the authority," said one of the guards, "to use discretion in an emergency and to take a chance. No such discretion is allowed to a keeper. With him, orders are orders and must be strictly obeyed. That's why those fellows with the canoe perished without any help from the prison."

Another instance where a prisoner abused a privilege was cited in explanation of the guards' failure to go themselves to the rescue or to permit their charges to do so. This was the case of Thomas Burke, a prisoner, who gave his word of honor six years ago that he would make no break for liberty if permitted to visit his sick child in Manhattan. On the way back he jumped from a subway train and has not been seen since.

FIVE DROWN, 11 RESCUED.

Brothers Perish in Pelham Bay Within Sight of 20,000.

Arthur Piczzuco, 19 years old of 277 East 154th Street, was drowned yesterday afternoon in Pelham Bay while attempting to rescue his younger brother, Leo, 12, who was also drowned. The accident occurred only 200 feet from shore within the sight of 20,000 persons, none of whom apparently saw it.

The boys had gone out from Kane's boathouse in a rowboat with a friend, Joseph Palino, 17, 298 East 154th Street. Leo, wearing a bathing suit, dived overboard when about 200 feet out. He failed to come to the surface, and his brother, fully clothed, went after him. He, too, did not come up.

Palino stood in the boat and screamed for help, but the crowd ashore, intent on its own pleasures, did not hear him because of the shouts and racket of automobiles. Palino yelled and gesticulated unavailingly and then rowed ashore and made known what had happened. Boats put out, but could not find the bodies.

A squall that swept suddenly across Gravesend Bay yesterday afternoon overturned a canoe containing Joseph Herzberg, 20 years old, of 114 St. Mark's Place, Brooklyn, and two companions. Herzberg was drowned and his companions were rescued by two 15-year-old boys.

Herzberg and his friends, Herman Davidowitz, 19, of 628 East Ninth Street, and Aaron Buchman, 19, of 204 Avenue B, Manhattan, started out from a club landing at the foot of West Twenty-ninth Street, Coney Island, on the bay side. About 200 yards off the Atlantic Yacht Club at West Thirty-seventh Street, they were capsized. Davidowitz and Buchman could swim and they started for the shore.

The two youths were soon exhausted. Milton Schwartz of 33 Bayview Terrace, Sea Gate, and David Harris of 3,627 Canal Avenue, Coney Island, heard the cries for help, kicked off their shoes and brought Davidowitz and Buchman to the beach. They did not learn about Herzberg, who had been clinging to the canoe, until they reached the shore.

The boys swam back to the canoe but could find no trace of Herzberg. Policemen on the police boat Gypsy recovered the body half an hour later, and it was sent to the Kings County Morgue. Buchman and Davidowitz were treated by Dr. Polvin of the Coney Island Hospital.

The rescue was the second in which Schwartz had participated yesterday. Three hours earlier he had helped to get persons down the fire escapes and to the street in a fire which destroyed two three-family houses at 2,758 and 2,760 West Twenty-sixth Street, Brooklyn.

The boy climbed the fire escapes, roused the tenants and helped them down. In descending he slipped from the ladder and fell, cutting his head which was treated by a surgeon from the Coney Island Hospital. He was sent home after the treatment, but remained there only a short time when he went down to the beach.

Edward C. Wogan, 24 years old, of 67 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, died a few minutes after plunging into the cold waters of the Atlantic at Cherry Grove, near Patchogue, L. I. Wogan had just come from the Sayville ferry and was the first to leave the boat and dash into a bath house. Before the last passenger had left the craft, Wogan had entered the water. Coroner Edwin S. Moore said that death had been caused by acute dilation of the heart. Wogan's permanent home was in New Orleans.

The body of a man believed by the police to be Frederick Oscar Scholman, 53 years old, of 162½ Beach Street, Jersey City, was found off Tottenville, S. I. Scholman had been in the water only a short time when found. He had gone in bathing somewhere and evidently had been overcome.

William Asterwaite, 46 years old, no home, was taken to Bellevue Hospital suffering from submersion and from contusions of the face, after he had been rescued from the East River off Coenties Slip. Patrolman Miller of the Old Slip Station and several longshoremen threw a rope about Asterwaite's neck after he had slipped and fallen into the river.

Three men were rescued off Arverne, L. I., by life guards. They were Max Singer of 81 Watson Street, Julius Levy of 124 Lehigh Avenue and Emanuel Heiber of 75 Pershing Avenue, Newark.

Five were rescued at Far Rockaway. They were Miss Kitty Fink of 1,334 Hamilton Place, Far Rockaway; Mrs. H. Gallagher of 938 East Thirty-fourth Street, Brooklyn; Samuel Solomon of 183 West 115th Street, Manhattan; H. J. Bunting of 540 Riverside Drive, Manhattan, and Edward Brown of 235 Cypress Avenue, the Bronx.

JUDGES SELECTED FOR NEGRO AWARDS

Leaders in All Branches Will Bestow Second Annual Harmon Prizes.

DR. HAYNES CITES AIMS

Contest to Bring Out Achievement of the Race Will Be Decided on "Emancipation Day."

Leaders in American art, literature, music, science, religion, education and business were announced yesterday as judges of the second annual William E. Harmon Awards for Distinguished Achievement Among Negroes. Dr. George E. Haynes, Secretary of the Commission on the Church and Race Relations of the Federal Council of Churches, who is administering the awards for the Harmon Foundation, will receive entries at his office, 105 East Twenty-second Street, until Aug. 15. The judges will make public their decisions on "Emancipation Day," Jan. 1, 1928.

All the awards are limited to negroes except that in race relations, which is open to white persons also. The awards total $4,000. In each class there will be a first prize of $400 with a gold medal and a second prize of $100 with a bronze medal, except in race relations, where a single award of $500 with a gold medal will be made.

"Through the judgment of the judges, based upon a comparison of the entries with the best achievement of its kind by either white or colored persons," said Dr. Haynes, "the Harmon Foundation hopes to interpret the actual worth of negro work, detached from the handicap of color. Since it is known as a disinterested organization, devoted to stimulating original achievements, it is believed that the series of awards it is sponsoring may give a substantial standing with both races to the exceptional work of the negro and eventually bring about a relief from the opposition he now feels in economic circles. The fact that Palmer C. Hayden, who while earning his living as a house cleaner was given last year's first award in fine arts, has received a fund of $3,000 for study in Europe by a New York woman of means following his recognition, may be taken as indicative that this theory is taking hold."

The judges follow:

If you could add ten years—would you?

ONE income we have, which during youth seems limitless and inexhaustible—the glorious expenditure of twenty-four hours every day.

But, as the years pass and the thought of age looms darkly before us, these hours we once squandered away so joyously become precious indeed. We begin to dread the incredible rapidity with which the years pass by. . . .

Now, age in truth is inevitable! But the early old age that assails so many of us is not! It is unnatural! Unnecessary, often, for science knows what is probably one of the principal causes of it . . . and it can now often be prevented.

Here are the facts. Physicians have always told us that many of the ills we suffer, whose attacks gradually wear down the system, are due to abuse of the digestive organs. That is because our faulty modern diet encourages harmful bacteria in the intestines of the average person. These bacteria create poisons which are absorbed by the body. They thrive on the diet of the average adult. They breed rapidly, and if unchecked, severe symptoms result. The health of the individual falls below par.

Implanting the helpful bacteria

But these harmful organisms can be replaced by the beneficial organism, Bacillus Acidophilus, by drinking milk in which it has been cultured.

Four years ago the Lederle Antitoxin Laboratories undertook the production of Bacillus Acidophilus milk. They applied to this difficult problem the scientific knowledge and skill required during years of experience with micro-organisms.

As a result, Lederle's Acidophilus Milk is unsurpassed in purity, flavor and efficacy. When you take it, you know it does contain Acidophilus bacilli that are capable of reproduction in the intestines. And you know they are present in sufficient quantities to be effective in replacing germs of decay.

Now, after years of practical experience a prominent physician has expressed the opinion that the use of Acidophilus milk can possibly add as much as ten years to the average span of life. Ten years! . . . Will you try to add them to your life?

Lederle's Acidophilus Milk is a beneficial drink. Drink it freely. Let it help keep you well and preserve the vigor of youth.

In the treatment of disease, your doctor should be consulted; self-medication is unwise.

Lederle Acidophilus Milk

Lederle's Acidophilus Milk is on sale at all high-class drug stores. Buy it at fountains for lunch. Your druggist will gladly deliver it regularly at your home. It is served at the better hotels, restaurants and clubs.

Made by the famous International Wet-Blending Process, Lone Star Cement has established a new high standard of quality and uniformity.

ROADS..that pay for your GASOLINE

YOU save as much as 2.4 cents a mile when you drive on concrete. Actual tests prove this saving in operating costs. Tire wear alone is cut in half.

As a matter of fact, concrete roads actually save you the price of gasoline. To say nothing of the added pleasure and comfort. Obviously, it costs more to do without concrete roads than it does to have them.

You do not see the cement in a concrete highway. If it is Lone Star Cement you don't have to. You can rely on it. Just as thousands of users do, from Maine to Texas and from Florida to the Dakotas.

INDIANA LAYS STONE FOR WAR MEMORIAL

Gen. Pershing Wields Trowel in Ceremonies at Central Shrine of Indianapolis Plaza.

HEADS VETERANS' PARADE

Commander of A. E. F. in Tribute to Heroes Stresses Importance of Peace-Time Patriotism.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 4 (AP).—To its men of valor Indiana today turned its attention, thousands of citizens viewing the laying of the cornerstone of the central shrine of the World War memorial by General John J. Pershing.

The ceremony at the shrine, where the leader of the American Expeditionary Force delivered a eulogy to those Indianians of his command who never came back, followed a parade of 5,000 war veterans and members of auxiliary units. At the head of the column of khaki-clad former service men rode General Pershing, escorted by the "black horse troop" of Culver Military Academy and a distinguished group of military men.

As General Pershing reviewed the parade he returned with crisp hand salute the like gesture of each platoon commander as he neared the stand.

Upon completion of the parade, General Pershing, his aides and Brig. Gen. Dwight E. Aultman, Commandant of Fort Benjamin Harrison, and Governor Jackson went to the base of the memorial shrine, where the cornerstone laying ceremonies were completed. General Aultman introduced General Pershing.

Duties of Citizenship Constant.

The A. E. F. commander exhorted his hearers to peace-time patriotism.

"The obligations of citizenship are constant and imperative," General Pershing enunciated clearly into several amplifiers and microphones which carried his voice to the thousands of spectators out of earshot and radio listeners. Only so long as the citizen retains his interest and exercises his functions in support of good government, just so long will he have good government.

"The patriot does not fail in the performance of his obligations either in peace or war. It is quite as easy to lose our liberty through default or neglect as it would be to lose it through failure to defend it by force of arms.

"This memorial, that has its beginning today, will be one of rare beauty and dignity, typifying the devoted lives of your sons to the cause of liberty. It will become a shrine which we shall visit to revive our patriotism and to renew the impulses of our democracy.

"It is here that we shall come to receive the inspiration to unselfish service to country. It is here that we shall come to learn patriotism through the illuminating example of men who gave all that they were and all that they had to the honor and glory of our country."

General Pershing mounted the half-finished base of the imposing shrine upon completion of his speech and participated in a brief but stirring "parade of the colors" by members of the Black Horse troop. The final flag unfurled was the academy's gold-star banner, upon which General Pershing hung a wreath.

In the cornerstone laying he placed the mortar with deft hands and superintended the work until a spirit level showed the large block of Bedford stone was perfectly in line with the other masonry.

History of Memorial Enclosed.

Into a copper box inside the cornerstone went a history of the development of the World War memorial, the names of Indiana's 140,000 war veterans, a copy of President Wilson's declaration of war and a copy of the Versailles Treaty.

The building for which the cornerstone was laid is the central structure in a half-mile-long downtown memorial plaza. The entire plaza project's cost, including that of condemnation of property, will be about $10,000,000, with $3,000,000 of that sum expended upon the ornate central shrine.

General Pershing arrived in Indianapolis early this morning on a special train from Galion, Ohio, where a number of city and State officials and army officers from Fort Harrison and National Guard units had gone to meet him. He was the honor guest at a luncheon following the parade and ceremonies, and departed for Boston this afternoon.

ARKANSAS OFFICIALS HERE.

Governor Martineau and Others Come to Sign $13,000,000 Notes.

Governor John E. Martineau of Arkansas, accompanied by Secretary of State Carroll V. Cone, State Auditor James B. Higgins and State Highway Commissioner D. H. Blackwood, arrived in this city from Little Rock yesterday and will remain several days to sign State highway notes aggregating $13,000,000 face value which are being issued on the authority of the Arkansas Legislature to replace an outstanding issue of good roads bonds. The officials will use a mechanical device in affixing their signatures, since to sign the bonds one by one would require ten days.

Governor Martineau and his party are at the Hotel McAlpin. During their stay the Governor, who is accompanied by Mrs. Martineau, and the others will be entertained by former Arkansans now in this city, including Marcus L. Bell, General Counsel and Vice President of the Rock Island Railway; Samuel W. Reyburn, President of Lord & Taylor, and Meyer Solmson, Managing Editor of The New York Morning Telegraph.

America's Largest Savings Bank

EMIGRANT—still the Only Savings Bank in the City paying interest for every calendar month your money is on deposit!

51 CHAMBERS STREET
NEW YORK

ADDRESS REPLY TO MAIN OFFICE

June 15, 1927.

GRAND CENTRAL BRANCH
42ND STREET AT LEXINGTON AVENUE

The Question

DEAR SIR,

I enclose clippings from two bank advertisements; one of them—yours—states that you are "the only savings bank in the city paying interest for every calendar month your money is on deposit." The other—the advertisement of another savings institution—says "interest from the first of each month."

I wish very much that you would explain the difference between these two statements. As a mere average reader of newspapers I can see no difference, yet manifestly there must be such since your advertisement to my mind seems to indicate as much.

Needless to say I am in no way connected with any bank, nor know anyone in the business, otherwise I would not be troubling you with this, maybe, stupid question, but I would thank you to explain it to me.

Very truly yours,
James J. Broughton

Mr. James J. Broughton,
New York, N.Y.

My dear Sir:

Your letter of June 10th has my earnest attention this morning.

Since July 1, 1922, the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank has allowed a full month's interest on all sums of money deposited before the third day of any month and remaining in the Bank until the first day of the following month.

During the past year or two, many other savings banks of the City have followed this plan, but only part way. They allow interest from the first of each month provided the money remains in the bank until the end of the quarter; otherwise it draws no interest. For example, money deposited April 1st and withdrawn June 29th will receive no interest,—a loss of nearly three months' interest.

In the Emigrant, the same money could be withdrawn even as early as May 1st and receive full interest for April and at the rate of the last quarterly dividend.

You are, therefore, quite right in your surmise that there is a difference in the meaning of the two advertisements you mention. We have tried to advertise our plan in a plain, understandable way, and the growth of our business and our continued position as the largest savings bank in the United States, and probably in the world, satisfies us that the true facts are gradually percolating.

I thank you very much for writing me, and I trust that my answer is satisfactory.

Very truly yours,
John J. Pulleyn
PRESIDENT.

Therefore—money deposited on or before July 5th will receive interest for July even if you withdraw it as early as August 1st!

The test of any interest plan comes when necessity compels you to withdraw money.

THE first half of this year has been the biggest The Globe-Democrat has ever had in display advertising.

This newspaper broke all its own past records for a half year by carrying 5,867,308 lines of display advertising. This total eclipsed by 208,674 lines The Globe-Democrat's previous high mark for a corresponding period.

There is significance, too, in the fact that The Globe-Democrat was the only St. Louis newspaper which showed gains in total display advertising during these first six months of 1927.

All the other St. Louis newspapers are evening papers, one of them publishing also on Sunday, as does The Globe-Democrat.

The steady, consistent gains of The Globe-Democrat were climaxed by the biggest June business in the history of the paper—a total of 929,378 lines of display advertising—a gain of 38,558 lines over the previous peak June.

Yes—business is fine in The 49th State.

SETS FIRE TO FLAT, THEN KILLS HIMSELF

Father of Four First Notifies Girl and Invalid Mother Next Door of Blaze.

FOUND DEAD, PISTOL IN HAND

Daughter Says His Wife Left Him After Quarrel and He Had Been Out of Work Some Time.

Rose Cucunato, 18 years old, who lives with her invalid mother on the top floor of the six-story tenement at 54 Rector Street, answered a knock at her door shortly before noon yesterday. In the hallway stood Ignatzio Marino, 55 years old, tenant of a three-room apartment on the same floor.

"My apartment is on fire," said Marino; "take your mother out of the house."

Frightened, although not even able to smell any smoke, Rose got her mother out of bed and assisted her to a front fire-escape. Marino, meanwhile, had returned to his apartment, entered and closed his door. While on the fire-escape Rose said she heard a pistol shot, but paid little attention to it at the time.

Passersby saw smoke coming from the windows of Marino's apartment and turned in an alarm. Battalion Chief Benjamin Levy, in charge of the apparatus that responded, entered Marino's apartment and saw Marino lying face down on his bed. There was, Chief Levy said, a separate fire in each of the three rooms. The blazes were quickly extinguished.

Turning Marino over, Chief Levy found that he had a pistol in his hand and a bullet hole back of his right ear. He was dead. Examination showed that the bullet had caused death and that neither smoke nor fire had harmed him.

Detectives learned that Marino had lived in the apartment with his wife, two daughters and a son. Mrs. Anna Saffo, a married daughter of Marino, who lives around the corner at 114 Monroe Street, told the detectives her mother and father had quarreled about a week ago. At that time, she said, her mother had gone to visit relatives in Rochester, N. Y., taking her two unmarried daughters with her.

Mrs. Saffo said her father had been out of work for some time and that had added to his despondency. She was not certain, but thought that his son, James, 21 years old, had left his father a day or so ago. Death was said to have been self-inflicted. The firemen and detectives also believed that he had set fire to his apartment.

The building houses twenty-four families. Intense excitement prevailed in the neighborhood when the nature of the tragedy became known. An autopsy will be performed today on Marino's body.

"Proclaim Liberty throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof"—Leviticus XXV, 10

FIVE SIMPLE HEBREW WORDS which were taught the children of Israel by Moses.

But they have been the guiding principle of this great Republic. From this brief sentence have been evolved the basic ideas of LIBERTY, EQUALITY, RIGHTEOUSNESS, JUSTICE, PEACE, OPPORTUNITY.

The Jewish Citizens of this country thrill to these words inscribed on the bell of liberty which bind them equally to the noblest traditions of America and to their ancient spiritual treasure house, the Bible.

BUT--

How many Jewish children in this country are able to read and understand the original text of the inscription on the Liberty Bell?

The Jewish Education Association has set itself the task of ensuring that all Jewish children in the metropolis shall know, understand and love this united spiritual tradition of the religion of their fathers and of America.

The Jewish Education Association's Excellent Five Year Record of Achievement is as follows:

1. Placed 20,000 additional Jewish children in 250 religious schools throughout Greater New York.
2. Paid through its Scholarship Fund annual tuition fees for 15,000 children whose parents were unable to pay.
3. Reached 40,000 Jewish parents at mass meetings with view to stimulate their interest in the religious training of their children.
4. Succeeded in having 15,000 parents whose children were receiving no Jewish education previously, to register them and pay for their tuition.
5. Assembled 75,000 Jewish children not attending religious Schools, in theatres and other places for programs including Biblical stories, etc.
6. Founded "IVRIAH," women's division of J. E. A., with a present membership of 2,000, whose function it is to bring Jewish children to religious schools.
7. Distributed 18,000 prizes which has greatly improved the attendance in the classrooms. The prizes include 600 camp scholarships for children with records of perfect attendance.
8. Aided many religious schools to make immediate repairs and through its mortgage loans has helped to finance erection of a score of buildings in new localities.
9. Aroused Jewish public opinion throughout America via Radio, press and other media to the importance of the problem of Jewish Education.

How many scholarships will you subscribe for?

All of this work is to be continued and enlarged.

Many new activities are planned for next year.

Additional members are needed to offer 10,000 Additional scholarships.

IN ST. MARGARET'S, LONDON

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 4.—Five royal guests attended the wedding in St. Margaret's, Westminster, today of the Hon. Joan Yarde-Buller, daughter of Lord and Lady Churston, and Loel Guinness, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Guinness. So great was the crush of guests that some royalties had difficulty in reaching their seats in the church. The young couple are leaving for Pittsburgh, where they will live.

LONDON, July 4 (AP).—The marriage of Loel Guinness and the Hon. Joan Yarde-Buller, who will make their home in the United States, was solemnized at St. Margaret's, Westminster, today in the presence of members of the royal family. The wedding was one of the social events of the London season.

The bride, who is dark haired and noted for her beauty, is 19 and the eldest daughter of Baron and Lady Churston. The bridegroom, who is 21, is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Guinness, who are members of the wealthy Irish family of the Earl of Iveagh.

The bridegroom's mother is known as one of the most popular of London and New York hostesses, and his father has long been connected with banking and other business interests in the United States.

Mr. Guinness was an officer in the Irish Guards, but he is abandoning military life to devote himself to his father's business in Pittsburgh, where he will live.

The marriage was solemnized by Canon Carnegie of Westminster Abbey. The bride's dress, of parchment panne velvet, was cut on the lines of a nun's habit, with a veil of white tulle falling to the hem of the robe. The same idea was carried out in the bridesmaids' attire. They wore veils and carried Madonna lilies. The sole trimming to their dresses was white silk cord girdles, with hanging tassels. The bridesmaids were the two sisters of the bridegroom, Miss Meraud and Miss Tanis Guinness. There were eight children attendants, the bride's three young sisters and the children of the Earl and Countess of Brecknock, of the Earl and Countess Cowley and of Sir Harry and Lady Mainwaring.

Lady Churston, the bride's mother, before her marriage was known as Miss Denise Orme, an actress and vocalist of note.

Royalty was represented at the wedding by Princess Helena Victoria, Princess Maria Louise and Princess Arthur of Connaught. The Duke of Connaught and the Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught were present at a reception which followed the wedding.

TORY GROUP OPPOSES CHURCHILL TAX PLAN

Horne Warns Government on Proposals Aimed by Alleged Law Evasions.

LONDON, July 4 (AP).—Premier Baldwin's Government is experiencing hard times at the hands of its own supporters. Following up the recent Tory revolt, which virtually compelled the Government to abandon its proposed reform of the House of Lords, Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the House of Commons met with another and unexpected rebuff today.

The House was discussing clauses in the Finance bill, which seeks to extend the powers of the Treasury to prevent evasions in the payment of the supertax by the formation of limited liability companies.

The Chancellor instanced many recent cases of wealthy land owners and others transforming themselves in the companies and drawing large sums from their businesses free of the supertax.

These clauses met with strong objections from a large number of the Government supporters, led by Sir Robert Horne, who plainly told Mr. Churchill that he was prepared to vote against the Government if the clauses were retained.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 4.—Some 1,600 violators of the city traffic laws were subpoenaed to appear at police court today for offenses between Friday afternoon, when the Fourth of July rush started, until this morning when Recorder Corio banged the court gavel.

The police estimated that 1,000 of the visiting motorists appeared in court while many others dodged the summons and had the offense charged against them on police records.

Parking offenses made up the majority of the violations. The police court was jammed to capacity this morning with several hundred persons lining the corridors and stairways when court opened.

Several hundred motorists who had left $2 each last night for their appearance today had this money returned when all the cases were dismissed, and several dozen more who had given the surety but did not appear had their money mailed back to them.

20,000 AT RIVER PAGEANT.

Special to The New York Times.

CRANFORD, N. J., July 4.—Twenty thousand persons crowded the banks of the Rahway River here today to watch the colorful Cranford River Carnival, a water pageant reminiscent of old Venice. Gaily-decorated floats and barges glided down the river to be judged in competitions. Trees and bridges along the course were decorated. Visitors came from communities twenty-five miles away to watch the festivities.

A committee of New Jersey Mayors appointed by Mayor Roger C. Aldrich acted as judges in the competitions. Mrs. Robert B. Dow's entry won the first prize, a canoe, in the competition for the most novel canoe. It was made of a brilliant pattern of butterflies and roses. Second prize went to Elbert F. Morley and third to Russell Weldon.

The effect of the transatlantic flights was shown when a miniature of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's plane, the Spirit of St. Louis, won second prize in the float competition. This was the entry of the Cranford Rotary Club. First prize went to George W. Lawrence, whose canoe was made to represent a giant frog.

The water pageant has been a red-letter event in Cranford for forty years, with intervals between each occurrence. There is talk of making it an annual carnival for Cranford and neighboring towns.

At White Sulphur Springs.

The large colony at the Greenbrier passed the Fourth on golf courses, tennis courts and riding trails, or gathered for luncheon at the Casino, where every table on the veranda was taken.

Among motorists who arrived for the holiday were Commander and Mrs. Woodward of New York, Edward M. O'Brien of Philadelphia and M. G. S. Bigsby, E. T. McClelland, Miss Lee Herndon and Miss Blanche Westcott of Richmond.

JEWISH GUARDIANS EXPAND THEIR WORK

FINDS GREATER CONFIDENCE

Budget for 1926 Was $351,448—Confusion Eliminated by Coordinated Method.

The Jewish Board of Guardians, which deals with juvenile and adult delinquency, made public yesterday its annual report, which has been prepared by Mortimer L. Schiff, President, for the State Legislature and Mayor Walker. It shows that its budget for 1926 was $351,448, toward which the chief contributors were the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies, $225,681, and New York City, $103,250.

Mr. Schiff praised the coordination method of handling delinquency problems, which has been in effect since the work of several organizations was merged into the Board of Guardians six years ago.

"Subject to the limitation of the financial support accorded to us," he said, "we are covering the ground without the confusion arising from the disconnected efforts of unrelated societies. We are cutting down the expenses and wasted effort of overlarge activities, and since we are treating the matter of delinquency in its entirety, there is developing, as the years pass, a greater understanding of the characters of the unfortunates with whom we deal, as well as a more practical knowledge of what it is humanly possible to do for them.

"Since there is scarcely a case of wrongdoing or violation of law that is not involved with other cases or with conditions that need correcting, it makes it obvious that the only way to deal with them is to take them as a whole and not as isolated problems. The problem of the delinquent boy, for example, may also be the problem of a broken home, and that of the wayward girl, the problem of incompetent parents. All the forces at our command must be turned to get at the underlying causes and to bring about a better showing in future years."

More Confidence in the Board.

The significant trends in conditions manifested during the year, according to the report, included a growing confidence among parents and friends of delinquents in the ability of the board to help, a firmer contact with the public schools, a decided expansion along the lines of psychology, psychiatry and mental hygiene, a more highly trained staff of volunteer workers, and better coordination between the subdivisions of the society.

Besides Mr. Schiff, the officers of the board are Henry Solomon and Mrs. Morton M. Menken, Vice Presidents; Sidney C. Borg, Treasurer, and Edgar J. Kobler, Secretary.

The report discussed the work of the constituent agencies, especially the Hawthorne School for delinquent boys and the Cedar Knolls School for delinquent girls, with Mr. Borg as Vice Chairman of the joint committee for both and Mrs. Arthur Hays Sulzberger as Chairman of the Cedar Knolls sub-committee. At the end of last year Hawthorne had 216 inmates and Cedar Knolls 36. At the boys' school 68 inmates were orphans or came from homes where parents were divorced or separated.

As compared with other boys, according to the report, tests showed that the boys at Hawthorne were normal in mechanical aptitudes and could learn simpler tasks of the highly specialized type where there was much repetition and where little planning was necessary. While their physical condition was good, the report added, their school attainment was poor. This retardation was attributed partly to mental delinquency, partly to truancy and partly to other conditions of maladjustment.

The report said the boys did good work on the farm and in the school gardens. The products of the school orchard sold for $16,856, and the milk produced on the farm was 75,000 quarts, selling for $9,750.

The Committee on Field Activities, of which Mrs. Sidney C. Borg is chairman, and Edward S. Greenbaum vice-chairman, with headquarters at 228 East Nineteenth Street, reported good results with preventative work.

Prevention Always in View.

"From the mildly difficult child to the most hardened criminal," the report continued, "our treatment will always have prevention in view. These departments deal with boys and girls between eight and sixteen who have not been in correctional institutions and are young enough to strengthen our efforts with a large measure of helpfulness."

Contrary to general belief, the majority of children do not come from the Children's Court. Only 10 per cent of the 422 new cases accepted last year came from the court, others being referred by parents, social agencies, the Board of Education and similar sources.

"During the year," the report said, "834 boys and 528 girls were under supervision and on the last day of the year 447 boys and 228 girls were in the care of the committee. Of 745 cases closed during the year, 222 were closed with satisfactory adjustments and 76 were referred for continued service to other agencies. Most of the offenders are listed as 'incorrigible'—there were 104 truants, 50 were referred because of improper guardianship, 31 were runaways, 34 were brought to the Children's Court because of stealing and 13 refused to work."

Work at the Lakeview Home.

The Lakeview Home for Unmarried Mothers at Arrochar, S. I., cared for 72 mothers and 80 babies last year, with Mrs. Leopold Demuth as Chairman of the committee in charge, the report said. Another agency at 183 East Ninety-fifth Street, in charge of Mrs. Fred M. Stein as Chairman, cared for 65 mothers and 43 babies.

The report showed that the Committee on Field Activities supervised the Jewish Big Brother and Big Sister organizations, conducted a Summer camp for boys and two Summer camps for girls, maintained supervision of Jewish chaplains, served in correctional and penal institutions, conducted medical, psychological, psychiatric and endocrine clinics, carried on an employment bureau, conducted 'mothers' groups and recreational activities, and maintained training courses for volunteer workers.

CAMP FOR BLIND TO OPEN.

First Group of Girls to Go Today for Outing at Barnegat Bay.

The first group of blind campers will go this morning to the New York Association for the Blind's Camp at Wareton, N. J., on Barnegat Bay. Forty girls between the ages of five and eighteen years will be there.

The youngest of the party, those of five and six years, known as "chickadees," will be tutored in the use of hands and feet in place of eyes and in self-confidence and courage. The older girls will continue their dancing, elocution and recreation classes. There also will be swimming in a wire-enclosed crib, hiking, nature study, woodcraft, dramatics and athletics.

When the children leave Camp Lighthouse, young business women and girls will occupy it from Aug. 1 to 15, and they will be followed by boys for the remainder of the Summer.

PLAN ANTI-FASCIST SOCIETY

U. S. Citizens of Italian Birth Attack Present Regime.

At a dinner last night at the Venice Restaurant, 36 Willoughby Street, Brooklyn, steps were taken to organize a new society called the Friends of Italian Liberty, to be composed of American citizens of Italian birth who are opposed to Fascism. Ten men signed a petition for a certificate of incorporation for the new society.

Francis L. Cerrao, a former Assistant District Attorney, said that he thought that the Fourth of July was a fitting day for launching a society here in favor of "establishing liberty in Italy." Commander Luigi Criscuolo, one of the incorporators of the society, attacked Fascism. He said that the purpose of the society would be to show to Americans that many conservative citizens of Italian birth were not in accord with the principles of Fascism.

PASSENGER IN FRENZY BITES TWO ON TRAIN

Car in Turmoil as Crew Cows Louisianan—He Is Taken to Psychopathic Ward Here.

Passengers on the Pennsylvania train 26 from Pittsburgh were terrorized last night by a frenzied fisherman, Stefan Baletic, of Buras, La. He bit two women passengers whose screams threw the car into turmoil, which was further increased by the efforts of the train crew to subdue Baletic and confine him until the train reached this city at 9:30 o'clock.

The train was at Allentown, Pa., when Baletic suddenly began acting queerly. Word was immediately telegraphed ahead to New York to have policemen meet the train. Baletic had been quiet enough before the outbreak, and after he had been overpowered did not again become violent.

In fact, he seemed to regard the whole affair as a joke. He laughed and chatted about it with Patrolman William Downs of the West Thirtieth Street Station, who met the train. Baletic was taken to the police station and then sent to Bellevue Hospital in an ambulance. He was held for observation in the psychopathic ward of the hospital. He told the patrolman that he was returning to his native Bohemia and had come to New York to take a boat for Europe. He is 57 years old.

Accused of Theft at Velodrome.

James Bonaccorso of 25 Market Avenue, Brooklyn, a bicycle racer and interior decorator, was held in $1,000 bail yesterday by Magistrate George F. Ewald in the Washington Heights Court on a charge that last October he stole a bicycle from the locker of Thomas Olivio of 83 East Third Street at the Velodrome. He was arrested on Sunday and will have a hearing tomorrow.

PLANS LABOR CONFERENCE.

Secretary Davis at Montauk Says One May Be Held There Annually.

MONTAUK, L. I., July 4.—Speaking at the Fourth of July celebration here this evening, Secretary of Labor James J. Davis announced that he had endorsed a plan for an annual meeting at Montauk of representatives of national employers and employes to discuss in advance any differences that might threaten to become an issue.

Others who agreed to foster such a plan were Edward H. Theus, formerly a prominent labor leader; Albert Champion, President of the A. S. Spark Plug Company, Flint, Mich., and Fred Moscovich, President of the Stutz Motor Car Company, Indianapolis.

The meetings would be patterned after the international social and economic conferences held at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass. Invitations are being sent to leaders in both employers' and employes' organizations, it was said.

SENDS CALL TO VETERANS.

Legion Commander Wants Bookings Speeded for Trip to Paris.

Announcement was made yesterday by Howard P. Savage, National Commander of the American Legion, that unless the veterans intending to go to France for the international convention made their reservations before July 15 they would be disappointed, as the lists will be closed on that date. He said the accommodations on most of the official ships were nearly filled.

The first of the legionnaires will sail Aug. 10 on the President Roosevelt of the United States Lines, but most of them will leave in September. The convention will be held in the Trocadero Palace from Sept. 19 to 23. Many events have been planned for the entertainment of the veterans during their stay in Paris.

OFFER TWO MONTHS OF RADIO CONCERTS

WJZ and Associated Stations Will Begin Broadcasting of Philharmonic on Thursday.

HOOGSTRATEN WILL DIRECT

Unusual Number of Novelties Is Scheduled—WBOQ to Present Plantation Program Tonight.

Beginning next Thursday, the broadcasts of WJZ and associated stations, between 8:30 and 10:30 o'clock each Thursday and Sunday night during the remainder of this month and during August, will be devoted to the concerts of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, which will be given in the Lewisohn Stadium of the College of the City of New York. The broadcasters which will radiate the entire concert twice each week simultaneously with WJZ are WBZ, WBZA, KDKA, KYW and WEBH. WJR and KSD will transmit the program from 9 to 10 o'clock, and WBAL from 8:30 to 10.

For the sixth consecutive year Willem van Hoogstraten will lead the Philharmonic Orchestra in the Summer series of concerts. He will be assisted by Frederick Stock, leader of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, who will conduct the fourth and fifth weeks of the series, and also by Pierre Monteaux, former leader of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at present of the Amsterdam Concertgebouw, who will conduct the concerts during the sixth week. Following this, the series will be concluded by Mr. van Hoogstraten.

Four young American singers, selected recently as the result of auditions held by the National Music League, will appear from time to time as soloists with the orchestra. They are Marie Montana, soprano; Mina Hager, contralto; George Rasely, tenor, and Donald Pirnie, baritone. The dates of their appearances with the orchestra will be announced later.

The initial broadcast to the radio audience on Thursday night will include a speech during the intermission by Adolph Lewisohn, Honorary Chairman of the concerts and donor of the Stadium, when the concerts will be held. The musical numbers on this occasion, to be played under the direction of Willem van Hoogstraten, will be Strauss's "Don Juan," Debussy's "The Afternoon of a Faun," Borodin's "Polovetzian Dances" and Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. 4, in F Minor." The latter will take up the entire second half of the program.

More than the usual number of novelties have been included in the concerts scheduled to be heard by radio listeners, twenty-five being selected for the entire eight weeks series. One of these, Converse's "Flivver Ten Million," has been scheduled for a later program. The works to be presented, as revealed by the programs already made public, will include compositions of wide range and period, with at least one major selection in each concert. A number of interesting orchestral numbers seldom heard by radio audiences are also to be expected.

Hans Lange has been re-engaged as assistant conductor for the Stadium concerts during the Summer season.

"Down on the Old Plantation" is the title of a program scheduled for 8:30 tonight by WBOQ. It will be presented by the National Jubilee Singers.

GERMANS NOW SEEK MORE OF OUR FILMS

Producers' Association Suggests a Ratio of Four for Each One Sent Here.

BASED ON THEATRE RATIO

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Company. By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 4.—The ratio for the exchange of films between America and Germany may be altered in favor of the United States.

Negotiations carried on for some time with this end in view by the Association of the Film Industry—comprising U F A, the Phoebus Deulig National Films and the Rex Films organizations—has come to the conclusion that the present ratio of one to one, while protecting the home market, does not further the export of films. The experience also has been that protection of the German film industry by the existing arrangement is problematical, as the country is flooded with foreign and principally American films.

American producers last year sent 212 films to the German movies, clearing 16,000,000 marks net, while the entire profits of German producers amounted to only 16,000,000 marks.

It is now suggested that the ratio be changed in such a way that four American films shall be admitted to Germany for every one going to the United States. The basis for this suggestion is that America has 16,000 movie theatres against the Reich's 4,000.

Advocates of the new plan hold that the opening of 16,000 American theatres, with their large seating capacity, to German films is much more advantageous to the industry than the present system, although a far greater number of foreign productions would be admitted to a relatively small number of the Reich's theatres.

Discussion of the matter is still in the early stage, but a decision may be made soon, because Director Klitzsch, the new manager of U F A, had started for New York to take up the question of the proposed ratio with American film producers.

MANNEQUIN IN VIENNA SUES BENES FOR $13,000

She Tells Court That the Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia Promised to Marry Her.

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Company. By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, July 4.—Dr. Benes, Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia, who is also well known as a musical composer, was sued in the Vienna courts today for $13,000 by a pretty department store mannequin whose name is not given but who declared Dr. Benes promised marriage to her.

The mannequin testified that Dr. Benes fell in love with her while she was showing dresses to another friend of his. He began an ardent love suit, she said. Eventually, she asserts, she agreed to marry him.

Later, she says Benes borrowed money from her and went to Prague, where he seems to have lost his love for her.

WAR VETERANS AT THEATRE.

Overseas Service League Report Shows Generosity of Managers.

The aim of the Overseas Service League to provide sources of entertainment for disabled World War soldiers now at Veterans Hospital No. 81 in the Bronx, has been greatly aided by theatre managers of New York. This has been brought out in the report made by Miss Alice Shearer head of the committee of the league which has charge of this particular work. Parties of ten soldiers have seen this season performances of "Gertie" at the Nora Bayes Theatre; "Wooden Kimono" at the Martin Beck Theatre; "Oh, Kay" at the Imperial Theatre; "The Noose" at the Hudson Theatre and "The Circus Princess" at the Winter Garden. A weekly treat is furnished by S. R. Rothafel, who sends to the committee ten seats for each current show at the new Roxy Theatre.

Managers of other theatres have signified their desire to do their bit in bringing pleasure into the lives of these wounded soldiers, some of whom have not been inside a theatre for years.

Associated with Miss Shearer, who for seven years has carried on the work of the Overseas League in this particular field, are Mrs. W. J. Finley, Mrs. Leita Stratton, Mrs. Lucy Phister, Miss Louise Davenport and Miss Mary Martin, all of whom did Red Cross work in France during the war. Mrs. Albert Bullus is President of the league, which has its headquarters at 9 East Fifty-fourth Street.

BIBLE SCHOOLS OPEN TODAY

25,000 Children Expected to Enroll for Vacation Courses.

Almost 200 daily vacation Bible schools will open this morning in parish houses of churches in the city and vicinity under auspices of the Metropolitan Federation of Daily Vacation Bible Schools, 71 West Twenty-third Street.

The leaders expect that 25,000 children will enroll. There will be 1,200 instructors.

"While the mission of the Daily Vacation Bible School includes many purposes such as taking the youngster out of the street, amusing him with song and story and teaching him arts and crafts, the keynote of the work itself is 'The child for Christ and Christ for the child,'" said a statement issued yesterday at the headquarters.

Princeton Wants New Postoffice.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., July 4.—The Postoffice Department has been asked to provide a new postoffice building here. The present quarters on Nassau Street are outgrown. Following reports that an unattractive building might be put up by an out-of-town concern, a local committee was formed, which took up the matter, and as a result of its work a site is in view. The Government will be urged to erect a building.

On the same site a community centre with borough hall, library and other municipal buildings is projected.

THE SCREEN

By MORDAUNT HALL.

A Frisky Affair.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE, with Colleen Moore, Donald Reed, Claude Gillingwater, Kathlyn McGuire, Hallam Cooley, Blythe Chapman, Clarissa Selwynne and Burr McIntosh, based on Lewis Allen Brown's story, "The Bigamist," directed by Millard Webb; Charlie Chaplin's old comedy, "The Immigrant"; Ishaan Jones and his "Brunswick Recording Orchestra," with Betty Rose and "Bourman's Steppers." At the Mark Strand.

To immature minds Colleen Moore's new comedy, "Naughty but Nice," may seem more than a mere trifle, but to those who have become wise enough to expect a suggestion of subtlety served with their fun, this subject will not carry a strong appeal. It is a conventional yarn studded with conventional episodes, and Miss Moore, who impersonates Berenice Summers, not only indulges in gestures as if some of the characters were deaf and dumb, but she also is supposed to do everything but turn handsprings without attracting undue attention.

It is time that Miss Moore's talent was employed in some really well-written comedy. This present offering has the nice little girl whose uncle has struck oil in Texas. She comes to a finishing school where her appearance is not exactly the last word in looks or dress. You rather anticipate that Berenice is soon going to discover a means to make herself attractive, and she does. The first essential appears to be to throw away her horn-rimmed spectacles, and the second is to have her hair trimmed a la Colleen Moore. It is, therefore, not surprising that a young man who does not realize that beauty is only skin deep finds Berenice, the girl he had once snubbed, absolutely enchanting.

Berenice amusingly has her full share of excitement in this picture, and it is all a matter of opinion as to whether what she goes through is funny or not. There is one scene, for instance, where Berenice and a chum are confronted by the Principal of the school they are attending. The two girls are asked to explain their presence in a Washington hotel. This leads to highly improbable incidents and amazing coincidences. In the hotel elevator with the school Principal, Berenice performs the startling feat of signaling to Paul Carroll and having her arm almost shut in the door of the elevator, without the severe Miss Perkins noticing what has happened. And this is not an isolated instance of the strange attacks of abstraction of some of this film's personalities.

Berenice, who is apt to tell untruths to escape from an awkward predicament, eventually has to pose as the wife of a man she had never seen up to that moment. And this amiable soul, Paul Ames, is supposed to be quite an authority on political information, which causes one to reflect that he must have had considerable influence to get him where he is. Mr. Ames, who consents to jeopardize his career without even being interested either in Berenice or her friend, is so deeply engrossed during one spell of this affair that he puts on his trousers backward, even to fastening the suspenders. But one has to remember that these characters live in another world. They are the crude creatures of picture directors, with sawdust in their veins, frequently in dressing gowns, always well shaved and beautifully barbered, with an ear for naught else but the voice of the director through his sawed-off megaphone.

Occasional peals of feminine laughter greeted periods of this effusion. It was, however, interesting and pleasing to observe that when Charlie Chaplin's old comedy, "The Immigrant," was projected, not only was the feminine laughter far more enthusiastic, but the less musical laughter of men joined loudly in the chorus. This Chaplin two-reeler may be old, but it still has some good moments, especially when Chaplin takes another man's tip to pay for his lunch and then gives the waiter a dime, while the generous individual is frowned upon by the white-aproned menial.

"The Immigrant" gives Chaplin an opportunity to reveal something of the agony of mal de mer, not abruptly, but gradually. Chaplin is perceived scoffing at others who are not able to suffer the roll of the vessel, and then to his utter astonishment he finds that he himself is not immune.

FLOOD IN GUINAN HOME.

Parrot Gives Alarm as Pipe Bursts in Entertainer's House.

Returning to New York yesterday from Philadelphia to appear in the opening of "Padlocks of 1927" at the Shubert Theatre tonight, Texas Guinan, night club entertainer, found her home, 17 West Eighth Street, flooded by water from a pipe that had burst on the second floor. Damage to clothes, furniture and tapestries, Miss Guinan said, would amount to $20,000. Much of the damage was to personal effects collected over a period of years.

The screams of a parrot in Miss Guinan's house for two hours on Sunday night attracted the attention of neighbors who summoned a policeman. He broke into the house and discovered the leaking pipe.

FIRE ROUTS 12 FAMILIES.

Interior of Three Homes at Coney Island Destroyed.

Twelve families were driven to the streets yesterday when fire of an undetermined origin destroyed the interior of three dwellings at West Thirty-sixth Street, near Sea Gate, Coney Island. Thousands of holiday makers from Surf Avenue and from the beach gathered to watch the firemen fight the flames.

The fire was discovered in an apartment on the first floor of 2,758 West Thirty-sixth Street, one of a row of fifteen three-story connecting houses. The house was occupied by Samuel Kriss. The flames spread rapidly to the apartments of Morris Fogelbaum on the second floor and Morris Rubenstein on the third floor and then to the houses on either side.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Padlocks of 1927" will open tonight at the Shubert Theatre.

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne will sail for Europe at midnight Friday instead of on Saturday night. Their roles in "The Second Man" at the Guild Theatre will therefore be taken over at the Saturday performances by Marie Larimore and Emily Stevens. Donald Macdonald will ape the part Mr. Larimore has been playing.

"Rang Tang," the negro show, of which Miller and Lyles are the stars, will come to the Royale Theatre next Monday night instead of on Tuesday. Another negro revue, "Africana," may open at Daly's Sixty-third Street Theatre at that time.

Florence Mayfield entertained the persons appearing in the vaudeville of the forthcoming "Follies" at his home in Hastings-on-Hudson yesterday.

Doris Underwood, last seen in "New York Exchange," is playing the part of Ethel Jackson in "One for All" at Wallack's Theatre. Miss Jackson became ill yesterday afternoon.

PEGGY ANN'S CLOSE MAY CAUSE A SUIT

Producer MacLoon on Way From San Francisco to Consult Equity Heads.

DEFIES BAN ON OTHER PLAYS

Regrets Not Having Had Court Ruling on Managers' Rights in Previous Clash.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4 (AP).—Louis A. Macloon, Pacific Coast theatrical producer, was reported on his way to New York today "to have matters out" with John Emerson and Frank Gillmore, heads of the Actors Equity Association, because his show "Peggy-Ann" was closed in Los Angeles last week.

Before leaving Macloon issued a challenge to his Equity adversaries, daring them to close "Chicago" and "One Man's Woman," two of his shows playing here.

"I'm going to sue Equity for hundreds of thousands of dollars over the closing of 'Peggy-Ann,' said Macloon. 'Two years ago we accepted peace without victory for the Equity. We have always been regretful we did not sue then and establish what rights, if any, a manager has in producing plays for the public. We are now going to sue."

"Peggy-Ann" was closed following the failure of Barrett Greenwood, leading man, to appear for a performance. It was reported that he had had "words" with Macloon previously and that he was supported in his withdrawal by a telegram from Gillmore. Equity has not made public its side of the matter, Macloon said.

Persons in touch with Actors' Equity affairs here were unable last night to throw any light on the dispute between Louis A. Macloon, Pacific Coast producer, and the association over the closing of the play, "Peggy-Ann," in Los Angeles.

John Emerson and Frank Gillmore, the two men Macloon said he was coming to New York to see, were reported out of town. Emerson is abroad and Gillmore is in Los Angeles.

FRANK FAY AMUSES IN SKIT AT PALACE

Also Master of Ceremonies—James Rennie as 'Hard-Boiled' Sailor—Hippodrome's Acts.

Frank Fay is back at the Palace this week, heading a generally amusing holiday bill. A wit who retails not only "hokum" slapstick but also sophisticated irony, Mr. Fay is one of the most agreeable of the variety jest-mongers, and his act about string-savers, bobbin-watchers and mustache fixers is as funny as his skits in days of yore. Even when he sings a sentimental ballad, Mr. Fay's "second man" seems to be watching him, with the result that he gives the ditty a slightly sardonic twist. This is quite different from the technique employed by one Cliff O'Rourke who remains true to all the saccharin banalities of Tin Pan Alley during Johnny Dooley's act. Mr. Fay is, of course, also functioning as Master of Ceremonies and introducing the various turns.

James Rennie, released from Shakespearean revivals, goes back to the portrayal of a "hard-boiled" sailor which he did so well in "Shore Leave" in a sketch credited to John V. A. Weaver. Mr. Rennie is excellent; his vehicle is, at best, mildly incredible. Johnny Dooley's nonsense proves as amusing as ever, particularly his burlesque of an acrobatic act.

There is a combination musical and dancing number which presents Vivian Hart, a petite and attractive prima donna, Joe Fejer's Orchestra, and a pair of ballroom dancers, Trevor and Harris. Of these the chief success yesterday was Miss Hart's. Charley Withers does his familiar "opry" turn, and among the other Palace numbers are Ted and Al Waldman, who play harmonicas, and Jim Jam Jems.

Fourth of July celebrators who went to the Hippodrome yesterday found there a program which includes Guy and Pearl Magley, Johnny Berkes, Winchester and Ross, the Carr Brothers and Betty, and the Ruby Latham Duo. Frank Sinclair and Company are chief among those billed at the Broadway; Toney and Norman, head the Loew's State entertainment, while Pat Rooney and the Rooney family are to be found in the seaside show at the New Brighton.

UNIVERSITY FORUM GIVES CONCERT IN DRIVE

Fourth of July Exercises Held at Soldiers' Monument—Early Fete for Children.

The sixteenth Fourth of July celebration of the University Forum of America, consisting of a band concert, patriotic address, singing and entertainment, was held last evening at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, Riverside Drive and Eighty-ninth Street.

Dr. Alexander Cumming, President of the Forum, addressing the large assembly, cited Columbus, General Washington, Augustus Post, Commander Byrd and Colonel Lindbergh as among the hardy pioneers who brought something new to the world and for the benefit of humanity.

Because General Washington was a surveyor he knew the lay of the land and how to win battles, said Dr. Cumming. He told of Mr. Post's pioneer work as a balloonist nearly a quarter of a century ago, and spoke of Colonel Lindbergh, in his flight which electrified the world, as having the benefit of all the different inventions. Commander Byrd, he said, had shown the practicability of carrying passengers from New York to Paris.

Richard W. (Ukulele Dick) Kont told of his trip with Commander Byrd to the Arctic, and exhibited his instrument with its famous autographs, including those of President Coolidge and Queen Marie. William Pool, known as Battleship Bill, a favorite entertainer of the Navy, and Miss Annabelle Moore, soprano, appeared on the program, of which Major A. L. Boyce was Chairman. Ernest E. Zirkle was song leader.

Earlier in the evening, the Forum held its annual celebration at the children's playground, Riverside Drive and Ninety-seventh Street.

"MERRY-GO-ROUND" GAINS.

A Speedy Second Edition Has Amusing New Features.

A second edition of "Merry-Go-Round," staged at the Klaw Theatre last night, revealed a smoother and more enjoyable entertainment than opened at that house on May 31. There is not a plethora of new numbers, but what additions have been made, along with the deletions necessary to permit them, have materially strengthened the show.

Of the features shown for the first time last night probably the most amusing was a sketch, credited to Newman Levy, which depicted the urge for gaudy specialization that has descended upon the modern barber shop. A travesty on "The Spider," arranged by Don Barclay, turned out to be, for the most part, a mind reading burlesque that has been done in vaudeville for many, many years. But Barclay more than made good with a number which was put in when he joined the cast shortly after the opening—an old-time motion picture, directed by D. W. Griffith and with Lillian Gish and Lionel Barrymore in the cast. During the exhibition of this Barclay had last night's audience in a state of mild convulsions with his sub-title readings and comment. The English actor who goes by the name of Sir John Dunn (Bart.) has joined the cast and he appeared in one or two new skits.

The revue has a speedier pace than before and it is better routined. By the time a final edition rolls around "Merry-Go-Round" should be one of the town's brightest song and dance fiestas. As it stands now it is enjoyable Summer entertainment.

AMERICAN OPERA'S PLANS.

Director Rosing Announces First Season Here Will Begin on Jan. 3.

The first New York season of the American Opera Company, which will produce opera in English with native singers, is announced to begin on Jan. 3, at a theatre to be named, within a fortnight. Several houses are now under consideration, the one that will be selected to remain the home of the company until it acquires its own opera house.

A new version by Lawrence Langner and Robert A. Simon of "Die Fledermaus," the operetta of Johann Strauss, has been accepted for production, possibly at the opening performance. The adaptation is said to be colloquial, though true to the period of the story. Robert Edmond Jones has been asked to design the settings.

Twenty-four singers already have been signed by Vladimir Rosing, the director. Most of them are graduates of the Rochester Opera Company, which Mr. Rosing directed for four years for George Eastman.

It is said that a number of performers of exceptional promise have also been discovered in musical comedy ranks.

OLD ARTISTS SOUGHT FAME.

Edith W. Ware Says They Used Many Schemes for Recognition.

CHICAGO, July 4 (AP).—Belief that the ancient Egyptian artists and sculptors preferred anonymity is dispelled by Edith Williams Ware of the University of Chicago in an article in the current issue of The American Journal of Semitic Languages.

The ancients longed for fame and recognition, Miss Ware said. Because of fear of incurring the wrath of their masters, however, the Egyptians resorted to subterfuge in identifying their works. Study of the tomb walls and memorials has shown that wherever possible the work of the artist was identified.

Two methods were generally adopted. Frequently they placed figures of themselves in among other servitors, officials or friends of the person for whom the work was being done. A second method was to rule off margins and place inscriptions in the space.

Miss Ware also declared there was jealousy even in those days between those who merely could draw, known as "outline draftsmen," and the creative artists.

NEGLIGENT VOTERS.

It was doubtless thought by the National Civic Federation an appropriately patriotic thing to fire on July Fourth its broadside against eligibles who do not vote. The figures for 1926 are depressing enough, if they were to be taken without the necessary qualifications. Even when these are made, the showing is bad for universal suffrage. Yet it is only fair to study the reasons why so many do not vote. A questionnaire was sent out by the Civic Federation, and among the more than 60,000 replies are to be found suggestive hints at the true causes of failure to do the "highest civic duty" of voting.

The end and aim held up before all voters is to work through parties. One must vote in the primaries as well as at the elections. But the moment he sets out to do that his troubles begin. He must be able to show to the party authorities that he has been "regular." If he is resolved to work through partisan organizations he has to cease classifying himself as an independent. This is a deterrent to many. A common experience is to go to a primary for the purpose of helping select candidates to be placed on the ticket, only to find that there was a primary before the primary—that is, an inner political conclave that had cut and dried everything in advance. This cannot fail to be discouraging to ordinary citizens, who have been exhorted to exert their political power through the electoral machinery duly provided by law, but who discover that they cannot hope to compete with the skilled machinists all the time on the job.

This is not offered as a sound excuse for political indifference or neglect of voting. But it is one of the different influences which go to account for the fact that the suffrage is not exercised in this country as it should be. The result is deplorable in many ways, but it is, after all, a natural phenomenon of political human nature and has its natural explanations.

SETTLING SMITH'S BUSINESS.

Long wandering in the political world is apt to make the traveler cynical. Fortunately, one steady star of truth illumines his way. The New York Republican State Committee is that light-giver. To its Bureau of Statistical Research, a worthy rival, in its way, to Senator BOOKHART, the fatigued soul never looks in vain for comfort. It has been doing what it too modestly calls "a little intelligent figuring." It kindly spares us the details of its mathematical processes and gives the undeniable results. Any Democrat nominated for President in 1928 will be beaten. If Governor SMITH is nominated, "he will be the most "hopelessly defeated Democratic "candidate in the history of the "party." The Solid South will be smashed. Probably poor SMITH won't carry a single Northern State.

So it will be money in the pockets of the Democratic Party to go without a National Convention next year. But the misguided followers of the Governor, watching the long labors of the Republican State Committee to shield him from disaster, have hardened their hearts. If SMITH is the easiest man to defeat, they ask, why isn't the Republican State Committee praying for his nomination instead of trying to show that it is the worst the Democrats could make? So little is the genuine chivalrous feeling that inspires Mr. MORRIS'S brotherhood of altruists appreciated. The Republican machine pities the under dog. Year after year the Republican machine has been fighting him. Its successes have been recorded at Albany and the polls. Has the Legislature ever failed to stand out against him triumphantly to the end? Have his policies been approved by anybody except the people?

Look at the marvelous growth of the Republican vote in the cities. Look at the cordial feeling that animates the Republican Party of New York, urban and up-State, one and indivisible. When you have conquered an opponent early and often and always, you have a generous solicitude for his welfare. Governor SMITH is not "half a bad sort" personally. Why make him the leader of a forlorn hope? Why not admit that he would be the weakest possible Democratic candidate for President just as he has been for Governor?

A NATIONAL HISTORY.

The signing of the contract for the publication of the "Dictionary of American Biography" may well be included in the celebration of the signing of the document which declared our independent national existence; for a dictionary of biography of the character planned is a national history humanized. As Dr. ALLEN JOHNSON, the editor-in-chief, said in the informal announcement on Sunday, it is intended to portray "the whole American scene." Men and women who have passed from the stage of action will move again in their personalities and in their contribution to the making of the nation.

In this "epitome of society," presented through the biographies of those who have had most to do with making America what it is and may become, men of political careers will not monopolize the space. They will be found elbow to elbow with men who never knew the "pomp of power"—scholars, inventors, some of whom died penniless and unknown; missionaries, pioneers in the West, business men—or some of them who flourished for a day in official rosters may even be crowded out altogether by the ten thousand or more who better deserve permanent remembrance; for it is not proposed to include all Congressmen or all members of State Legislatures in this pantheon of America's fourteen thousand.

How liberal is to be the scope of these biographical pages is suggested by the following:

> The subjects will cover a wide range of characters. We intend to have it portray the whole American scene, so along with statesmen, industrialists, financiers, artists, writers, lawyers, Judges and others who might be found in Who's Who during their lifetime will appear such figures as desperadoes like JESSE JAMES or baseball players like "Pop" ANSON.

This catholicity of treatment has distinguished precedent in the British Dictionary of National Biography. It gives two columns to RICHARD (DICK) TURPIN, "robber," alongside an Orientalist, who has only a column, and gives two columns to TOM SAYERS, "pugilist," as much space as is accorded a metaphysician and poet of somewhat similar name.

It is only in such a work that the great majority of the fourteen thousand will be long remembered. Lord REDESDALE pays his tribute to the British Dictionary of Biography in his regretting that Sir SIDNEY LEE'S article on King EDWARD VII (which he thought inadequate) would long outlive a certain biography (superior in his view) published in a book which would have its day and die. The dictionary, he said, "will re-"main on the shelves of every li-"brary, public and private, for many "generations and will be consulted "as an authority long after writers, "like their subjects, shall have faded "into the misty land of ghosts." It is such an "expectancy" of life for the Dictionary of American Biography that has compelled such infinite pains in the gathering of the material for it and its preparation under strictest and most impartial examination. Put forth under the auspices of twelve national learned societies, it should be a monument of American scholarship.

NIAGARA AND THE FOURTH.

Seventy-five thousand persons visited Niagara Falls on Sunday, the largest number in history. Niagara is at once the country's greatest single producer of electrical energy and her greatest single scenic attraction. Other resorts may complain that Americans persist in seeing Europe first, but they never tire of seeing the Falls. To the hundreds of honeymooners have in recent years been added thousands of motor tourists. The visit to Niagara has become almost as traditional a feature of American life as the Fourth of July itself.

The Horseshoe Falls are in a bad way. Not long ago Secretary HOOVER warned the country that they were "committing suicide"—cutting back in a notch in the centre, drying up at the edges. A joint Canadian and American commission is at work on plans for their preservation. Apparently it is a feat within the reach of engineering skill. The power companies are naturally much interested. They have rigged up a fine model to show just what the engineers may be able to accomplish in the way of scenic improvement. Their aims are not wholly altruistic. If the water is hurting the Falls, doubtless they would be glad to divert a little more of it. However, it will be time to talk about additional diversion when the preservation of the Falls is assured. The pressing need for development just now is not in the Niagara gorge but in the rapids of the St. Lawrence.

We are not at the end of the historic struggle for conservation, at Niagara or elsewhere. But we have found means, at least in some instances, of reconciling opposing interests by common sense. In the proposed hydroelectric development of the rapids of the St. Lawrence, industrial benefit goes hand in hand with improvement of navigation, without impairment of scenic values. In other instances, scenic and recreational values must be held paramount. We recently called attention to the significant action of the National Capital Planning Commission in denouncing the scheme for a power project at Great Falls, in the outskirts of Washington. Occasionally, the Federal Power Commission, brought face to face with this ancient conflict between man and nature, has been able to serve the one without too greatly affronting the other. Such a course should prove continuingly practicable at Niagara.

LONG-DISTANCE FLYING.

Now that three American planes have in a month been flown over the Atlantic, and two United States Army officers have made a record non-stop sea flight over the Pacific, there seems to be no limit to what it is hoped to achieve in the air. LINDBERGH, CHAMBERLIN and BYRD have given to aviation a new impetus. Nothing seems impossible to trained pilots in airplanes that have air-cooled motors and radio sets. Wherever there are surface ships that can wireless their latitude and longitude the position of a plane flying in the clouds may be determined. Commander BYRD says that with two "bearings" this can always be done. That is one great lesson of the flight of the America.

Fifteen years ago only dreamers talked of a passenger service from New York to Paris. Today it seems to be a matter of a few years—years of improving motors, designing stronger "ships," and providing weather reports that will tell navigators what bad spots on the Atlantic they will have to expect. Commander BYRD believes that only the most furious storms will prevent the taking off of planes bound either way. Ten years is his estimate of the period of full preparation.

Since the America came down on the French coast the following long-distance and overseas flights have been seriously planned: One from San Francisco to Australia, with stops at Honolulu, 2,407 miles; Pago-Pago, 2,614 miles; Suva, in the Fiji Islands, 792 miles, and Sydney, 2,003 miles; another from St. Paul to Tokio, by way of Seattle; a third from Ottawa to London and return. For these ventures sufficient money seems to be assured. A San Francisco citizens' committee proposes to raise $50,000 for a continuation of the flight from San Francisco to Hawaii for which JAMES D. DOLE has offered prizes amounting to $35,000. The United States Army fliers accomplished the voyage to Hawaii with such ease that, with favorable weather, the passage of the Pacific to Australia should be practicable. Business men of St. Paul are interested in establishing communications by air with Tokio, and they desire to cooperate with Seattle in providing money prizes for a flight with one stop at that city. Recently Seattle offered $25,000 for a non-stop passage to Tokio. Lieutenant BEN EIELSON, chief pilot with the Wilkins Arctic expedition, is already an entry.

An ambitious undertaking will be that of Captain F. T. COURTNEY, who is preparing to fly from London to New York and return. To his credit he has some remarkable work in the air. He will take with him a navigator and a mechanic. A start before the end of the month is promised. Captain COURTNEY'S plans were made before Commander BYRD took the America to France. The French talk of trying again, and the Germans, who lead the world in passenger services, are ambitious to show what they can do as rivals of our American aviators. That present distance records over both land and sea will be broken before long, and that all the oceans will be spanned, it is reasonable to believe.

THE RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS.

Rhodes scholars will probably not be unduly depressed by the charge, now repeated, that they have failed to live up to great expectations. This is not the first time that they have been thus assailed. Most of them have been content to hide their time doing the day's work. They realize that, even though they are a chosen band, their numbers are so small that their influence is necessarily limited in this vast country. To this extent, therefore, it may be said that the scholarships have not had the results that CECIL RHODES hoped. He had dreamed that they would early take their places in the front ranks of public servants, and through political and diplomatic work foster a better understanding between the two English-speaking nations. But only a few have desired or been able to go into public life.

A study was made a few years ago of the actual occupations of some three hundred Rhodes scholars. It was found that three-fifths of them were teachers or lawyers. In due time some of the lawyers will doubtless take up politics. But it is hardly fair to expect that these young men—the first scholarships were not offered until 1904—would overnight take control of the ship of state. Most of them in going to Oxford naturally thought more of the scholastic than political advantages.

It does not follow because few of the Rhodes scholars are in public life that their influence is negligible or that the system has failed. It is possible that they have not developed the qualities of leadership to the extent that RHODES had hoped. But neither have they been the "mere bookworms" which he did not wish them to be. They have been of genuine value in helping America appreciate Britain, and they have given American schools and colleges a better understanding of the English educational system, even though they may not have "es-"teemed the performance of public "duties as their highest aim."

Truly surprising would it have been if the Rhodes scholarship boards had been able to pick from the thousands of college graduates in America the young men destined in a short time to be the leaders of the country. Many schoolmasters foresaw a bad end for persons now high in the councils of the nation whom they taught as children. Many an undergraduate for whom a brilliant future was prophesied by his professors has ended in inconspicuous mediocrity. In the main the boards have tried to follow the excellent principles for the selection of scholars laid down in the Rhodes will. It urged that regard be had not only to the young man's scholastic attainments, but also to his fondness for sports, his qualities of character and his capacity for leadership. This is a large order, which has been loyally carried out.

THE DISCREET MARGOT.

In the introduction to her recently published book, "Lay Sermons," MARGOT ASQUITH, or, as we should now say, Lady OXFORD, explains some of the methods which she has followed in securing public recognition of her literary talent. This applies especially to her earlier efforts. She writes with great frankness:

> Had I a name like "Mrs. Poultry Teck Tonins," I believe anything I wrote would command attention; but being who I am, I had to be heavily advertised, and, as publishers and journalists sell their wares by exciting curiosity, * * * it became the fashion to say I was "brilliant" and "indiscreet"; after which—though these epithets make me yawn—my writing could hardly escape a certain amount of attention. It is pure fiction, as I am always precise, seldom brilliant and never indiscreet.

This last assertion will be news to many, including, we fear, Lord OXFORD himself. But his famous and irrepressible wife has so long been keen about politics that she could not help being keen about public men; and some of her remarks about these still living gentlemen, and her disclosures of what they have said to her and how they have impressed her, have seemed to them at least slightly to border on indiscretion. In this last book she appears to have been less biographical than descriptive. Reverting to a style once favored in English literature, she has drawn a series of "characters." Various politicians whose names she mentions in her pages have been used by her as lay figures upon which to pin her epigrams. Thus we read that Mr. WINSTON CHURCHILL is, among other things, "so short-"sighted and impatient that he de-"vours himself." On the other hand, Mr. LLOYD GEORGE, who "loves a "crowd more than himself and his "friends," and has gifts almost amounting to genius, is so defective in intelligence that "he waylays himself." The ever discreet MARGOT professes a warm attachment for the "generous heart" of Lord BIRKENHEAD, but sweetly adds, "he listens "to himself, but his brains—which "are of the most remarkable—some-"times go to his head and he hears "confused sounds." In what she writes to her husband the wicked may see a bid for family peace or a sacrifice on the domestic altar. At all events, she declares of Lord OXFORD that "his sanity amounts to genius."

Being a woman as well as a discreet writer, it was inevitable that Lady OXFORD should pass lightly from politics to fashions. Of some of the modern modes she writes with severe dislike. With her it is apparently not a question of indecent but unbecoming dress. For example:

> Women with neither backs nor tops to their heads and faces as large as hams, appear at the King's drawing rooms with the nuque of their necks blue from shaving; and either the brains or the headgear have undergone a tremendous change in the feminine world, but I cannot buy a hat that will cover the top of my head.

In giving the title Lay "Sermons" to her book, Lady OXFORD admits that she made a choice which she cannot regard as "altogether happy." But she does not mention the association into which this brings her with older and greater writers. They wrote of types, and she writes of persons. No doubt the free use of names yields a piquancy that a mere abstract discussion of motives and morals could not have. Yet it may well be that the older philosophy has more depth in it than the modern impressionistic reporting.

EATING IN THE OPEN.

A yearning to eat out of doors is not born in all. If it is, it does not linger on to maturity in some of us. But all children, even starchy little girls in pink sashes, go into ecstasies over a table in the back yard under a tree that drops caterpillars into the plates. Little boys who cannot eat all the food on their dinner plates may have been giving themselves indigestion by eating the half-cooked product of a raid on the pantry. Investigation in such cases reveals potatoes missing from the bin and a small, smoky pit somewhere in the neighborhood where smudgy fingers have been burned and streaked faces have been scorched in the preparation of an elegant al fresco feast.

For grown people who have never quite lived down the obstreperous child who will work like a slave at any lively outdoor game, eating in the open has a charm not to be attained by the most sumptuous ceiled dining room. At holiday time it seems that everybody who can make a sandwich gets out into the woods to eat. Every Summer the crowds of picnickers seem to increase, and the accommodations for them have been enlarged. Permanent benches and tables of concrete are to be found along many of the roads. They are set well back under the trees, and often a sweet spring, sunk in concrete, bubbles near at hand.

Then there are the garden tea rooms, outdoor barbecues and innumerable hot-dog stands. These last are found in great variety. One would not think it possible that so humble a sandwich could vary so much. And it may be ordered with catsup, mustard, sauerkraut, onions, pickles or chili sauce. The dog itself may be a tasteless and withered article or it may be a plump, spicy and toothsome sausage. In any case it is probably not too digestible, but if it is eaten under the blue sky it is guaranteed harmless.

Citizens of New York compelled to remain in town and desiring outdoor dining rooms may find many. The hotel roof gardens are technically out of doors, but they do not have the charming, somewhat hazardous, ant-eaten appearance which is a part of the true open-air eating room. The best New York offers is the small French or Italian garden, with a freshly watered allantus tree giving it a tropical air. It is not curious that immigrating French restaurateurs have not brought the sidewalk café with them. Our walks are not built for them, and our licensing bureaus would not permit them. But it is rather strange that German innkeepers, of whom there are hundreds here, have not installed open-air eating places corresponding to their own beer gardens.

Our increasing habit of outdoor eating is, according to reports from London, in line with a sudden English longing for the same thing. Dozens of tea gardens have sprung up this year along the roads leading from London. Perhaps the English and the Americans will eventually join the Continentals in the delightful, childish pleasure of eating in the open air.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES

Two More Prize Sheep Strayed.

These are sad hours for the Anti-Third-Term League. A month ago it looked tenderly and hopefully to Senator BORAH and Senator MOSES. Holy simplicity! When the dinner bell rings, Mr. BORAH always makes his way to the regular table. He condescended to Mr. COOLIDGE last week. Now Mr. MOSES, who may be described as a reactionary freethinker, joins the Calvinists.

It costs him more than it does Mr. BORAH to do so. He has to suppress the wild devil of humor that is always capering in him. He is willing enough to support Mr. COOLIDGE, except now and then in Congress, but he loves to jeer his august brethren. Again and again he has said that there are in the Senate ninety-five candidates for President. As he has been "mentioned" himself, make it ninety-six. When he said that a third term for Mr. COOLIDGE would be an "increasing dimuendo," he had nothing against the President, but was most musical, most melancholy.

He keeps his devil under control, but he would enjoy the next campaign more if two Senators were pitted against each other, say "JIM" REED and FRANK WILLIS.

How News Is Gathered.

The dispatch from Mr. JAMES in yesterday's TIMES telling of the trials and tribulations of our Paris Bureau in getting the news of Commander BYRD was an entertaining piece of writing. It was very human, and shot through with humor, sometimes grim. But it was also a highly instructive newspaper document, revealing the organization and the spirit needed in gathering the news of the world.

The event immediately to be reported was sensational. All the earth was waiting to learn of it. But it is to be remembered that the same zeal and energy and foresighted planning displayed on this occasion are always ready to be commanded for service.

This is what makes such a story as that told by Mr. JAMES of interest to the public. People too often take newsgathering as a matter of course. They know little or nothing of the effort, the intelligence, the self-sacrifice, the soldierly sense of duty that lie behind. Mr. JAMES'S dispatch lifts the curtain. The reader sees what actually went on. And he ought to understand that such vigor and daring and initiative and self-devotion are continually at the disposal of the press today. It has the satisfaction of knowing that it can always count upon such wonderful team-play and unselfish loyalty.

A Big America From a Small Starting Point.

Commander BYRD and his companions, it has been pointed out, made their landfall on historic ground, or rather in historic water. Not far from Ver-sur-Mer are the ports whence WILLIAM the Conqueror and SAMUEL CHAMPLAIN set forth. The English Channel is crowded with history on both its shores, and it would be difficult for any airman to land anywhere in the region without evoking historic memories.

This would be particularly true when the airman is an American, or still more so when there are no less than four American fliers. The blood strains of a population of 120,000,000 derived in the great mass from Europe must trace back to many a source on a comparatively small continent. BYRD suggests English origin, NOVILLE sounds French, ACOSTA has a Spanish ring, and BALCHEN is fresh from Scandinavia. Thus the four intrepid fliers might have hit any spot in Europe from North Cape to the Iberian peninsula with a happy ethnic appropriateness.

But unquestionably the English Channel is the central location. It is the arena where Englishmen contended with Frenchmen and Spaniards, though we take it that BYRD and ACOSTA and NOVILLE had neither time nor inclination to fight the Armada and La Hogue over again. As for BALCHEN, it may be recalled that WILLIAM the Conqueror's ancestors were vikings before they became Normans.

Helping to Get a Job.

If civil servants are looking for a patron saint, they should choose "Little Therese." The Budapest correspondent of The London Observer reports that recently the rigors of the reconstruction program forced the retirement of a girl stenographer. She had an aged mother to support, but she sought employment elsewhere in vain.

One day she happened on a copy of the biography of St. Theresa of Lisieux, the young Carmelite nun recently canonized. The typist decided to make a "novena." The ninth visit to the Carmelite Church happened to fall on the day when her employment ended. On that day the chief of the department where she worked received an unannounced visit from a young nun who successfully interceded for her.

The door had scarcely closed on the departing nun when the typist knocked and entered. The chief, nonplussed at his inexplicable capitulation, told her to call back the nun she had sent to plead her cause. But she denied all knowledge of her, and when the employes in the outer room were questioned it transpired that no nun had been seen to enter the building.

Pleading her innocence, the typist drew from her satchel a little book, and saying, "This is the only nun I know anything about," displayed the photograph of St. Theresa, at sight of which the chief declared without hesitation, "Yes, that was she!"

"World Time" for Ocean Fliers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The confusion of the time of day the ocean fliers start from New York and arrive in Europe could be cleared up by the adoption of a "world time" as fixed by Washington and Greenwich. The flier from America would set his watch Washington time and make all reports on that time. The flier from Europe would use Greenwich time. The difference between Washington and Greenwich time would be stated by reliable authority and all the people would be able to make calculations that could be understood.

Huntingdon, Pa., July 2, 1927. J. R. SIMPSON.

LET US BE SILENT NOW.

Let us be silent now.
The night is still.
The wind lies down to sleep
On yonder hill.
The birds' last call
Has died into a dream.
The last far gleam
Has faded from the west.
A single star
Shines out, just where
The silver poplars are,
And close above them,
Low upon the sky.

I wonder why
Men flee from silent beauty.
All day long
They seek the clamor
Of the human throng.
Words fill the air
Like swarms of buzzing flies.
But in men's eyes,
If you will look,
And turn and look again,
You will behold
The sign of lonely men.

Words do not feed
The hunger of the heart.
Let us depart
From words unto the silence
Of the night.
O men, O brother,
How the stars are white!
How quiet are the stones
Beneath our feet;
The air, how still and sweet;
The blessed sky, how wide
And dark and blue,
And silent.
Let our hearts be silent, too,
And wait for some strange manna
That shall fall
To feed us all.

FILM ECONOMY APPROVED.

But Suggestion Is Made That the Industry Improve Its Product.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was very much interested in an editorial which appeared in a recent issue of THE TIMES under the caption "Hollywood Bookkeeping."

It was no surprise to those of us who appreciate value that this infant industry should commence to deflate the salaries paid to the stars of the screen.

This infant started before he cut his six-year molars on a spending jamboree by paying unheard-of salaries. Salaries that amazed the world, astounded staid bankers, were the envy of corporation Presidents and lawyers who were themselves paid princely salaries. But the day of reckoning is at hand. The infant has now cut his wisdom teeth and gained some worldly wisdom from the experience which he has passed through.

The first gesture of retrenchment has been announced, a 10 per cent. reduction in all salaries down to $50 per week. A mere gesture indeed!

Ye gods, $50 per week! Were any such salaries paid in Hollywood when $1,000 per week was considered mere chicken feed by some of the luminaries whose brilliancy many of us never saw? But that was probably our fault; we were afflicted with mental astigmatism and could not see that the throwing of a custard pie constituted art or the act of a star. While stars do throw meteors they never throw custard pies.

But THE TIMES missed one point, at least it refrained from commenting on it, and that is the kind of pictures turned out at the present time. It is no exaggeration to say that there is not one picture in twenty possessing any merit or meeting with the approval of the majority of those who see them.

It seems inexplicable to me that a producing company adopting a name that should give assurance that any picture turned out for public entertainment would be a true and worthy characterization of the time and era which it is representing should be so absolutely indifferent to detail as to introduce the airship and the radio into pictures representing periods when these two great inventions were still slumbering in the brain of man.

All of these producing companies seem to take it for granted that the majority of the public who patronize the screen are a lot of ignoramuses, and are happy and satisfied to accept their version of the time and subject. May I be permitted to say to them that they insult our intelligence and take from us valuable time that could be put to much better advantage?

As there is no forum to which we could appeal for better movies, the only remedy we have is to refrain from patronizing them until such time as they wake up to the fact that better pictures mean more income, which is the life blood of their industry.

QUESTIONS FOR AVIATORS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In regard to the heating of airplane wings, which George W. Barlow suggests in your issue of today, I have a distinct recollection that Lindbergh, in one of the first interviews he gave after his arrival at Paris, said the same thing, intimating that electric heating of the wings to prevent formation of ice thereon would be a sine qua non for the Newfoundland route to Europe to insure safety and success.

But may one inquire why what seems to me to be two other elements of common sense are ignored? The one is why the skid under the tail of a land plane is so sharp that it plows up the ground in a take-off and landing, and the other is why runways for giant planes are not made like automobile roads, so that we shall not hear any more of the ground being too soft or soft in spots, with the result of great danger of disaster in the take-off.

NEW CONCERT AUDIENCE.

Returned Traveler Is Pleased by Change at "Pop" Nights.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What struck your ordinarily high-minded critic the other day? Under Mr. Casella's surprisingly sober baton the orchestra played nothing but Wagner last night, and the auditors listened in hushed devotion. What a contrast with the guzzle and gabble of the last "Pop" audience I sat in four or five years ago!

Returning to this town, I find the New Haven Railroad exactly where I left it, but the new "Pop" audience is a gain. I notice that "Request Night" still brings forth the "Blue Danube" and "Pomp and Circumstance." But on "Tchaikovsky Night" the sixth symphony will be played.

The soul of a music critic, bowed down by a hard season of Rings and Beethoven festivals, may justly yearn for the masterpieces of the Waltz King and Sir Edward Elgar. But why denounce an audience because it prefers first-rate music, gets it and listens to it?

Our Littered Parks.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Returning to New York after a Winter spent in the cities of Italy I find myself missing the comparatively clean Italian streets and parks.

The condition of many of the parks, notably Bryant, and the open space back of the Museum of Natural History, resembles a rag-picker's dump heap. Newspapers everywhere, under the shrubbery, clogged against the fence on the Sixth Avenue side of Bryant, and in both parks littered all over the grass.

Is there nobody to enforce the regulation for putting rubbish into receptacles and is New York so cramped for money that it cannot have an adequate street and park cleaning department? E. H. H.

WOMEN ASSAIL PLAN FOR RIVERSIDE PARK

Want Bridges, Not Tunnels, as Engineers Propose, to Give Access to Outer Edge.

FEAR COMMERCIALIZATION

Too Much Land North of 137th St. Conceded to Railroad, Says Protective League.

A circular letter has been sent to members of the Woman's League for the Protection of Riverside Park and others interested in the care of the park, asking them to support a protest against several of the proposals of the Engineers' Committee for the improvement of the west side in so far as they affect the beauty of the park.

Plans and maps were placed by the Engineers' Committee before the Board of Estimate on June 16 and are being considered by a committee consisting of Joseph V. McKee, President of the Board of Aldermen; Controller Berry and Borough President Miller of Manhattan. A second hearing will be given on July 28.

The protest of the Woman's League, with which is coupled a request that the members of the special committee be informed of the members' views, is as follows:

"The plans show tunnels as a means of access to the outer edge of the park, instead of bridges over the proposed driveway, which is to be on the roof of the covered tracks. Tunnels are at all times unsafe for women and children and are almost always unsanitary.

Fears Obstruction of View.

"The overhead space of eighteen feet (over the tracks) instead of an overhead of fourteen feet will increase the difficulties of proper landscaping and at certain points will bring the proposed roadway so high as to soil park features and be an obstruction of view. The space between the tracks and the roof over the tracks should be not over fourteen feet.

"Between 137th Street and 153d Street too great an area has been conceded to the railroad company. The land along the waterfront which it is planned to return to the city is only wide enough for a marginal way, while the land from 142d Street to 152d Street conceded to the railroad takes from the citizens waterfront property, much of which should be preserved for recreational purposes for the people of this section—ball playing and yachting especially. The statement of Mr. Tuttle, chief engineer of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, that this must be a commercial district, if substantiated, means that there will be an ugly stretch of about a mile of docks and railroad yards as a break in what should be one of the most beautiful drives in America. It will also greatly depreciate residential property values.

Question of Commercialization.

"While it has not been made a part of the engineers' plan, the final plans should definitely include the return to the Park Department of the sections, now under the jurisdiction of the Department of Docks, at Seventy-ninth Street and Ninety-sixth Street, in order that the question of commercialization of any part of the river front shall be definitely settled for all time. It has always been understood that such return would be coincident with the west side development. In this connection the league is unalterably opposed to the proposed transfer to the Department of Piers and Structures of any part of the river front between Seventy-second Street and Harlem Ship Canal, and especially does the league oppose the proposed ferry, with terminals at Seventy-eighth or Seventy-ninth Street. A ferry would bring commercial traffic to and across the park and drive and tend to change the character of the locality.

"The present plans do not include the immediate covering of the tracks above Seventy-ninth Street. This matter should be definitely settled before the plans are adopted."

The letter announces a meeting to be held at 8 P. M. tomorrow in the branch of the public library at 503 West 145th Street.

TRIP TO AMERICA AS PRIZE.

German Infantry Officer Arrives to Visit Military Places.

Major Conrad Stephanus of the Fourth Prussian Infantry arrived in New York yesterday on the Hamburg-American liner New York for a ten-day visit, which was given to him by the German Government as a reward for having the prize battalion of infantry at the Spring inspection.

He was met by former Magistrate Charles A. Oberwager and George J. Schauer, representing the United German Societies, and went last night to Washington to visit at the German Embassy and the War Department. Later he will be a guest of the War Department in visits to West Point, Mitchel Field, Governors Island, Camp Smith at Peekskill and other points of military interest.

Although Major Stephanus's visit is a military reward sanctioned by President von Hindenburg, he is here in no official capacity. He has been in the German Army twenty-seven years and fought against the allied nations, but not against the United States. He was escorted about the city yesterday by Captain William Hones of Second Corps Area headquarters, who was with the Army of Occupation.

NEW PRINCETON CHAPLAIN.

The Rev. C. P. Johnson to Conduct Episcopal Church Work.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., July 4.—The Rev. Charles Paddock Johnson will be Protestant Episcopal Student Chaplain at Princeton University, taking up his duties next September, it was announced here yesterday. Mr. Johnson, who was formerly a member of the Princeton Department of Economics, graduated from the General Theological Seminary, New York, this year. He succeeds the Rev. Comdit N. Eddy, who has been student chaplain here during the past year, but has resigned to accept the rectorate of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, Watertown, N. Y.

Mr. Johnson's work as student chaplain will centre at Foundation House, the headquarters maintained here by the Proctor Foundation, which carries on the work of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the university. The head of the foundation is Bishop Paul Matthews of New Jersey.

W. GRISCOM COXE, SHIPBUILDER, DEAD

Was President of the Pusey & Jones Corporation—Had a Notable Career.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., July 4.—William Griscom Coxe, President of the Pusey & Jones Corporation, shipbuilders, died at his home in Bellevue, near here, today, in his fifty-ninth year. Death was unexpected, although he had been ill for some time.

A nephew of William Griscom, famous as a ship owner, Mr. Coxe served an apprenticeship as a marine engineer with the J. & W. Thompson Company of Clyde Bank, Scotland, after graduation from the Royal Technical College in Berlin. Later he was with the North German Lloyd Line at Bremerhaven, Germany, and from 1894 to 1904 was foreign representative and General Superintendent of the William Cramp & Sons Shipbuilding Company of Philadelphia.

When Mr. Coxe left the Cramps he came here to head the Harlan & Hollingsworth Corporation. Thirteen years later he became general manager of the Pusey & Jones plants here and in Gloucester, N. J. He was also consulting engineer of the Chester and Bristol plants of the Merchants' Shipbuilding Corporation, and during the World War was district manager of the United States Emergency Fleet in the Delaware River.

From 1917 to 1920 Mr. Coxe was President of the Atlantic Coast Shipbuilding Association and of the Reading (Pa.) Paper Mills Company.

During the Spanish-American War he served in the navy as an engineer, with the rank of Lieutenant, and lost the sight of an eye when a boiler tube exploded.

MAN HELD FOR BEATING 75-YEAR-OLD MOTHER

Her Arm Broken and Ear Hurt—Forced to Live in Chicken Coop for Two Weeks.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., July 4.—An indictment charging assault will be asked this week by District Attorney Arthur Rowland against Paul Mateyoke, 30, of 31 Jackson Street, Yonkers. The man is alleged to have ejected his 75-year-old mother, Mrs. Susie Mateyoke, from the house and to have compelled her to live in a chicken coop in the rear yard for the last two weeks.

Patrolman Foley was sent to the house in answer to a complaint sent to Yonkers Police Headquarters that a man was beating a woman at that address. When Patrolman Foley arrived, he found Mateyoke menaced by angry men. Mrs. Mateyoke was found to have received a fracture of her left arm, which she said was caused when she was struck by a stone thrown by her son.

DEDICATE CAMP AT CRAFTS.

Community Church Members Hold Exercises at Site Near Carmel.

Special to The New York Times.

CARMEL, N. Y., July 4.—In the presence of more than 100 members of the Community Church of New York City their homestead camp on the forty-two-acre tract of land at Crafts, near here, was dedicated this afternoon. Dr. Victor Olss, doner of the camp site, made the presentation to the church and it was accepted on behalf of the Community Church by Joseph E. McAfee, a social welfare worker, who announced the plan of the society for an extensive development of the camp for the entire membership of the church.

The dedication address was by the Rev. John H. Holmes, pastor of the Community Church, on the subject, "Is America Still the Hope of the World?"

After reciting the struggles and sacrifices made to bring into being the present America, Mr. Holmes summed up by saying that America would still be the hope of the world if it remained true to those factors in her original life which created that hope in the beginning. He recited the three outstanding factors as, first, the land to be used as the heritage of all; second, that we shall welcome all peoples to our shores, and, lastly, that we must ever remain true to the ideals of liberty as embodied in the Declaration of Independence.

The reading of a poem descriptive of the beauty of the camp site, written by Mrs. Anderson, the camp director and Community Church worker, closed the exercises.

SAYS ACTOR STRUCK HER.

Woman, in Court Bruised, Accuses Jack La Rue, Who Pays $25 Fine.

Jack La Rue, who plays a sprok in "Crime," a melodrama at the Times Square Theatre, appeared in West Side Court yesterday on a disorderly conduct charge made by Annette A'Leau, who said that she also acted in the play.

The woman, who lives at 334 West Forty-fifth Street, attracted Patrolman Daniel Keogh of the West Forty-seventh Street Station early yesterday morning by her screams. Keogh ran to that address and saw La Rue strike her, he said. He arrested the actor after a scuffle. The woman testified that La Rue had hit her when he had discovered her speaking to an artist for whom she had once posed.

La Rue denied striking Miss A'Leau. But as she appeared in court with her face bruised and her right eye discolored, Magistrate Earl A. Smith fined the actor $25.

MARCUS EULOGIZED AS A BENEFACTOR

Warm Tribute Paid Dead Banker at Funeral by the Rev. Dr. Israel Goldman.

HIS CHARITY TO ALL CREEDS

Persons Prominent in Several Walks of Life Among 500 at the Services.

More than 500 persons, many of them prominent in banking, legal, business and public welfare circles, paid tribute yesterday to the memory of Joseph S. Marcus, President of the Bank of United States, for whom funeral services were held in the Temple of the Congregation B'nai Jeshurun, 257 West Eighty-eighth Street.

The services in the temple were preceded by private services at the Marcus home, 277 West End Avenue, where, after an illness of two years, Mr. Marcus died early Sunday morning in his sixty-fifth year.

The services at the temple were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Israel Goldstein, assisted by the Rev. Jacob Schwartz, cantor. As the cortège entered the temple Chopin's funeral march was played on the organ. A prayer was read by the Rev. Mr. Schwartz and three anthems were sung by the choir, "Show Me the Way," "Oh, Dry Those Tears," by Del Riego, in which Anita Lowell, soprano, was soloist, and a memorial anthem, in which Dorothy Edwards, contralto, was soloist.

Dr. Goldstein eulogized Mr. Marcus as a great friend and benefactor, whose charity knew no racial or religious bounds.

"Jacob Marcus is mourned by thousands of all creeds and races," he said. "Out of the bosom of this great city there comes a deep sigh because a great friend and benefactor has passed away. From Jewish New York and this congregation, which was proud to count this man as a member, a stream of sympathy pours forth to his family.

"His place in the community spells a chapter of achievement with inner and outer splendor. It is an epic of American challenge and American promise which fits in well with this national holiday.

"His demeanor was always that of a gentleman. He came here as a youth, endowed with character, ambition and intelligence, out of which he wove the fabric of his success. He had faith in the Jewish people and they had faith in him. He rose with his people, never forfeiting their esteem, and not away from them, as many others do when success comes."

Dr. Goldstein spoke of Mr. Marcus as a builder of orphan asylums, hospitals and other philanthropic institutions to provide for the immigrant.

"When the war came," he continued, "Joseph Marcus was among the first to give the Jewish answer to the American cause. His life proved how much the Jew can bless the land that blesses him. And like the story of Abraham, 'They that bless shall be blessed,' America blessed him and he blessed America."

Dr. Goldstein announced after the services that mourners' services would be held daily through the week at the Marcus home at 8 A. M. and 6 P. M.

Among those attending the services were Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy, Judge Albert J. Cohn of the Bronx County Court, a son-in-law of Mr. Marcus; George C. Van Tuyl, former State Superintendent of Banks; Joseph H. Cohen, President of Beth Israel Hospital; Max Weinstein, President of Rusak's, and Magistrate Maurice H. Gottlieb. Burial was in Union Fields Cemetery, Brooklyn. The funeral cortège was composed of more than twenty-five automobiles and headed by a motorcycle police escort.

Father and Mother of New Jersey Man Die in a Wreck Near Easton, Pa.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Pa., July 4.—Two persons were killed and four others were injured when the driver of an automobile traveling on the highway just west of this city fell asleep early this morning and crashed into a telephone pole.

Christopher Prine, aged 78, of Chicago was instantly killed. Mrs. Olive Prine, 68 years, his wife, died in a local hospital this afternoon from a fractured skull.

Hugh Prine, aged 38, a cooper, of Westfield, N. J., son of the dead couple; Mrs. Edna Prine, 35, his wife, and their two children, Alta, 8, and Lucille, 5, are in the hospital. Prine has a severed tendon in the knee and is suffering from shock. His wife suffered a possible fracture of the jaw, concussion of the brain and lacerations. Alta is suffering from concussion and a fractured left shoulder. The younger girl was not seriously injured.

The party was on its way from Chicago to Westfield, where Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Prine were to spend the Summer with their son. They had left Beaver Falls, Pa., yesterday morning and had driven most of the day and all night. Hugh Prine had driven the entire distance.

At the hospital today Prine stated he believed he had dozed off for a moment. The car crossed the highway and crashed into the pole while he was unconscious. The other occupants of the automobile, he believed, were all asleep at the time.

The elder Prine never realized what had happened, as his skull was crushed and he died instantly.

Do We Ever Ask Ourselves What We Are Living For?

A dear old lady told us a few weeks ago that she was living to do no only her own life-work, but even more to live out the life of her mother, who had gone on before.

She was living a simple life, pure, true and humble.

The life that comes after such living is like yonder rainbow that followed the rain.

BRITISH PARE DOWN BIG CRUISER DEMAND

NOW SUGGEST 460,000 TONS

CONFERENCE AIR IS CLEARER

Peking's Delegate to League, in Name of Nationalists, Warns of Any Anglo-Japanese Deal on China.

By WYTHE WILLIAMS.

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, July 4.—The British delegation to the Tri-Power Conference for Limitation of Naval Armament abandoned today their cruiser program calling for a total of 600,000 tons and will present new figures when the experts take up this subject again, either tomorrow or on Wednesday. The action of the British delegates came only after two days of secret meetings with the American technicians, meetings which were also attended by Ambassador Hugh S. Gibson, who, instead of taking a week-end vacation as it was generally supposed he would do, has been working harder than any member of the conference.

The British decision to surrender a position the maintenance of which would almost certainly have wrecked the conference came only after Mr. Gibson, who is head of the American delegation and Chairman of the conference, drew a careful picture of just how quickly the United States could build not only cruisers of 10,000 tons but also great battle cruisers of more than 40,000 tons—superior to Great Britain's Rodney and Nelson.

American Building Power Stressed.

Lest it were assumed that American shipyards were not ready to take up a new building program, the Americans showed what else in the shape of manufacturing plants, quite aside from shipyards, could be quickly mobilized.

Also it was emphasized that American naval engineers had plans in hand for super-cruisers embodying the qualities of aircraft carriers, which would prove more powerful than any warcraft ever launched.

Naturally, it was also pointed out that if America was forced to undertake such a program as a result of failure of the Geneva conference, then it was entirely probable that she might also refuse to renew the Washington Naval Treaty of 1922 when it comes up for consideration in 1931.

The British have not yet come down entirely to the maximum cruiser figures of 300,000 tons in the American proposals, but at the present moment, as one authority expressed it, "they are thinking hard."

The latest figures suggested call for about 460,000 tons. This is considered still too high by the Americans, but the latter now appear willing to come up to perhaps 350,000 tons. Therefore, it now seems probable that an eventual compromise may be made somewhere between these figures which will place the cruiser tonnage allowed both nations at about 400,000. This, according to the American experts, is not more than the United States really needs.

"We are willing to take less," they say, "if we could persuade our friends to do the same."

Chu Warns of Any Deal on China.

A new element was injected into the conference today by Chao Hsin Chu, the Chinese delegate to the Council of the League of Nations, who issued a statement concerning reports that the British and Japanese were bargaining at Geneva with reference to China. Mr. Chu said:

"I am requested by the Chinese Nationalist Government to declare that the Government and people of the republic of China will refuse to recognize any decision affecting China arrived at by the present or any other conference in which China is not represented and participating equally in the deliberations."

A significant point in this is that Mr. Chu, who is the representative at Geneva of the Peking Government, is now speaking for the first time in the name of the Nationalist Government, thus giving the indication that, for him, the Peking Government is no longer an important factor in the Chinese situation.

Accompanying the foregoing declaration is an assertion to the effect that it is based not alone on rumors but on facts tending to show a line-up of great powers against the United States, whose persistent attitude toward China, it is said, is now regarded as "a nuisance" and also as "a stumbling block" to the plans of both Great Britain and Japan. Chinese here indicate that they may have more to say in this regard within the next few days.

Meanwhile, the Japanese, after tentative suggestions made a week ago, showing friendliness toward British proposals to change the Washington compact at Geneva, have retired into an Oriental silence from which nothing has been able to drag them.

Americans Celebrate the Fourth.

The Fourth of July was observed today by the American conference delegation and the American colony in Geneva at the Hotel Beau Rivage, which serves as headquarters for both the British and Japanese delegations.

An address was delivered by Admiral Hilary Jones, the other American delegate to the conference, who vigorously outlined the American naval policy and declared that America's domestic ocean-going commerce was 50 per cent. greater than the foreign trade of Great Britain, and reviewed with sympathy the situation of other sea powers in their combined effort to effect a treaty of Geneva.

In view of the British delegates' decision to reduce their demands for huge cruiser tonnage, the conference atmosphere is more healthful tonight than it has been in the past week, even though it is apparent that there are other difficulties yet to be overcome.

Talk of Anglo-Japanese Alliance.

GENEVA, July 4 (AP).—Fourth of July Chinese fireworks exploded at the Naval Conference today when Nationalist China issued a solemn warning that the delegates must not discuss questions affecting the interests of the Chinese people.

This warning was communicated to the press by Chao Hsin Chu, Chinese member of the Council of the League of Nations, from his lakeside villa.

It is believed to be China's answer to the reports in British newspapers that Great Britain and Japan are considering the wisdom of renewing the Anglo-Japanese alliance, which died at the Washington Conference when the four-power Pacific compact was substituted for it.

Chinese circles see in such renewal an Anglo-Japanese combination against China.

The talk of renewing the Anglo-Japanese alliance seems to have been received coldly in Japanese circles in Geneva, where apparently it is thought such an alliance would be objectionable from two standpoints; first, because it would create an impression among the Chinese that Japan would back the British policy in China, and, second, an impression in Soviet Russia, with which the Japanese have fairly satisfactory relations, that Tokio would side with Downing Street in any anti-Soviet campaign.

It is averred, moreover, that the Japanese have a pretty clear idea that an alliance in the Pacific between them and the British is not to the liking of the United States and that the Japanese do not desire to prejudice Japanese-American relations.

It is understood that the preliminary provisional agreements among the naval experts show that there will be no great difficulty in finding an accord on the total tonnage of destroyers and submarines. The figures already tacitly approved in these two categories of warships are within both the maximum and minimum figures advocated by the American delegation in its original proposal, and in the case of destroyers, approach the American minimum figures, which gave the United States and Great Britain 200,000 tons each and Japan 120,000 tons.

The American maximum estimate for submarines was 90,000 tons each for the United States and Great Britain, and 54,000 for Japan.

JONES STRESSES ROLE OF OUR SEA TRAFFIC

In Geneva Address, Admiral Declares Belief in Our Right to Navy "Equal to Strongest."

GENEVA, July 4 (AP).—The extraordinary volume of America's seaborne commerce, its potent influence upon most of the great industries in the United States and a veiled hint regarding "the consequences if there is a serious interruption," set forth by Admiral Hilary P. Jones, of the American Naval delegation, thrilled the American Colony of Geneva today when it assembled to celebrate the Fourth.

Laying stress on the need for parity of naval strength, the Admiral continued:

"Excluding trade with the Philippines and that on the Great Lakes, our aggregate domestic seaborne commerce is close to 170,000,000 cargo tons a year. It is surprising to learn that this domestic ocean-going trade of the United States is 50 per cent. greater than the total foreign trade of Great Britain."

"The blocking of the great traffic lanes along our sea coast and those leading to the United States over the seas," said the Admiral, "would unquestionably so dislocate the business of the entire country and bring such hard times upon us that it would mean practical industrial starvation on a scale beyond comparison."

He added that while believing in America's right to a navy equal to that "of the strongest," the American delegation at the conference viewed with sympathy the situation of other sea powers, and consequently, had endeavored to appreciate the problems of the other nations taking part in the present parleys.

"We honestly hope that this conference will succeed in coming to an equitable agreement," the Admiral concluded, "that a common meeting ground will be discovered and that to the world may be given a treaty of Geneva which will keep taxation within proper limits and contribute to the maintenance of world peace and to the security of each and every power."

Upon the anniversary of independence, Admiral Jones had this to say:

"It seems to me that the time has arrived when we should declare our spiritual independence. While we want the good opinion of all the world and stand ready to do our best to deserve it, we cannot sacrifice our independence of thought and ideals at the dictates of any one in order to win such good opinions."

Admiral Jones was introduced by his cousin, S. Pinkney Tuck, the United States Consul at Geneva. Both are descended from the great Chief Justice, John Marshall. The crowd of 200 applauded the Admiral and the Consul stood at attention for "The Star-Spangled Banner," danced to Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" and laughed over the orchestra's rendition of "It Ain't Gonna Rain No More," which was considered a sly allusion to the British Navy.

DOCTOR DROWNS AT DAYTONA

Hungarian, Said to Be Cousin of Admiral Horthy, Dies in Surf.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., July 4 (AP).—Dr. L. Martin de Bizaki Puky, Hungarian attorney and said to be a first cousin of Admiral Horthy, ruler of Hungary, was drowned here yesterday while swimming in the surf.

Coroner E. A. Donovan is in communication with the Hungarian Embassy at Washington in an effort to ascertain what disposition to make of the body.

Dr. Puky resided in New York for about ten years and spent more than a year in Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, before coming to Daytona Beach six months ago.

Puky had gone swimming alone and ventured too far from other bathers who might have rescued him. He had not practiced law since coming to this country fifteen years ago.

Soviet Is Again Arresting Ministers and Jailing Them

RIGA, July 4.—The Soviet authorities have arrested several ministers, most of them Baptists, in Leningrad and elsewhere. Many of them had already spent considerable periods in Bolshevist prisons.

Soon after the outburst of anti-religious activity in December, the Soviet authorities liberated most of the Baptists, arrested on condition that they restricted their work to certain limits.

The Bolsheviki are now throwing them into prison again, apparently without charging them with any particular offense.

OLD LION BREWERY RAVAGED BY FLAMES

Thousands Watch Spectacular Blaze That Halts Elevated and Surface Transit.

FIRECRACKERS SUSPECTED

Wind Protects Women's Hospital—Five Alarms Sounded—Loss Estimated at $100,000.

The interior of the old Lion Brewery which runs from 107th to 108th Street and from Columbus Avenue nearly to Amsterdam Avenue was wrecked by fire which started shortly after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Between 18,000 and 20,000 barrels of near beer, hops worth $50,000 and malt worth $75,000, were in the building. H. A. Murray of 998 Fifth Avenue, owner, and L. M. Schneider, superintendent, of the brewery, said they feared all or most of the beer, hops and malt had been ruined by fire, water and smoke.

Mr. Murray, who motored to New York from the Meadow Brook Club at Westbury, L. I., where he was watching a polo match when notified of the fire, attributed the blaze to giant firecrackers thrown from nearby roofs to the four-story section of the brewery at Columbus Avenue and 108th Street. Mr. Schneider did likewise. Two watchmen in the brewery said they did not know how the fire started, but it was in this section.

Acting Fire Chief Thomas F. Dougherty said the origin of the fire was a mystery to him, and that he had found nothing to show whether the firecracker theory was or was not correct. Deputy Fire Marshals, who made an investigation last night, were unable to determine the cause. They questioned the watchmen who said they had made their rounds as usual during the day and had seen nothing out of the ordinary.

Five Alarms Sounded.

Five alarms were turned in chiefly because of the proximity of the Woman's Hospital which runs from 109th to 110th Streets, between Columbus and Amsterdam Avenues. Luckily, the wind was in the opposite direction, and carried smoke and embers eastward and southward. Smoke rolled from the burning brewery in thick clouds but was carried upward. It was so dense that if it had billowed downward into the street canyons for any length of time, firemen and policemen said, they would have been compelled to drive thousands of persons from their tenement homes to avoid wholesale suffocation.

Twenty-two engine companies, four truck companies, a water tower and four battalion chiefs were called out to fight the fire, and more than 100 police reserves were summoned from stations along the west side. An ambulance and a rescue squad also were on the scene, but they were not needed. The only rescues were of three cats, which firemen found on the roof. When the fire was out another cat, which must have found a safe hideaway somewhere in the burning building, strolled out on a gutter at the edge of the roof. Firemen carried it downstairs, whereupon Brownie, the Irish terrier of Engine Company 53, which follows that company to all fires, chased the cat down the street to teach it a lesson in fire etiquette.

Traffic on the Sixth and Ninth Avenue elevated lines, which use the same structure at this point, was suspended from 3:15 to 5:15 o'clock. Thousands of persons returning from holiday picnics in Bronx and Van Cortlandt Parks were transferred to the Lexington and the Seventh Avenue subway lines at uptown stations. Surface car traffic in Columbus Avenue was cut off between 100th and 110th Streets until after 6 o'clock.

The blaze furnished a holiday spectacle to thousands of persons who gathered outside the police lines at 106th and 109th Streets and Columbus Avenue. Several thousand residents of the vicinity watched the fire from windows and doorways of the tenements in Columbus Avenue and the side streets. The high places of Morningside Heights and the hills at the northern end of Central Park were good vantage points for views of drifting clouds of smoke. Hundreds of motorists stopped their cars on top of hills in Central Park to watch the clouds. From time to time they could see thick tongues of flame shoot up from the six-story section of the brewery. At times the flames rose fifty feet above the roof.

Long Fight With Fire.

After about an hour the fire in the four-story section at 108th Street and Columbus Avenue was under control. Thereupon, firemen were able to carry lines of hose through this section to its roof, and also to the roof of the ice-house just west of the remaining fire, which centred in the six-story section at 107th Street and Columbus Avenue. More than an hour more was taken in subduing flames in the huge malt bins in this section. It was the burning malt that gave rise to the great clouds of smoke.

Although all the offices, housed in the four-story section where the fire started, were destroyed by the fire, all important papers and other valuables were safe in a fire-proof vault in the middle part of the building.

Mr. Murray said that the damage probably would exceed $100,000, and might prove to be double that amount when a final check was made today or tomorrow. He added that he was fully protected by insurance.

Although the brewery bears several signs, all reading "established 1850," Mr. Murray said that the four-story section where the fire started was in reality more than 100 years old. Before it was bought by the Lion Brewery Company, of which Mr. Murray is President, it was owned by the firm of Bernheimer & Schmidt. Mr. Murray said the brewery was built by a family named Schmidt, which settled in that section more than 150 years ago and owned the Schmidt farm, extending from Central Park to Amsterdam Avenue and from 106th to 110th Street. The old Schmidt "mansion," a weather-beaten frame house, still stands on the north side of 108th Street, half way between Columbus and Amsterdam Avenues.

Before prohibition, the Lion Brewery was well known. It maintained a famous eating and drinking place called the Lion Palace at 110th Street and Broadway, which was a favorite gathering place for Columbia students and was noted for its German cooking and its Pilsner beer.

Little of the east part of the brewery remained last night except the brick walls.

New Altitude Record Is Made With Seaplane By Lieut. Champion, Who Rises Nearly 7 Miles

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Flying to a height of about seven miles above the capital in a Wright Apache type of seaplane, Lieutenant Carlton G. Champion Jr., an aviator attached to the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics, established a new world's altitude record today for a seaplane.

He was up just fifty-five minutes and his altimeter showed on landing that he had gone 37,500 feet. The official record will not be known until the barographs have been examined and calibrated by the Bureau of Standards tomorrow. The corrections may change the record upward or downward, but it is not expected that it will be brought down more than about 1,000 feet. Even if it should be lowered that much due to drift, or wind, or for other reason, the distance will still be nearly a mile higher than any man has yet gone in a seaplane carrying a pontoon.

Lieutenant Champion broke his own record which he made on May 5. Flying the same plane from the Naval Air Station at Hampton Roads, Va., he went up 33,455 feet.

Today's flight was made from the Naval Air Station at Anacostia and the weather was perfect. Lieutenant Champion, who has been making a series of tests of altitude flying conditions, wore garments especially fitted for the cold climate he found aloft. His face was encased in a fur-lined leather helmet, and he wore special goggles which were protected in such a manner as to keep the moisture from freezing on the lenses.

The flight was one in a series of experiments connected with this type of plane. The Apache was used in the record of May 5. On both occasions the climb was performed by a Pratt & Whitney Wasp engine, one of the new types that has been developed at the Bureau of Aeronautics, where was also developed the Wright air-cooled engines used in the polar, Lindbergh, Hawaii and America flights.

The world's high altitude record with a land plane is held by a Frenchman, who recently went to 40,000 feet, but it is now believed by naval aviators that the new Wasp engine in a land plane will break that record. The seaplane went today as high as it could go and used about 45 gallons of gas.

BROOKHART ASSAILS RESERVE BANK PLAN

DENOUNCES FARM BILL VETO

Characterizes It as "a Veto of the Farmer's Right to Economic Equality."

BELOIT, Kan., July 4 (AP).—Assailing the Federal Reserve System and the President's veto of the McNary-Haugen bills, Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa, in an address here today, called upon the people of the West and South "to unite in a common program to end the financial rule that dominates both parties."

Senator Brookhart charged the Federal Reserve Bank, by its own description in its official book, is "a money trust for the purpose of maintaining higher rates of interest upon the public generally while diverting this vast sum for redeposit into New York at low rates of interest for speculation."

The veto of the McNary-Haugen bill Senator Brookhart called "a veto of the Republican platform, a veto of the right of the farmer to economic equality, a veto of the West and South, with an underwriting of Wall Street."

"The Federal Reserve Banking system gives as its reason for paying nothing for the use of deposits by members in the Federal Reserve Banks," said Mr. Brookhart, "that it would require an investment of the funds to earn the necessary money, and therefore tie up these deposits so they could not be used in a sudden emergency or seasonal requirement. The right to issue Federal Reserve notes is the complete answer to this suggestion.

"A more sinister or evil device could not be arranged for using the people's savings to their own injury and the destruction of property values. Therefore I conclude that the Federal Reserve System upon its merits is against agriculture and against every legitimate business. It has been said that it prevented a panic, but it handed the farmers the greatest panic in the history of agriculture."

Transportation, industry, credit and public utilities of every kind have had the assistance and protection of the Federal Bank law, he said, and declared agriculture should receive equal consideration.

HOSPITAL INQUIRY TODAY.

Jewish Interns of Kings County to Continue Testimony.

Mayor Walker's investigation of charges of anti-Semitism in the city hospitals, especially in the Kings County Hospital, is scheduled to be resumed today at City Hall at 2 P. M. Dr. Irving Zweiffler, one of four Jewish internes at the Kings County institution, will continue his testimony.

Dr. Zweiffler was on the stand on last Friday when adjournment was taken. He testified that the chart showing the cause of death of a child patient had been changed when officials in the hospital learned that he had not performed an operation which immediately preceded death. The chart, he said, at first reported death as due to "faulty technique" but this was changed to read "natural causes."

The Mayor's investigation was precipitated by a hazing administered on June 20 to three of Dr. Zweiffler's Jewish colleagues in the hospital, Drs. Hyman U. Soloway, Louis Borow and Edward Katzkee.

Ex-Rumanian Premier Disclaims Dishonesty in Paying 12 Billion Lei Last Day in Office.

BUCHAREST, July 4.—Former Premier Averescu has broken the silence he maintained since his dismissal from office a month ago with an article in his newspaper, Viaotorul, denying that any dishonesty was shown by himself of his Government in disbursing about 12,000,000,000 lei on his last day in office.

Since their retirement M. Averescu and his colleagues have been accused by political enemies and most of the newspapers of having emptied the Government treasuries directly or indirectly for their own benefit.

The former Premier writes in his newspaper that he is forced to defend his honor and that of his colleagues by publishing the facts of expenditures, which in some cases were made in secret.

Most of the money, M. Averescu declares, was spent by the Ministry of the Interior for special war munitions and equipment urgently needed by the Rumanian army. Other large sums, he says, were used to pay accounts accumulated by the Averescu Government, which were all cleared up before it left office. The security of Rumania was at stake during his term of office, he declares. He further threatened to make further disclosures if the attacks against his Government are continued.

Soon after the fall of the Averescu Government the ex-Premier was attacked in the papers supporting Prince Sirbey and M. Bratiano on charges of having misused Government funds and left the Treasury empty. An audit of the books, according to a report printed in The Universal, showed that the Averescu Cabinet had paid out more than 10,000,000,000 lei on its last day of life, most of which could not be traced.

The newspapers continued their attacks, demanding the arrest of the members of the Averescu Cabinet, but so far only a departmental investigation of the matter has been made.

One of the last orders of M. Averescu's Cabinet Council was one for payment of salaries for 1926 to all Ministers and Members of Parliament.

When Prince Stirbey assumed the Premiership he demanded that this advance salary be returned, but though this was a month ago, only the Peasant Deputy John Herban of Galati has sent his unearned salary back to the Government. His photograph on a postcard is being sold in the streets as a symbol of political honesty and he is attracting much front page interest in Bucharest.

The residences of M. Averescu and his former Cabinet colleagues have been watched by detectives, which caused a rumor to spread through the city several days ago that arrests might be expected. So far, however, the detectives seem only to have prevented certain political leaders and former army officers from entering these houses. The principals themselves have remained indoors for more than a week.

Girl Is Shot, Suitor Is Sought.

Frances Buondino, 17 years old, was taken to St. Catherine's Hospital, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, with a bullet wound in her right breast inflicted, the police say, by Bruno Foline of 82 South Ninth Street, Brooklyn. According to the police the young woman was shot at her home by Foline when she refused to marry him. The bullet grazed the girl's right arm and then struck her breast. She fainted and in the excitement Foline disappeared before neighbors could detain him.

A SUICIDE OFF LINER BEARING DEAD WIFE

Col. W. P. Stone, Retired, Leaps From Steamer on His Way Here With the Body.

SON IGNORANT OF TRAGEDY

Ship's Officers Break the News to Him as Brothers and Sister Wait at Pier With Hearse.

Colonel William P. Stone, U. S. A., retired, who was bringing to this country the body of his wife, who had died in Paris, committed suicide at 1:20 P. M. last Sunday by jumping into the sea from the Cunarder Tuscania during a dense fog when the vessel was about 100 miles east of Nantucket Lightship.

A life buoy was thrown overboard when the alarm was given and a lifeboat was manned and lowered to the water ready to cast off directly the passenger was sighted. Captain Robert Smart, master of the Tuscania, circled in the fog until the ship came around to the floating lifebuoy, but nothing was seen of the body.

A radio message was sent to John G. M. Stone of 126 East Thirty-fifth Street, brother of Colonel Stone, but it did not arrive, and nothing was known of the tragedy by the family until the Tuscania reached Quarantine early yesterday morning, and Caleb Stone, one of the Colonel's three sons, boarded the ship expecting to meet the father.

Break the News to Him.

The son went to the purser's office and asked to be shown to his father's cabin. He was taken into another cabin and told to prepare himself for the sad news. He was then informed of the suicide. Deeply moved, he said, "Has my father gone, too?"

Captain Smart, commander of the liner, and the ship's officers expressed their sympathy and did what they could to help him prepare to break the news to his sister and two brothers who were waiting at the pier at the foot of West Fourteenth Street with a private hearse to convey Mrs. Stone's body to a funeral chapel where funeral services were held. The body will be sent to Arlington Cemetery for burial. Mrs. Stone, who was 63 years old, died unexpectedly of heart disease.

Relatives said that the Colonel and Mrs. Stone were a most devoted couple and had been married forty years. They lived in Denver for several years and went to Paris a year ago. They were living in a hotel there when Mrs. Stone died.

Officers of the Tuscania said that Colonel Stone boarded the ship at Cherbourg on June 25. On Sunday morning he attended the church service and told passengers later at lunch that he had enjoyed it. After leaving the dining salon Colonel Stone went into the smoking room and then walked to the after end of the promenade deck on the starboard side, where he jumped overboard.

Deck Boy Gives Alarm.

A deck boy hearing the splash, ran to the side of the ship and saw a man in a gray suit in the water. He telephoned to the officer on watch on the forward bridge who stopped the ship and dropped the lifebuoy overboard as the lifeboat was being lowered.

Passengers who spoke with Colonel Stone on Sunday morning said that he had alluded to his wife's death and that he said he did not think it would be long before he followed her.

One of Colonel Stone's sons commanded a destroyer in the World War and is now with the United States fleet in Chinese waters.

Colonel Stone was born in Arkansas Dec. 30, 1860, and was graduated from West Point Military Academy in the Class of 1880, and from the Artillery School in 1886. After thirty years' service with the artillery he was retired at his own request in 1916, with the rank of Major. He volunteered for service in the World War and was made a Colonel in July, 1918.

SLAIN MAN'S BROTHER HELD

Brooklyn Shooting Linked With the Death of "Red" Somma.

Arraigned on suspicion of homicide, Frank Somma of 602 Henry Street, Brooklyn, pleaded not guilty yesterday in the Fifth Avenue Police Court and was held without bail to await examination in the Homicide Court on July 8.

Somma was arrested after the death of Vincent Minnella of 23 President Street. Minnella was standing in front of 53 President Street late Sunday night when an automobile drove up. An occupant, according to witnesses, fired through the car window. Minnella was struck in the abdomen, and died early yesterday morning.

The detectives of the Hamilton Avenue Precinct believe the shooting is an outgrowth of an encounter several months ago between the victim of Sunday night's affair and Ralph, alias "Red" Somma, a brother of the man held. On the earlier occasion Minnella and "Red" Somma fired pistols at each other on President Street near the scene of the latest affray.

Both "Red" Somma and Minnella were wounded at that time. "Red" Somma died, but Minnella recovered. Minnella convinced the police that "Red" Somma was the aggressor in the fatal shooting. On the strength of his relationship to the victim of the first killing, Frank Somma was taken into custody several hours after Minnella was shot. He stoutly maintains knowing nothing of the affair.

CLOSE LACLEDE GAS DEAL.

St. Louis Company Passes Today to a Syndicate in Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, July 4.—Control of the Laclede Gas Light Company and affiliated properties formally passes tomorrow from the hands of Charles A. Munroe and his four associates to the Utilities Light & Power Corporation, headed by H. L. Clarke of Chicago.

Closing of the option which was obtained by the utilities corporation six weeks ago at a profit to Mr. Munroe and associates variously estimated from $7,000,000 to $13,000,000. Closing of the deal was announced today by M. D. Curran, Vice President of the St. Louis Coke & Iron Company, control of which is involved in the transaction.

The deal evidences the confidence the Chicago syndicate has in the franchise and charter of the gas company, which is now the object of attack by Mayor Miller.

Fourth of July Reflections By the Sage of Beverly Hills

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Co.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 4.—Well, this is the Fourth of July and my kids popping these giant crackers haven't been any great patriotic solace to my old battle scarred tummy.

This is Coolidge's and Georgie Cohan's birthday. Georgie writes his country's songs and Calvin writes its speeches. Georgie started out waving a flag and Cal the ballot. Shows you which one will get you the farthest.

I was born on Nov. 4, which is election day, and if it hadn't been for election day there would have been no Coolidge in the Black Hills. My birthday has made more men and sent more back to honest work than any other days in the year.

At that, I wish both of them well. They are both good kids, even if they do both talk with a whine.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

CITY'S SUBWAY BILL $463,172,774 SO FAR

ITS PERSONNEL TRIPLED

Report Shows $7,000,000 Saved by Limiting Charges on Surety Bonds.

New York City's investment in subway construction to date is fairly close to half a billion dollars, it was disclosed yesterday in figures made public by the Board of Transportation in a statement outlining the work of that board in its three years of existence.

"The total disbursement on behalf of the city for all rapid transit construction purposes," says the statement, "beginning with the first rapid transit construction expense in 1900, to the end of June, 1927, amounted to $463,172,774.80. The Board of Transportation, in three years, authorized the payment of $110,452,954, or 24 per cent. of Father Knickerbocker's entire rapid transit construction cost over a period of twenty-seven years."

The total of contracts awarded by the board, however, has been greater than the amount of expenditures—actually $189,632,580, of which $165,861,050 was for the city's new independent subway. It has now before it ten bids for the construction of the Nassau-Broad Street subway, one of the most difficult and costly of subway construction undertakings. The lowest bid is $10,300,000 and the highest $13,800,000. When the contract is awarded for this work the board will have actually awarded more than $200,000,000 of contracts.

The contracts the board has awarded in its three years of work since July 1, 1924, are divided as follows:

Interborough system	4,401,479.77
B. M. T. system	20,292,273.44
Track materials	783,377.70
Miscellaneous	94,007.80
	$189,632,580.21

Variety of Awards.

All sorts of costs, from test borings to the construction of storage yards go into the total awarded for the new subway. The largest single contract let was $22,282,309 for the building of the Fulton Street-East River route from Park Place and Church Street, Manhattan to Nassau and Jay Street, Brooklyn. The second largest was for $20,000,000 for the Fifty-third Street line from Eighth Avenue, Manhattan, to Long Island City.

Among the awards under Contract 3 with the Interborough system, $1,140,023 was for storage yards at Lenox Avenue, $697,570 for storage yard at Corona, Queens; $948,091 for the Flushing extension, $482,751 for the Queensboro extension and $1,382,042 for miscellaneous I. R. T. purposes, such as inspection sheds, relocating columns, relocating stairways, erecting transfer connection between the elevated and the subway lines in the Bronx, widening several highways and for passenger elevators at the 191st Street station on the Broadway-Seventh Avenue line.

Awards for the B. M. T. system were principally for six major and seven minor contracts amounting to $14,335,982 for the Fourteenth Street-Eastern line; $4,647,960.24 for a great storage and repair yard at Coney Island, $1,100,240 for extension of the platforms at forty subway stations, $159,069 for station finish and tracks for the extension of the Fourth Avenue subway at Fort Hamilton, and $43,726 for miscellaneous construction. The Coney Island shops alone involved twenty-two contracts. These yards are adequate to inspect, repair and store 2,000 cars.

Board's Staff Enlarged.

When the board took over the work of the State Transit Commission so far as it related to subway construction, the statement says, it also took over a personnel of 775 engineers, designers, draftsmen, clerks, stenographers, inspectors, &c. With the job of building a new $600,000,000 subway system the force was enlarged, as occasion required, and is now nearly three times as great, actually 2,301 employes, one-half working in the office and one-half supervising construction work in the field. The daily average of men employed by the contractors, the statement says, is 11,128.

The statement concludes:

"At least $7,000,000 will be saved to the city by the board's recent insistence that the State Insurance Department compel surety bonding companies to limit their charges for writing subway construction bonds to the extent of the liability assumed and not to the extent of the amount of the contract which had been the custom for many years."

Business Arbitration Record.

Publication of The Arbitration Year Book by the Oxford University Press, containing the first complete public record of the practice of arbitration in business and what business is doing to establish national and international commercial peace, was announced yesterday by the American Arbitration Association of 342 Madison Avenue, which sponsored the preparation of the volume. The book which has 1,152 pages, contains a foreword by Herbert Hoover.

DEVISES SHORT CUT TO RECAPTURE B. M. T.

Untermyer Plans to Sue for a Declaratory Judgment, Thus Avoiding Year's Wait.

WOULD BLOCK LEGAL FIGHT

City Could Stop Payment of $16,000,000 Preferentials if the Line Prolonged Suit.

AND CALL FOR ACCOUNTING

Negotiation for Purchase, Instead of Recapture, Planned With the Interborough.

The Transit Commission and Samuel Untermyer, its special counsel, have discovered what they believe will be a legal short cut to recapture the recapturable subways and will enable the city to save the larger part of the accumulated deficits in the company's preferential, amounting to many million dollars.

It is considered certain that this method, which is made possible by a recent amendment to the Civil Practice act, will be invoked to recapture the subway system now operated by the B. M. T.

The method which will probably be used, in case there is no change in the present tentative plan and if the city, on recommendation of Mr. Untermyer and the commission, decides to attempt recapture of the B. M. T. lines, is a suit for a declaratory judgment. This is a practice of comparatively recent origin, and rules of court have been enacted to put it into effect.

To Serve Formal Notice.

The plan contemplates a request to the Board of Estimate to authorize the service of a formal notice of recapture on the B. M. T. Under the city's contract with the company recapture would take effect at the end of a year. Under the usual method of legal procedure the legal fight for an interpretation of the contract would begin after the expiration of the year.

This request to the Board of Estimate to serve a notice of recapture, according to the present intention, will be made as soon as Mr. Untermyer and the commission proceed far enough in their investigation to be able to formulate a definite readjustment plan. Indications are that this will be early this Fall.

The right of recapture also may be applied against the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, but it is understood to be Mr. Untermyer's intention to try to negotiate for the purchase of the Interborough properties.

Under the provisions of a new section of the Civil Practice act, as interpreted by counsel for the commission, service of the notice to recapture can be followed immediately, without waiting for the expiration of the year, by a suit by the city against the B. M. T. for a declaratory judgment, establishing the city's right to recapture and the terms on which it may recapture. By the time the year has expired and the notice has run its course it is expected that the suit would have been carried through the lower courts and a decision from the Court of Appeals obtained.

Would Stop Preferentials.

In case a decision was not obtained within a year it is held that the drawing down of further preferentials by the B. M. T. could be stopped and that the company could be required to account to the city for all moneys earned on the city-owned lines. As most of the B.M.T.'s earnings come from the city-owned lines, it is believed by the commission that the city and not the company would get the profits on an accounting.

It is the belief of the commission that the B. M. T. would not be able to prolong this sort of litigation so as to delay recapture and that the city would be able to save the payment of most of the $16,000,000 in accrued preferential deficits, payment of which would stop in case of recapture but which would have to be paid out of revenue if the company continued to operate the city-owned lines.

It is the belief of the commission that virtually all the B. M. T. city-owned lines are recapturable now and that the other recapturable lines, as desired will be recapturable by 1930.

The contract provides that these deficits must be paid, if operation by the companies continues, but need not be paid after recapture by the city, which also in the event of recapture would be entitled to receive all the revenues out of which the normal preferentials—$4,835,000 in the case of the Interborough and $3,800,000 in the case of the B. M. T.—would have to be paid as longer.

The longer the B. M. T. can postpone recapture the more of the $16,000,000 in accrued preferential deficits it will receive. Ever since the present inquiry began it has been evident that the company will put up a legal fight to get as much of these deficits as possible and officers of the company have expressed confidence that no recapture can be accomplished until the expiration of a period during which the payment of the entire $16,000,000 deficit might be expected.

The city has never received anything from its investment of approximately $220,000,000 in the lines built under the dual subway contracts and its preferential deficits, the amount paid out of successive tax levies for interest and amortization of bonds issued for construction, now are about $129,000,000.

The commission believes that recapture of the low construction cost B. M. T. lines, the acquisition of the low cost Interborough lines and their combination with the high construction cost lines being built for the city's new subway system are necessary to preserve the five-cent fare without throwing an increased burden on the taxpayers.

The staff of the commission is preparing studies which are expected to show this. These studies will include estimates of what it would cost to carry the new subways, if operated alone. The Board of Transportation has estimated that it would take a fare of 8.45 cents to make these subways self-supporting if built entirely from the proceeds of long-term bonds. The commission has found no reason to doubt this estimate. Preliminary studies have indicated that a combined system, composed of new subways and rapid transit lines, acquired on terms favorable to the city, might become self-supporting on a five-cent fare within a few years.

Record Crowd Sees Yanks Trample Senators Twice; Giants Take 2 From Robins

74,000 WATCH YANKS IN DOUBLE VICTORY

Record Crowd in Delirium of Joy as Senators Are Crushed at Stadium, 12-1, 21-1.

LAZZERI AND WERA HELP

Make Four-Baggers as Huggmen Total 69 Bases for the Day and Take 11½-Game Lead.

By JAMES R. HARRISON.

The biggest baseball crowd in history, more than 74,000 persons, stampeded into the Yankee Stadium yesterday afternoon to watch the Yanks inflict a fearful beating on the Senators in both sections of the holiday double-header. The score of the first game was 12 to 1. At the end of the second alleged contest the statisticians estimated that the damage had been something like 21 to 1.

By this brave two-ply stroke the Yanks went eleven and a half games ahead in the so-called pennant struggle, and Henry Louis Gehrig sent the record-smashing crowd into a delirium of joy by hitting a homer in each game—his twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth of the season—putting him two up on Mr. George H. Ruth.

By more than 2,000 the crowd exceeded the greatest previous attendance mark in baseball history. The paid admissions were 72,641, according to Cousin Edward G. Barrow, which in themselves were greater than the throng of 70,000 paid and unpaid, which set a new record at the opening game in the Stadium last April.

Beats All World's Series Marks.

Add to this a total of 1,500 deadhead patrons that Mr. Barrow estimates filtered through the gates and you have figures that bewilder the mind and stagger the imagination.

There never was a world's series crowd that approached this record breaking assemblage, for the reason that in the world's series the management did not dare to pack the cash customers in as solidly as they were packed yesterday.

Every available seat in the grandstand and bleachers was filled, and the crowd ringed itself four and five deep around the back of the stand. When these vantage points had been filled the fans overflowed into the runways and the aisles, stood on tiptoes in the most uncomfortable positions and even swarmed up the pillars and rafters of Colonel Ruppert's steel arena.

Male and female fans put up with almost every form of discomfort just to be privileged to watch Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and company send the Senators staggering under a vicious bombardment of stinging blows.

Not only that, but thousands of customers streamed into the avenues surrounding the stadium, stood in line for an hour or more and finally were turned away when the last square foot of standing room had been disposed of.

Yanks Envelope Senators.

In this setting the Yanks swept over the Senators like a Mississippi flood for their greatest triumph of the year. The Capital athletes came to the metropolis cocky and confident, with a winning streak of ten straight. They left the stadium after the game looking like something that the cat had dragged in.

In the two games the Yanks made thirty-three runs and thirty-seven hits for a total of sixty-nine bases. Gehrig and Pat Collins hit homers in the first game; Gehrig, Lazzeri and young Julian Wera produced round-trippers in the second affair, and this doesn't take into account four triples, nine two-baggers and a scattering of singles.

Gehrig's first homer, sending him one ahead of Ruth, was made off Walter Johnson with two on bases in the eighth inning of the first game. His second came in round seven of the next game with the bases full. It was a tremendous drive into the right centre field bleachers with the count two and two.

In the first game the Yanks hammered Hollis Thurston and Johnson for eighteen hits. They kept up the merry thumping against Alvin Crowder in the second massacre. Crowder gave way to Marberry, who was unmercifully pounded, and finally Bob Burke, a young left hander, snapped from the bull pen in time to be the recipient of Mr. Gehrig's homer into the bleachers with the bags full.

Young Yanks Go Route.

George Pipgras and Wiley Moore, two members of the Yankees' younger set, went the full route for Monsieur Huggins in each game.

After the Yanks had removed one run from Thurston in the first inning of the opener, Patricia Collins drove two more tallies home with his homer into the left field stands in the second frame. The Senators scored their only run in the third, but at that early hour the Yanks were only getting warmed up.

They grabbed five more in the fourth. Lazzeri drilled a hit through Reeves. Dugan singled to left and Collins punched another one bagger through Bluege, scoring Lazzeri. Pipgras tried a bunt and it rolled past Thurston's finger tips for a hit, filling the bases.

Combs's fly scored Dugan, and then Thurston committed a schoolboy balk, starting a wind-up and checking it in midair. Collins came in on the misplay, and a pass to Ruth and Gehrig's infield single jammed the runways.

Robert Meusel of the Los Angeles Mewsels inserted a two-bagger at this timely moment, and two more Yankees swarmed home.

Sir Walter Johnson, who has been a pale and interesting convalescent for several months, struck out Ruth, Gehrig, Lazzeri, Collins, Meusel and Lazzeri again between the ninth and eighth, but the Yanks edged in with four runs despite the whiffings.

Gehrig Collects No. 27.

With one gone in the eighth Combs tripled, Morehart doubled, Ruth singled and Gehrig hit a homer with one on. The Yanks were going up and down the scale, from one-baggers to four-baggers.

Nor were our boys laggard and inactive in the second game. They galloped off to a four-run lead in the first inning and had General Crowder groggy at the bell. Combs singled, but was out trying to stretch it. Then Morehart walked, Ruth singled, Gehrig doubled, Meusel walked and Lazzeri singled. With three runs in, Dugan rolled out to the shortstop and Meusel came in with Run No. 4.

Ruth tripled behind Morehart's single in the second and made it 5 to 0. Further fisticuffing yielded two more in the fifth, and the jolly old lid was blown off in the sixth, the Yanks scoring nine runs.

Ruth and Gehrig walked at the outset and scored on Meusel's triple. Lazzeri cracked a double to centre and scooted home from second on Dugan's sacrifice bunt. Grabowski strolled, Moore sacrificed and Combs doubled for one more run.

Marberry walked Morehart and took the air in favor of Bob Burke, who also passed Ruth. At this point there was a loud crash, a sickening thud and the sound of falling bodies. H. Louis Gehrig had hit a homer with the bases full.

Subsequent details will be spared the gentle reader. Let us draw a curtain over the bloody scene.

Rajah Circles Bases on Foul; Peeved, Hits Real Homer Later

In the eleventh inning of the first game between the Giants and Robins at Ebbets Field yesterday Rogers Hornsby stepped to the plate and cracked the ball high over the flagpole that marks the right field foul line. Taking it for granted that it was a homer, Rogers trotted around the bases, only to get a terrible jar on reaching the plate as Hank DeBerry picked up his bat and said, "Here, Rog, try it again," while the Brooklyn fans roared with laughter. Umpire Moran had called it foul. Rogers was plainly peeved, but followed Hank's advice and in the second game tried again. This time the ball cleared the fence well inside the foul line.

Elliott's Passes and Harper's Hit Decide After Losers Tie in Eighth —Hornsby Gets 15th Homer.

By JOHN DREBINGER.

The Giants just about knocked all the holiday spirit out of a crowd of 20,000 Brooklyn baseball addicts at Ebbets Field yesterday afternoon by unceremoniously spanking the Robins in both games of what was to have been a glorious double-header for Flatbush. The men of McGraw had to go eleven innings to win the first one, 4 to 3, but taking the second engagement proved a simple matter, as nineteen baseHits, including Rogers Hornsby's fifteenth homer of the season, mowed down the Flock, 9 to 4. Hornsby now is in a triple tie for league home-run honors.

All this was very gratifying to John McGraw as he saw his team step out and sweep two contests in a single afternoon for the second successive day, but it was a terrible blow to Brooklyn. The crowd, jamming the park to capacity, had come prepared to make it a Roman holiday at the expense of the Giants. They came early and brought sandwiches and firecrackers, for they felt positive the Robins would grab both games, topple the Giants into the second division and step into the first section themselves.

But through the long afternoon the crowd had only one real opportunity to shoot off its firecrackers with genuine zeal. That was in the eighth inning of the opener, when the Robins, apparently thoroughly licked by Freddie Fitzsimmons, suddenly pounced upon him for three runs to tie the score.

Harper Decides Opener.

That, however, was as close as the Flock ever got. They hung on until the eleventh, when Jim Elliott, coming in as relief pitcher in the ninth, unexpectedly lost his sense of direction. He passed two batters, laid one across the plate for George Harper, and the winning run skipped merrily in as Harper propelled the ball vigorously to right field for a clean single.

There probably never was a noisier inning in the history of baseball in Flatbush than that eighth. The crowd roared, giant cannon crackers belched, Fitzsimmons also exploded and one had to blink twice to make certain that another war hadn't broken out. But in the end the entire demonstration accomplished nothing more than ruining a very fine pitching performance for young Mr. Fitzsimmons when he hardly deserved it.

For seven innings Fitz kept the Robins tightly bottled up on three hits, and was just about to add the eighth to this string when something went wrong. Two pinch hitters had been retired when Jigger Statz popped a simple little fly to left. It looked like the third out for a certainty, but Heinie Mueller, whom McGraw had sent in only a few moments before for Lindstrom, tried to catch this one with his thumbs and muffed it.

Then bedlam broke loose. Partridge singled and Carey walked, filling the bases. By this time the din was terrific, but managed to go up still another notch as Hendrick bounced a hit off Reese, scoring Statz and again filling the bases. A cannon cracker exploded right under Umpire Moran's coat-tail, and then followed an even mightier roar as Gus Feltx walloped a single to centre, driving in Partridge and Carey and tying the score.

Fitz then managed to retire the side by holding Barrett to a fly to Mueller, which Heinie this time held fast, but McGraw elected not to start Fitz in the ninth. This probably was very disappointing to Fitz, but well enough for the Giants for Dutch Henry stepped in and with his good left hand retired the Robins in order in the ninth, tenth and eleventh.

Partridge's Costly Error.

Jess Petty faced Fitz in this game and pitched good ball, but things broke badly for him. He fell two runs behind in the fourth when Partridge made a costly error behind him. Petty had retired the Giants in order for the first three innings when Reese opened the fourth with a single. Lindstrom popped out, but Roush slapped a single to centre and Reese went to third.

Hornsby then rolled one at Partridge. The crowd bent forward, eager to see a double killing, but Partridge booted the ball and Reese scored, while Roush made second. Al Devormer, who was first basing for the injured Terry, then singled and Roush counted.

In the fifth Petty fell still another run behind, chiefly because he troubled himself to think out a little inside baseball strategy, which flivvered when one of his mates failed to get the idea. Taylor opened with a double and Petty walked over to Barrett on third, apparently giving that young man instructions to hold third on the expected bunt of the next batter. Fitz, the next batter, bunted all right, and Petty got the ball as planned, but when he turned to throw to third to head off Taylor he found Barrett right on his heels. As a result Taylor made third without trouble, Fitz got credit for a hit and Taylor then scored on Reese's sacrifice fly.

Petty passed out for one of the pinch hitters in the eighth, and, with the score tied in that round by the Robins, Rube Ehrhardt took the mound for the Flock in the ninth. He lasted just long enough to get bumped for a double by Jackson, and Elliott was sent in by Uncle Robbie. The big southpaw squirmed out of this round with the aid of a snappy double play, got by nicely in the tenth, but fell down in the eleventh. He passed Hornsby after getting two strikes on the Rajah. Devormer sacrificed, Jackson drew another pass and then Harper delivered his hit which put the Giants in front. Dutch Henry kept them there as the Robins futilely tried to connect in the last of the eleventh.

The second engagement was nothing more than a romp for the Giants after the third inning, and what made this all the more painful to the crowd was the fact that Burleigh Grimes had the pleasure of toasting in on this victory. Burleigh would scarcely win a popularity contest in Flatbush, and the fans rode him pretty hard at the start.

At that the Robins might have given the Giants trouble had Jess Barnes been equal to the occasion of keeping the Giants within hailing distance, but Jess wasn't. He lasted until the seventh, when he was driven out, after being socked for fifteen hits in all.

The Giants broke into the lead with a run in the second on a pass, a wild pitch and a double by Jackson. The Flock matched this in the same round when Barnes singled after Grimes had walked Butler and cracked Hargreaves in the neck, but that was the last seen of the Flock.

Three Giant runs came in in the third on solid singles by Grimes, Reese and Lindstrom and Hornsby's homer over the right-field wall. Actually there should have been four, but Reese got wiped off trying to stretch a base on Lindstrom's poke.

Singles by Harper and Grimes accounted for another in the sixth, and in the seventh the Giants splurged out with a bouquet of four on a double by Lindstrom, singles by Roush, Hornsby, Jackson and Taylor and a pass. McWeeney finished out this inning and Ehrhardt worked the last two.

The Flock in the meantime was helpless against Grimes until the seventh, when, with the score 9—1, Burleigh wot a bit careless. A pass, singles by Statz and Partridge and a double by Carey gave the Robins three runs, but that was all, as Burleigh decided to pitch again.

Both teams will rest up today and tomorrow will carry hostilities to the Polo Grounds, where they will open a series of four games, concluding on Saturday.

More Than 30,000 See Happy Argo Capture the Carter Handicap for Baruch

HAPPY ARGO VICTOR OVER BLACK MARIA

Colt Thrills More Than 30,000 as He Wins the Carter by Half a Length.

NEWS CABLED TO BARUCH

Word of Aqueduct Triumph Sent to the Owner in France—Macaw Fast Third.

CROWD SWAMPS AQUEDUCT

Not Even the Epinard Race Drew a Larger Crowd—Long Island R. R. Stops Through Trains.

By HENRY R. ILSLEY.

Before one of the greatest assemblages of racing enthusiasts that has ever jammed its way into the course of the Queens County Jockey Club, the Kershaw Stable's four-year-old colt Happy Argo ran the race of his career yesterday afternoon over the seven furlongs of the Aqueduct oval to capture the twenty-ninth running of the Carter Handicap. Bernard Baruch was not on hand to witness his colt's greatest triumph, but a congratulatory cable was sent to him in France.

More than 30,000 spectators were packed into every available inch of the grandstand, blocking the aisles and filling the promenade at the top, the lawn below was a seething mass of closely packed humanity, straw hats with brilliant bands bobbing ceaselessly all afternoon. During the running of the steeplechase hundreds flocked to the infield to get a better view of the jumpers.

Not even the Epinard international contest drew a larger throng, and to handle it the Long Island Railroad stopped all its through trains at the course in addition to its many specials. It was one of the most delightful days of the racing season, cool enough and with a nice breeze blowing. This, with one of the best cards of the season on offer, proved an irresistible combination.

Card Three Star One.

There were three stakes on the holiday card and the historic Carter Handicap held the place of honor. Happy Argo ran a great race, although he was giving all he had at the end of the sprint to beat W. R. Coe's great filly Black Maria by only half a length. The filly might have won with better racing luck at the start. She was giving five pounds to the colt and while she finished like a black streak she just failed to overhaul the colt.

Happy Argo, with Frits Weiner in the saddle, carried 119 pounds and ran the distance in 1:24 1-5. Max Hirsch saddled the winner for the Kershaw Stable and Sarasen for the Fair Stable and the pair went to the post at 7 to 1, after an opening price of 6 to 1 against them. By his victory Happy Argo added $9,250 to his owner's earnings.

The Astoria Stakes for the juveniles was run for the twenty-fourth time and the result was an upset when J. S. Cosden's filly One Hour defeated eight others of her sex over the course of five furlongs out of the chute. She was a 15-to-1 shot with no following, and she earned just $5,575 for her owner by the margin of the tip of her nose over W. R. Coe's Giggleorum.

Eddie Ambrose piloted One Hour, a home-bred daughter of Snob II and Daylight Saving, which is a little miss but is speedy and game. She accounted for the first stake that has fallen to her owner in some time. She was in light, under 112 pounds, having no penalties to pick up, and she ran her race in the fast time of 0:58 1-5.

Another for Greentree.

The Glendale Steeplechase Handicap was second only to the Carter in value, the Greentree Stable of Mrs. Payne Whitney profiting to the extent of $6,150 through the easy victory of her fine jumper Erne II. Ably piloted by A. Ferguson, the Irish gelding ran away from the other six in the long journey of two miles and a half, carrying top weight of 157 pounds in the fast time of 4:59 4-5, despite a slow early pace. Erne II was a very strong tip and the stable thought he could not lose. He was backed to 9 to 5, with a load of money pouring into the pockets of the layers.

Eighteen had been named for the Carter and only four were scratched out. The Coe entry of Black Maria and Pompey was the choice of the public and the pair went to the post at 4 to 1. There was a lot of support for Walter J. Salmon's Devonshire, Harry Payne Whitney' Macaw, L. E. Humphrey's Light Carbine, surprise winner of the Queens County Handicap, and the entry of Happy Argo and Sarazen. Mrs. W. M. Jeffords's Triton also had a lot of friends, with the others in the field held at long prices.

Sarazen headed the parade and looked in one of his kindly moods, with his ears pricked. He acted badly at the post under the abuse of an assistant starter, who struck him repeatedly in the face. This held up the start for ten minutes, but they were finally sent away well aligned. With such a big field there was a lot of crowding, and several had little chance at the money under bad racing luck.

Sonny Workman broke Macaw on top, but the Whitney four-year-old was shuffled back out of the early contention. When he did get going he ran a slashing race, closing a great gap in the stretch run to finish third, four lengths back of the filly. Sarazen broke next to Macaw and he, too, got into difficulties from which he could never recover. Black Maria was in a bad mixup at the break and never got to running freely until the race was half over.

After Macaw was put out of it Kalmay rushed Triton into the lead an advantage he held to the stretch. Then he got into difficulties and finished far out of the picture. Weiner broke Happy Argo from a good position and he was fortunate all through the race. After disposing of Triton at the top of the stretch he drew out.

But at his heels there came on a black menace on which the fair-haired Sande was doing his utmost. Black Maria had steadily got close and she came charging down on the leader, gaining a little with every stride, but the distance was too short and as they finished past the winning post her nose was only at Weiner's stirrup. Macaw took the short and by half a length from Light Carbine, which was a contender from the fall of the flag. The fractional times of the race were: 0:23, 0:46 1-5, 1:11 2-5, 1:24 1-5.

The victory of One Hour in the Astoria Stakes was a shock to the talent. She was a long shot in the field of nine, opening at 12 to 1 and going to 15 to 1 at post time when no interest was manifested in her chances. In the Clover Stakes, it was recalled, she ran fifth to Princess Tina, Nixie Bateau and Stefally, all of which finished behind her yesterday. Johnny Maiben was in the saddle in the Clover Stakes, but she was a different filly under Eddie Ambrose. She was right with the leaders from the start and finished with a fine burst of speed to nose out W. R. Coe's Giggleorum, with Walter M. Jeffords's Man o' War filly Bateau a length back and two lengths in front of the Audley Farm's Princess Tina, the 7-to-5 choice.

Giggleorum on Rail.

There was a good start and after the elbow Burke had Giggleorum out in front on the rail. From that point it was a stirring race to the wire, with the result in doubt until the figures were hung up. The race was run in the fast time of 0:58 1-5, and only once in the history of the stake has it been run faster, H. P. Whitney's Panoply having run in 0:58 flat in 1919.

Erne II had things pretty much his own way in the fourteenth running of the Glendale Steeplechase. The course of two and a half miles was the longest route the jumpers have been asked to travel this season. Erne II likes to travel a distance and was right at home, being perfectly ridden by Ferguson. He carried top weight of 157 pounds, and while the pace was very slow at first the race was run in the fast time of 4:59 4-5. At the end Erne II was running easily to finish eight lengths in front of the Kershaw Stable's Autumn Bells, to which the winner was giving 17 pounds.

Erne II made only one misstep in his long journey, and that was on the back side, when he made a faulty landing. Ferguson caught him and stayed on, and but for that one instance the chestnut son of White Eagle fenced well.

Leona Farm's Undefeated Juvenile Gains Her Third Victory—Flat Iron Takes Independence Handicap.

Special to The New York Times.

CRETE, Ill., July 4.—A crowd of 40,000, a record attendance since the revival of racing in Illinois, watched Anita Peabody capture the Joliet Stakes and Flat Iron the Independence Handicap at Lincoln Fields today.

The Leona Farm's two-year-old filly Anita Peabody displayed sparkling speed in achieving the third victory of her career in as many starts in the $5,000 stakes for juveniles, running the six furlongs with 119 pounds up in 1:12. F. Chiavetta sent the filly to the front early and she dashed under the wire well in hand. Sandrine was third in the race restricted to fillies.

Flat Iron of the Greenbriar Stable, also a hot favorite, raced down the pace-making Moonraker in the final stages of the mile and a sixteenth of the $2,500 handicap for older horses after R. Peternell had kept him under slight restraint until the stretch. The gelding's margin of victory was a length an a half.

World's Relay Mark Set by Newark A. C., but Illinois A. C. Wins National Title

World's Mark Falls Twice Before Jersey Club Takes National A. A. U. Event in 0:41.

ILLINOIS A. C. WINS TITLE

Gains Relay Crown by Victory at One and Two Miles—N. Y. A. C. Runner-Up.

ELKINS BEST IN DECATHLON

By BRYAN FIELD.

Special to The New York Times.

LINCOLN, Neb., July 4.—The thirty-sixth annual senior championships of the National A. A. U. came to a close here today, the third day of competition, with the holding of the medley shot-put championship, the relay championship and the decathlon title test. A crowd of 5,000 spectators saw as thrilling an afternoon of competition as ever took place.

To start with, the world's 440-yard relay record was shattered three times in about as many minutes. The Illinois A. C. carried off the relay crown with a total of 13 points, and Fait Elkins, Iroquois Indian, who is a Nebraska College student, won the decathlon title after the grueling competition had forced the withdrawal of Harold Osborn, the collapse of another entrant, and the loss of almost fifteen pounds by Elkins. Eric C. Krens won the medley shot-put honors, placing first in all three tests.

The Newark A. C. four is the new world's record holder for the 440-yard relay. Chester Bowman ran No. 1 for the Jersey club and the last flashed over the line in 0:41. This is faster even than the American record by the Newark A. C. of 0:41 3-5, made last season, and which was to have been submitted to the International Federation in 1928 for confirmation as the world's record. Newark can now submit a mark three-fifths of a second faster.

Ties 400-Meter Mark.

The time equals the Olympic record for 400 meters, which is also 0:41. However, as 400 meters are several yards longer than 400 yards, the new time beats even this mark. The Olympic record was made by the four greatest sprinters drawn from all over the United States, and not from one club.

The other members of the team besides Bowman were John Currie, Jimmy Pappas, the Princeton star, and Henry H. Cumming Jr., the Virginian, who won the senior metropolitan furlong championship. They ran in the order named. The race had six entrants and it was run in two heats, the result to be decided upon time.

The first heat was among the New York A. C., the Los Angeles A. C. and the Nebraska University team. Roland Locke was anchor for Nebraska. Los Angeles's anchor man was Charley Paddock. New York's was Jackson V. Scholz. Scholz finished five yards in the van. The time was 0:41 2-5, which broke the world's record, and even the Newark mark now standing as an American record. The other New Yorkers were Karl Wildermuth, Jimmy Quinn and Frank Hussey.

With Paddock beaten and the world's record smashed, Newark faced the tape. Michigan State's great four of Grimm, Henson, Lang and Alderman were in the heat, as well as the Illinois A. C. team with Loren Murchison running anchor.

Newark defeated Michigan State badly, yet the Michigan men were traveling at a terrific rate, for their time was 0:41 3-5, which also broke the world's record, equaled the last year's mark and beat the time of Charley Paddock's team in the first heat. The final result of the race was Newark first, New York second and Michigan State third.

This very same Newark A. C. team forced the New York A. C. four to equal the world's 880-yard relay record. Furthermore, they had to run twice to do it, as there was a dead heat. This race was also run in heats, the places being decided on a time basis. The New York A. C. won the first heat, with the Illinois A. C. second, and Michigan State third. The Winged Foot time was 1:29, two-fifths of a second behind the world's record.

In the second heat the Newark A. C. defeated the Los Angeles A. C., including Paddock, and Nebraska, including Roland Locke. Newark's time also was 1:29. Under the rules dead heats must be run off at the direction of the referee. Murray Hulbert ordered that it be run directly. It was.

1,000 at Morning Events.

A morning crowd at a track meet is a rarity in the East, but Lincoln turned out 1,000 persons to see the early decathlon events. Those who came were well rewarded, for a Nebraska man tied for first in the opening event and won the second event. This was Elkins. Stewart and Elkins tied in the 100 meters. The event was run off in heats and both did 0:11 1-5.

Elkins suffered no ties in the broad jump, however. He leaped 23 feet ½ inch to win. Stewart's best was only 20 feet. In the next event neither of these leaders did very well. Tony Plansky, the great Georgetown football player, won the shot-put with a heave of 45 feet 9 inches.

The high jump was the next event and Stewart's stock took a big jump when he tied for first place with Harold Osborn, the world's record holder. The winning height was 1 meter and 889 centimeters, about 6 and 1-100 feet.

Elkins was all up in this event and did not lose much ground. He got third place in the 400 meters. Kinsey was the winner of this event in 0:51 2-5. At the end of the first five events Elkins had a lead of about 80 points. The standing of the four leaders was as follows: Elkins, 3,886.65; Stewart, 3,805.26; Norton, 3,684.46, and Kinsey, 3,363.90. Elkins increased his lead over Stewart in the 150-meter hurdles to about a hundred points. The standing at the end of this event was Elkins, 4,704.65, and Stewart, 4,624.28.

The medley shot-put competition, in which the 4, 12 and 16 pound shots were thrown, produced a decisive victor in Eric C. Krens of the Olympic Club. He won all three of the events. Frank Labes, a Pacific Coast rival from the Los Angeles A. C., was second, and Dave Adelman of the Holy Name Club, New York, was third.

The Illinois Athletic Club scored its first victory toward the relay trophy by taking the one-mile relay in a fine finish by Herman Phillips, who won the quarter-mile senior championship on the second day of the meet. Phillips ran anchor to a team made up as follows: H. Oestreich, F. Morgan Taylor, G. Stevenson and Phillips. The Chicago A. A. team, which finished second in this event, was made up as follows: H. E. Hager, H. M. Fitch, J. F. Sittig and A. O. Martin. The Los Angeles A. C. team took third place.

Illinois scored another victory in the two-mile relay. Here Ray Watson, the one-handed veteran won the applause of the crowd by making up twenty yards on his man on the anchor leg and going on to win by a narrow margin after a stretch drive.

New York A. C. Second.

The winning team was made up of Ray Dodge, J. Sivak, Ray Conger and Ray Watson. Second place went to the New York Athletic Club team to Gerald Swope, George Leness, Alan Graning and Eddie Swinburne. Nebraska was a bad third. Swope got out in front for the Winged Foot Club on the first leg and Leness opened up a larger gap on the second leg. The third leg found Graning with a fifty-yard margin over Conger, who is the man who won the senior mile championship.

Conger set sail for Graning and reduced the margin by half. When Watson's leg came up he was faced with the problem of making up more then twenty yards on one of the best middle distance men who ever came out of Georgetown. With the crowd cheering him, Watson made up the yardage in a little more than the first circuit of the track.

The victory of the Illinois team in the two-mile relay probably cost it first place in the four-mile event, as two of the men, Conger and Watson, who ran in the two-mile event, had to come right back in the four-mile event and run against four fresh men from the Los Angeles A. C.

Los Angeles won in 18:48, with Ernest (Nick) Carter running the anchor leg. Carter is the man who defeated Edvin Wide on the Coast in a scratch race and the man Conger defeated in the senior mile championship. On the anchor leg in the four miles Carter turned the tables and defeated Conger by ten yards.

Pat McDonald of the New York A. C. won the fifty-six-pound weight throw for height. Throwing the weight into the air was a novelty to the folks out here, and they cheered and cheered for the silver-haired veteran of several Olympic teams, who tossed the great iron ball over the bar with one hand while the bronzed young athletes of the West sweated with two-hand throws.

McDonald threw the weight so high that the standards were not high enough, and this undoubtedly deprived the New York police lieutenant of a world's record. McDonald's last throw at the limit of the standards was 14 feet 8½ inches. The world's record, made in 1913, is 15 feet 2⅝ inches.

Bowman Is Named the Winner Of Disputed 100-Yard Dash

Special to The New York Times.

LINCOLN, Neb., July 4.—Chet Bowman of the Newark A. C. received a rolling cheer from 5,000 Nebraskans here today as he was brought to the centre of the University of Nebraska green and introduced as the man who had equaled the world's 100-yard record, as the judges finally had decided he had defeated Charles Borah for the national senior A. A. U. championship last Saturday. There had been doubt as to which of the two won and President Murray Hulbert ordered an investigation yesterday, with the result stated above.

ALL DEMPSEY WORK WILL BE IN SECRET

Ex-Champion and Flynn Decide to Bar Spectators—2,500 Fans Are Turned Away.

BOUT NOT TO BE PUT OFF

Dempsey Personally Denies Report —Follows Manager's Instructions Explicitly at Saratoga.

By JAMES P. DAWSON.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., July 4.—On the eighth anniversary of the day he won the world's heavyweight title from Jess Willard in Toledo, Jack Dempsey was taking instructions today as a boxing student, as if he were the rawest piece of ring material. What is more significant is that Dempsey will do his studying for the seventeen days intervening before July 21, strictly in private.

There will be no more spectators at Dempsey's camp on the shores of Tom Luther's famous Saratoga Lake, under a decision reached by Dempsey and his manager, Leo P. Flynn, today.

This decision to permit only newspaper men to view the workouts brought protests from Tom Luther, which were equalled only by the firm declarations of manager Flynn. About 2,500 people were disappointed this afternoon when Dempsey worked out before the newspaper men and a few friends. The protests of Luther reached such volume at one time that manager Flynn threatened to transfer Dempsey's training camp to another site.

After this had been settled Dempsey went through his best workout since coming here. Those critics who have been watching him since he established quarters here declared without qualification that the former champion never looked better. He was working strictly according to the directions of Manager Flynn, who acted as referee while Dempsey went through seven rounds of sparring against as many camp mates, and it was something of a novelty to see the old crashing, tearing, vicious Dempsey under obvious restraint trying to respond to the coaching and sometimes to the commands of Flynn.

Dempsey Still Overweight.

Dempsey's form showed promise; that is as much as can be said of him right now. He is still overweight. The flesh on his back was flabby today and his stomach bulged slightly through the full length jersey he wore. His tights jellied as he stepped about the ring, now on his toes, now flat footed, according to the dictates of Flynn. Nevertheless, Dempsey and Flynn and everybody associated with the camp own a confidence that this Dempsey will be whipped into good enough shape to batter down Sharkey.

Incidentally the rumor that Dempsey would ask for a postponement of the fight if he found he could not get into condition satisfactory to himself this week, was spiked today when the former champion himself denied any knowledge of such a contemplated request and Manager Flynn dismissed mention of the matter as ridiculous.

Dempsey was schooled today in protecting himself against a left hand lead and underwent an elementary course in how best to stand facing a rival. He was gaited along through his workout, too, in a manner calculated to equip him to travel fifteen rounds if necessary, and still insure strength. Dempsey, warming to his work, sparred more strongly near the close of his boxing drill than when he started.

Breathes Heavily at Finish.

At the finish, however, the former champion was breathing heavily and he looked as if he was glad the workout was over. Dempsey perspired freely, despite the brisk winds that went whistling across the canvas-fenced ring.

Dempsey's drill consisted of the equivalent of ten rounds. He warmed up with a round on the chest pulleys and followed with a round at punching the inflated bag. Then he sparred a round each with Johnny Saxon, Dave Shade, Pietro Corri, an Australian heavyweight, who joined the camp today; Allentown Joe Gans, Eddie McMullen, Bill Batey and Martin Burke.

He closed his workout with a round of tugging and pushing and shoving and mauling with Carl Carter, and then with a cheery "See you tomorrow" to the newspaper men at the ringside, was off through the ropes on his way to the shower and a vigorous rub-down. In addition, Dempsey was out on the road for his customary jaunt this morning.

The best workout for Dempsey was against Shade. The California middleweight actually won the round from Dempsey, bobbing and weaving, ducking and dodging in and out on the attack. He led with lefts and crossed with rights, rushed headlong into the former champion and pressed Dempsey backward on the ropes, hitting him rather freely.

Though Dempsey landed only infrequently to the body in return, it was the kind of workout Dempsey needs. He should get more such drilling to sharpen his hitting and accuracy against a moving target such as Sharkey figures to be. When Dempsey landed with his left or right to the body the blows hurt, according to Shade, so that Dempsey still packs some of the old hitting dynamite in his boulder-like fists.

Saxon Hit Frequently.

Saxon had previously been in the ring and was hit frequently by Dempsey. The former champion had no trouble hitting Saxon with left hooks and left jabs at long range, and several times staggered the little middleweight with solid punches. Saxon landed often enough with his leads, however, to cut Dempsey slightly on the lower lip and draw blood.

The Shade workout followed and then Corri entered the ring to give Dempsey a stirring minute of fighting before the effect of Dempsey's wicked left hooks to the body began to show. Dempsey had Corri covered with blood from the nose and mouth at the bell.

Against Gans Dempsey fired his left steadily to the body and occasionally threw a right to the heart. He blocked or stopped many of Gans's left leads for the face, and grazed the negro middleweight's jaw with a right cross frequently. McMullen also gave Dempsey a good drill.

That Dempsey will improve was the confident prediction made by Manager Flynn following the work-out.

Boxing Arguments Flourish As Dempsey-Sharkey Bout Nears

Approaching Heavyweight Battle Starts Fans to Disputing Over Ages, Names and Achievements of Champions—Something About the Original Jack Dempsey, the Nonpareil.

Whenever an important championship bout is at hand it is the signal for arguments, not only about the merits of the immediate principals but about every big fight of fighters in the past. The approaching Jack Dempsey-Jack Sharkey fight is an instance.

Between now and July 21 there will be a field day for reminiscing old-timers, know-it-all upstarts, and statistics-befuddled talkers who stubbornly stick to their statements when challenged. There is no argument like that between two fight fans—sometimes it results in fisticuffs of its own, but generally it ends in "I'll betcha" and a telephone call to a newspaper sports department something like this:

"A friend of mine and I are having a little argument over when John L. Sullivan knocked out Jake Kilrain. I say," &c.

Tom Andrew's "Ring Battles of a Century" provide the answer and show that though one of the disputants was right regarding the date both were wrong concerning the knockout. Sullivan defeated Kilrain on July 8, 1889, at Richbourg, Miss., with bare knuckles in seventy-five rounds that took two hours and sixteen minutes, but did not knock him out.

Fans Very Curious.

Not all the lore of the ring into which fight fans delve with the approach of a heavyweight title battle leads to a "betcha" argument. Telephone inquiries since Dempsey and Sharkey signed for their Stadium encounter have assumed an ask-me-another character. A few samples follow:

No. 1—"Is 'Jack,' Dempsey's real first name?"

Answer—No. His name is William Harrison Dempsey.

"Then why did he take the name of Jack?"

Answer—Because it was the name of Jack Dempsey, the Nonpareil, and the present Dempsey had a superstition it might work a charm for him.

No. 2.—"If Tunney's name is James Joseph Tunney why is he called 'Gene?'"

Answer—Because a baby sister trying to say Jim pronounced it in a way that sounded more like 'Jeem' and this was translated into Gene.

No. 3.—"How old is Jim Corbet and when did he lick Sullivan?"

Answer—Born Sept. 1, 1866. Knocked out Sullivan in 21 rounds at New Orleans, Sept. 7, 1892, purse $25,000, stake $20,000.

No. 4.—"Was Jack Dempsey ever knocked out?"

Answer—Yes, by Jim Flynn in one round, which Dempsey has since admitted was a "dive."

Arguments Cover Wide Range.

The arguments that lead to questions like the above cover a wide range and the search for answers turns up odd bits of information and ring lore. Nonpareil Jack Dempsey's name apparently did work a charm for the present Dempsey because when William Harrison adopted the Jack of the Nonpareil, the brake beam road he traveled hardly pointed to the world's championship he won from Jess Willard.

The Nonpareil was born in County Kildare, Ireland, Dec. 15, 1862. His height was five feet eight, his weight 150, but he didn't care how big they came. He fought them all the way from Coney Island to Sacramento.

In the busy career of Nonpareil perhaps the most striking battle was that fought with Jack Reagan on Dec. 13, 1887, on Long Island, which is as explicit as the record books give the place. The Nonpareil won by a knockout in forty-five rounds, but it is a footnote that provides the picturesque touch to the event. This reads:

"Reagan and Dempsey fought in two rings. The first ring became submerged in water in the fourth round and had to be moved twenty miles away where it was finished in snow and cold, lasting four hours."

That is a far cry from Toledo, Boyle's Thirty Acres, Polo Grounds, Sesquicentennial Stadium and the impending 15-round Dempsey-Sharkey encounter at the Yankee Stadium on July 21.

SHARKEY TO START WORK HERE TODAY

Fans Here to Get First Chance to See Heavyweight Prepare for Major Battle.

The local sector of the Jack Dempsey-Jack Sharkey bout at the Yankee Stadium on July 21 will become active today when Sharkey arrives from Boston to open his final training campaign in the rink on the roof of the Eighth Avenue front of Madison Square Garden. The ring has already been set up under the direction of Frank Bartley, who has had charge of erecting the stages upon which all of the recent heavyweight battles have been fought, and about 1,000 chairs have been provided for prospective spectators.

With the Garden offices closed yesterday owing to the holiday, no details of Sharkey's program were available, but it is expected that these will be made public today upon the Boston contender's arrival. No more centrally located site than the Garden could be found for the training camp of one of the principals in what promises to be the greatest heavyweight struggle New York has seen, eclipsing both in interest and probable receipts the memorable Dempsey-Firpo encounter at the Polo Grounds.

First New York Camp.

Sharkey's decision to do his training in the heart of New York City will give boxing followers here their first opportunity to see a heavyweight preparing for a major contest, at least in recent years. Dempsey is well-known for his aversion to cities; his first impulse always is to get out of doors somewhere, and during his career as champion he has always trained at a distance from New York.

For the Carpentier battle he trained at Atlantic City, while Gorgeaus Georges set up his famous camp at Manhasset, L. I., for the Firpo battle. Demnsey trained at Saratoga Springs, while the Wild Bull of the Pampas held his workouts at Atlantic City; for the Tunney bout last year Dempsey worked at Saratoga Springs and then switched to Atlantic City, while Tunney started training at Speculator, N. Y. and later went to the Poconos. Though these camps were accessible enough for the more prosperous fight followers, Sharkey is offering the rank and file their first chance virtually to walk around the corner to see a contender for the championship whip himself into shape.

Three Sparring Mates Named.

No decision was announced yesterday regarding the admission fee that will be charged to the Garden rink, but it will probably be 50 cents or a dollar. Three sparring partners were engaged for Sharkey before he left on his fishing trip to Maine, and no word has been given out of additions. The three previously announced were Paul Cavalier, Tom Randolph and Julius (Yale) Okun. Sharkey will not have the elaborate entourage that attends Dempsey at Saratoga. The Boston Lithuanian feels that his ring activities in the past year have done more to maintain his fighting form than any amount of training could. There have on no occasion been big gaps between his appearances in actual bouts. From the time he jumped into the limelight with his decisive victory over Harry Wills last Fall, Sharkey has been moderately training all of the time, topping it off with the Garden fight against the veteran Mike McTigue and finally Jim Maloney last May at the Yankee Stadium.

His tentative program of preparation for what will be the biggest task of his career so far includes road work in the mornings and gymnasium work and sparring in the afternoon.

FIELDS BEATS FINK AT DEXTER PARK

WALLACH SENT TO HOSPITAL

Hits Head on Floor and Is Knocked Unconscious—Suffers Slight Concussion of Brain.

Jackie Fields of Los Angeles scored a runaway victory over Frankie Fink of Texas in the feature ten-rounder at Dexter Park last night. Fields won every round by a wide margin and had Fink on the defensive all of the way.

Fields was far too fast and clever for the Texan, who resorted to clinching after the first round.

Paul Gallotta, 142 pounds, of Ozone Park, knocked out Harry Wallach, 140, of East New York, in the fifth round of the bout before the semi-final. Gallotta got under Wallach's guard with a short right jab to the chin. Wallach was staggered, but he instinctively closed in.

Then Gallotta half punched and half pushed Wallach and the East New York boxer hit the floor with a terrific crash, landing on the back of his head. He lay unconscious on the floor and had to be carried from the ring.

After being taken to the dressing room an ambulance was summoned and Wallach was taken to the Mary Immaculate Hospital in Jamaica.

At the hospital early this morning it was reported that Wallack was removed there in an unconscious state but later was revived. He is reported as suffering from a slight concussion of the brain, but his condition is not serious. It is expected that he will improve enough to be discharged within a few days.

Eddie Anderson, 132 pounds, Wyoming cowboy, handed the willing Al Matera, 132½, of Brooklyn, a severe beating in the semi-final. He battered Matera at will for four rounds and in the fifth set after him with a vicious attack.

He staggered Matera repeatedly with sharply driven blows and had the Brooklyn boy rocking on his heels. Referee Dan Rich waved Matera to his corner after one minute of bruising punching by Anderson in the fifth round of a scheduled ten.

In a six-round battle Willie Siegel, 129¾ pounds, of the east side, won the decision from Willie Makel, 130½, of Harlem, in a slow battle. They were willing, but both failed to land any damaging blows.

In the opening four-rounder, Julian Mallona, 136¾ pounds, of Argentina, received the decision from Pete Renaus, 136, of New York.

KERRY CHAMPIONS LOSE TO NEW YORK

Leads Attack for America in Fast, Exciting Clash at Polo Grounds—Kilkenny Victor at Hurling.

Playing before a crowd of 12,000 at the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon, the Green and Gold of the Kerry football team, champion of all Ireland, went down to defeat before a picked New York team representing America, 12 to 3. A fast brand of Gaelic football kept the stands in a high state of excitement, although the American side went into the lead at the start and never was headed.

The Rev. Father Fitzgerald, who came here with the Irish fifteen, said that the fields in this country are from forty to fifty feet shorter than the regulation grounds and for that reason the Kerryman are unable to play their best, the men finding it impossible to get their plays under way before they are forced over the line or outside. He also stated that the tour of the visitors is not over, as had been announced, and that their next appearance would be at Ebbets Field on Saturday.

High scoring honors went to Martin Shanahan, playing in centre or midfield for the home team. He sent the ball into the netting once for three points and twice booted it over the bar for single tallies. Captain John Sheehy did all of the registering for the visitors, scoring two points on free kicks.

At the start of the game Kerry went on the attack and it was not long until Captain Sheehy dashed over in front of the American net. Baily quickly fisted the ball to him, but the home defense was alert and saved by kicking out past the goal. America then got its attack under way and rushed down the field. In the scramble in front of the Kerry goal Seon Carr of America was badly kicked and had to retire, Martin Cody taking his place.

Shanahan Gets 5-Pointer.

America continued to press and ten minutes after the start, Shanahan got his first three-pointer. Kerry came back with a furious attack, kicking, bouncing and fisting the ball first down the right side of the field and then down the left, but America's defense held. A free kick was awarded to the picked team and O'Neil sent the ball over the bar.

A neat bit of football shortly afterward put Captain Sheehy close to the goal, but off at an angle. He did not hesitate long and sent the ball over the bar for Kerry's first point, twenty-two minutes after the start of festivities. A penalty was called on the Green and Gold and Shanahan added another point to the New York total. Henry boosted the total by one shortly after on another penalty.

Then, four minutes from the close of the half, Captain Sheey took a penalty kick and raised Kerry's total to two. Two penalties for New York followed and Henry and Shanahan converted them into single markers, Shanahan's going over the bar just before the whistle blew for the half, with America leading by 5—2.

There was no slackening of pace in the second half. Kerry felt that it could win the game and set out to do that very thing. John Baily, James Baily and Mahony figured in some fast and neat passing that had the American defense backed clear into the goal, but the home side finally got the ball back to centre field and seven minutes from the restart Bolger kicked over teh bar to put the home side further into the lead, 9 to 2.

Injury Forces Out Clifford.

Kerry rallied, but Furlong, at full-back for America, sent the ball far down the field and it was the invaders' time to save. In the mixup in front of the goal Patrick Clifford, star right fullback for Kerry, was kicked over the left eye, opening a deep gash. He was rushed from the field where he received medical aid.

The Kerry forwards broke through again and were rushing toward the goal when checked and a penalty called on America. Although rushed, Captain Sheehy sent the ball over the bar. For a time the play alternated in front of the two goals and then Stynes received a long boot from the centre of the field and sent the ball squarely into the net for the last three points of the game.

In a preliminary contest, the Kilkenny and Lalr hurling teams staged a slashing battle which was won by the former, 25 to 22.

The line-up of the Gaelic football game:

MRS. STENZ TAKES FINAL.

She and Baggs Beat Mrs. Letson and Steinkampf, 6-2, 8-6.

Special to The New York Times.

ELMSFORD, N. Y., July 4.—Mrs. Fred Letson and Harry Steinkampf lost to Mrs. Bernard F. Stenz and Fred Baggs here today in the final of the first invitation mixed doubles tournament ever staged at the Fairview Country Club, 6—2, 8—6. In the first set Mrs. Letson and Steinkampf won the first game, but dropped the next four. They also won the fifth, but lost the set when Mrs. Stenz and Baggs won the next two.

In the second set the competition was keener. Baggs and Mrs. Stenz ran into a lead of four games to two, but by forcing the play Steinkampf and Mrs. Letson evened matters at 4-all, and then forged ahead to make the count 5-4. However, errors proved costly to Mrs. Letson and Steinkampf, and after gaining another game they lost the match by dropping four successive games.

Crowd Storms Judges' Stand In Protest to Auto Decision

DE PAOLO LEADS WAY IN 200-MILE GRIND

Sets Pace From Start, Breaking Rockingham Track Record for First Half of Race.

LOCKHART AND EVANS TRAIL

Former Pushes Auto From Sixth Place in Closing Laps to Place 2d —Morton First in Stock Test.

By The Associated Press.

SALEM, N. H., July 4.—A pair of babi's shoes which Pete DePaolo carries as mascot in his racing car, brought him luck for the second time today on the Rockingham Speedway. Holding the lead from the outset, De Paolo won the 200-mile holiday race, his second victory on this track, finishing two laps ahead of Frank Lockhart.

Dave Evans finished third, three laps behind the leader. DePaolo's time was one hour 36 minutes and 30 seconds.

While De Paolo won the race and $7,000 with apparent ease, the actual hero of the afternoon was Lockhart. He trailed most of the way and at the half-way mark was in sixth place. At that point Evans and Leon Duray held second and third places. In the last half of the race Lockhart, giving an exhibition of speed and control that thrilled the onlookers, crept up, passing one racer after another, and even threatened the leader.

Harts in the Money.

Finishing second, Lockhart won $3,500. Evans's prize was $2,500. Others in the money were Cliff Woodbury, Bennie Stapp, Harry Hartz and Al Melcher, who finished in that order. Ten finished out of a starting field of seventeen.

De Paolo, who drove a steady and skillful race, established a track record for the first 100 miles, making an average speed of 128½ miles an hour, two and one-half faster than the old mark. On the second century lacking competition, he dropped to an average of 126½ miles an hour.

Harry Hartz's mechanic broke the track record for time spent in changing a tire, putting on a new rear tire in 11 seconds. The old record was 12 seconds, while the world's record, set at Indianapolis, is 9 4-5 seconds.

Souders Fails to Start.

George Souders, Purdue student, who won the Memorial Day race at Indianapolis, did not compete, his car having arrived here in poor shape and with no time for repairs. The race was run without accident.

The 100-mile stock-car race which preceded the main event was won by Waite Morton. Frank Lockhart finished in second place and Ralph Hepburn was third.

Lockhart led the field for sixty-five laps, but a blowout cost him a lap and one-half. Five laps later another blowout cost him five laps. Engine trouble forced Hepburn to the pits for a time. There were six entries.

Roughness Toward End Brings Many Penalties—Borrowed Player in Star Role.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 4.—The Maccabee soccer team of Palestine, defeated the Philadelphia All-Stars, at the Sesqui Stadium here this afternoon before 15,000 spectators by a 5 to 2 score. The Jewish team led at half time, 3 to 2, and tallied two more counters in the last ten minutes of the contest.

The contest became rough toward the end and Referee Waldner was forced to call several penalties on both teams. Two former Penn booters played an important rôle for the All-Stars. Art Binns, captain, headed the defense and was the outstanding halfback, while Jim Gentle, tallied the only legitimate goal for the Philadelphia team. The other tally was registered when the Palestine team stopped playing because they thought a foul had been committed in front of the net but the Referee allowed Farrel's boot.

The all-Jewish club was strengthened by three outside players. Elscenroffer, one of the borrowed players, starring with three goals.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 4.—William T. Tilden and Francis T. Hunter won the men's doubles championship in the Wimbledon tennis tourney today from Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, last year's champions, after trailing by two sets and 3–5 in the third. The match, which produced the best exhibition of doubles play ever seen at Wimbledon, was won by the score of 1–6, 4–6, 8–6, 6–3, 6–4.

Twice the Frenchmen needed only one more point to gain a three-set victory while Tilden gained three match points before he won his service and the match.

Two other American victories were scored today—in the mixed doubles and in the women's doubles. Miss Helen Wills and Miss Elisabeth Ryan gained the final by defeating Mrs. L. A. Godfree and Miss Betty Nuthall of England, 6–2, 6–2, and Hunter and Miss Ryan entered the semi-finals of the mixed doubles by their 6–3, 6–2 victory over Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Lycett.

Men's Doubles Is Thrilling.

The Franco-American doubles provided a thrilling contest. The Frenchmen, last year's champions, were expected to win on the form they had showed this year and their play in the first two sets seemed to fully justify all the predictions. In the first set particularly they simply smothered Tilden and Hunter at the net. Once there they might as well have been one man so far as effectiveness and coordination were concerned.

Hunter and Tilden, with mighty drives, searched for a loophole in this wall of tennis rackets, but couldn't find one and any lob not actually placed on the baseline was promptly killed.

In the second set the Americans, after trailing at 1–5, pulled up to 4–5 before losing. They were beginning to make a match of it. Hunter dropped his service to give the Frenchmen the lead at the beginning of the third set, but the Americans retaliated by capturing Brugnon's service mainly as the result of Tilden's brilliant play.

Tilden won his service to take the lead but three successive games then went to France and the situation looked serious. Hunter had lost his service when the count was 3-all and Brugnon then won his. Tilden, however held his delivery and by a series of shots which beat Cochet at the net, the Americans broke through Cochet's service to even matters at 5-all after Cochet had been within a point of the match at 40-15. The Frenchmen won one more game and then the set went to America, 8-6.

America Is Supreme.

The fourth set was America's all the way. Brugnon was winning his services easily, but Cochet was dropping his, principally because of weakness in his second delivery, which both Tilden and Hunter punished. Tilden ended this set with a wonderful saving shot, taken behind his back, which beat the Frenchmen by its sheer unexpectedness. Tilden, who, in the first two sets, had been trying to play the whole game himself, now had risen to great heights.

The fifth set was a nerve-racking affair. The Americans secured a useful two-game lead by taking Brugnon's service and holding Tilden's. They at last were finding a weakness in the French formation by driving down the centre, and Brugnon was growing unsteady. On the other hand Hunter, who had been somewhat slow in covering the court in the earlier chapters, probably because he never knew where Tilden would be next, was getting better every minute.

The play of Cochet was still brilliant, but Tilden had an asset in his cannonball service that Cochet lacked and his service practically turned the scales.

Hunter, by double faulting twice, allowed the Frenchmen to make a stand and they then took the lead as Brugnon won his service.

But Tilden, despite some very bad line decisions, evened the games at 3 all.

Double faults by Cochet made the count 4–3 and Hunter and Brugnon promptly dropped their services also to make it 5–4. Tilden, serving, then had three match points before lacked, and his service practically he relieved the harassed feelings of winning the game, set and match.

American Women Best.

The women's doubles final wasn't an inspiring exhibition. Little Betty Nuthall couldn't find her game and Mrs. Godfree's wasn't good enough to repair this deficiency. On the other hand Miss Ryan was consistent from first to last, and this with Miss Wills's hard hitting, made the match a one-sided affair. The match was over in less than half an hour and the Americans never were extended. They carried the heavier guns.

The Lycetts had been expected to put up a good fight against Hunter and Miss Ryan, but Lycett for once was off his game and the Americans won easily enough. Hunter gave one of the best exhibitions of mixed doubles play seen in this tournament, and on today's form he and his partner should win the championship.

SMITH BEATS HALL IN TENNIS UPSET

Wins 3d Round Match at 6-3, 6-2, in Quaker Ridge Title Tourney.

ALSO DOWNS ROSENBAUM

Takes Exciting Match, 9-7, 7-9, 6-2—Lang, De Mott and Partridge Advance.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., July 4.—Four players advanced from the fourth round of the Quaker Ridge tennis championship tournament at the New Rochelle Tennis Club here today, with Francis Smith, the Waterbury sensation, occupying the rôle of favorite as a result of surprising victories over two of the strongest entrants. The other survivors are J. Lang, Ralph De Mott and Mel Partridge.

Smith surprised the large gallery by eliminating J. Gilbert Hall in a third round meeting by the score of 6–3, 6–2. Smith's victory was regarded as remarkable since he was credited with little chance of scoring over so capable a player as Hall. The Waterbury player then went into the fourth round in one of the most exciting matches of the day, defeating Dr. William Rosenbaum, 9–7, 7–9, 6–2.

Percy Kynaston, who has two legs on the trophy, met defeat in the third round at the hands of William Oydelotte, 4–6, 6–2, 6–2. Kynaston's defeat leaves only one player, Herb Bowman, with a chance to gain the trophy this year. Bowman, as well as Kynaston and Frank Hunter, has won the tourney twice, and a victory this year will net him permanent possession of the trophy. Bowman advanced to the fourth round by defeating Ed Reese, 6–0, 6–1.

The doubles competition was launched today with two teams entering the third round. They are C. C. Hubbell and E. B. Sheridan and J. Gilbert Hall and Frank Bonneau.

ALONSO REPULSED IN GLEN COVE FINAL

Second Ranking Star Succumbs Before Johnson in Marked Upset, 7-5, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4.

VICTORY IS WELL EARNED

Philadelphian's Unerring Control and Handling of Rival's Bullet-Like Drives Decides Issue.

By ALLISON DANZIG.
Special to the New York Times.

GLEN COVE, L. I., July 4.—A 36-year-old veteran, whose name has stood among the highest in American tennis for twenty years, scored one of the biggest reversals of the season today when Wallace F. Johnson of Philadelphia, nineteenth in the national ranking, defeated Manuel Alonso of the same city, second only to William Tilden in the ranking, in the final round of the invitation tournament of the Nassau Country Club.

A large holiday gathering looked on in amazement as Johnson, who was a member of the first ten as far back as 1908, fought his way from behind in both the first and second sets against a player who has a reputation second to none in the world for a fighting heart and brought the match to an end in the fourth set at 7–5, 6–4, 3–6, 6–4.

It was the first time that Johnson has won this historic grass court tournament, and his name will be inscribed upon the challenge bowl which was first won by Dean Mathey in 1913 and has since been captured by William J. Clothier, Karl Behr, Walter Merrill Hall, Watson Washburn, Dick Williams, Howard Voshell, William Tilden and Lewis N. White.

No victory of the season has been more unquestionably earned than was this of the Philadelphia exponent of the chop stroke. Alonso, for all his burning pace and speed, was forced to yield to a master of tactics.

Johnson in Rare Form.

There were men in the gallery today who have watched Johnson play tennis for years who declared that never had they seen him perform in the manner he did this afternoon. Here was a man whose tennis star had seemed to have set definitely once and for all two years ago beating one of the ten best men of the world. Only his fine work in the national championship earned him a ranking at No. 5 in 1924, and for the last two years he had been suffering setbacks so regularly from lesser lights that every one agreed Johnson was through. In a Philadelphia championship tournament in June Alonso had disposed of him in successive sets without having to extend himself.

Johnson played tennis of a calibre qualified to beat almost any man in the first ten with the exception of Tilden and Johnston. In spite of his thirty-eight years, never at any stage of the match did he show signs of fatigue, and the steadiness of his hand in coping with Alonso's blistering forehanders in prolonged rallies was marveled at. So infallible was his control that until the concluding stages of the third set, he had hardly put a single ball beyond the base line, and he was repeatedly nicking the line or landing within inches of it.

Most of these deep shots were lobs, lobs that were his answer to Alonso's bullet drives to remote territory, giving him time to get into position again while driving the Spanish player back from the net.

Alonso Unable to Gauge Ball.

It was not his lobbing, however, that won the match for Johnson, but his chopping. These chop strokes, with their heavy spin, curled off the grass so treacherously that Alonso could not gauge the ball accurately and was thrown off his timing, resulting in errors. A strong wind which blew during the match added to the effectiveness of the stroke, and again and again Alonso raced in for a short chop he miscalculated and overdrove the side line with his stinging forehanders.

Johnson had much mastery over his favored stroke that he could hit a bullseye with it every time. Whether he was digging the ball out of the turf, using his racquet as a spoon, or taking it on the run he placed it where open territory showed, and Alonso, racing in for a kill, was confounded as the ball came back at sharp angles across court to elude his racquet or sailed straight down the line from Johnson's backhand.

In the first set Alonso led at 5–2 and was five times within a stroke of the set in the tenth game. Johnson pulled it out from 0–40, continuing on to win a sequence of five games for the chapter. In the second set the Davis Cup player led at 3–0, and again Johnson, who seemed to become passive in his play at stretches, added pressure and won six of the seven next games.

The third set was bitterly fought until Johnson's control cracked slightly and Alonso came through at 6–3. In the final set, with the score 4–all, Johnson won four games in a row with the loss of only six points, coasted in the next three games and captured the tenth for the match after a harrowing struggle that found Alonso fighting to save himself against the other's lobs and drop shots.

SELIGSON ADVANCES TO FOURTH ROUND

New Yorker Repulses Mills and Garland in Middle States Tennis at Philadelphia.

ORSER IS STOPPED BY CRAIG

Law Sweeps Aside Bancroft in One of Two Minor Upsets—Alonso Will Compete Today.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 4. — Much progress was made today, the opening day of the Middle States Tennis Tournament at the Philadelphia Cricket Club when eight players reached the fourth-round brackets. There were few upsets recorded, practically all of the seeded stars advancing without a break in the ranks, though several were hard pressed.

Manuel Alonso and Wallace Johnson will not start till tomorrow afternoon as they played in the final of the Nassau invitation tourney at Glen Cove, L. I.

Julius Seligson, New York, also in the seeded list, was another to gain the fourth round. He found Coleman S. Mills easy in his first match, losing only two games, but Dick Garland, George School star, gave him trouble, but gave way, 6–3, 6–1, in the match which sent the New Yorker into the fourth round.

Occidental Star Triumphs.

There were two minor upsets, though neither players were beaten in the seeded draw. Horace Orser, New York, junior star, was eliminated in his opening match by Norval Craig, Occidental College Star, who got to the final in the Intercollegiate doubles last week. Orser was beaten in straight sets, 6–3, 6–4.

H. H. Bancroft, junior from California, was swept aside by B. C. Law of the Philadelphia Club, in a hard fought match, 6–4, 7–5. The youthful Southpaw put up a stubborn fight but could not overcome Law's consistent game. After eliminating Bancroft, Law played a long drawn out three-set match to defeat F. T. Eyre, 4–6, 11–9, 6–1.

Doeg Is Hard Pressed.

John Doeg, Santa Monica junior star, and seeded second in the draw here, was off his game, and he had several narrow escapes before he got into the fourth round.

John Van Ryn and Kenneth Appel, Princeton, who won the Intercollegiate doubles crown last Saturday, made headway in the singles, both being among the double winners.

But Earle Ties Score in 5th Chukker of National Junior Match and Tallies 4 Times in All.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 4.—In one of the most sensational games ever witnessed here, the Bryn Mawr polo-ists scored a notable 11 to 7 victory over the Roslyn four in the national junior tourney at the Bala Oval. The victory was unexpected, especially after the Long Islanders had piled up a 4 to 1 advantage in the first two periods.

The local players staged a dazzling rally in the fourth and fifth periods to tie the score, but it was not till the final session that Bryn Mawr really broke loose, tallying five times to sew up the game. Four times during the closing half of the game the score was deadlocked.

In the early play the superior speed of the Roslyn mounts enabled the visitors to have a distinct advantage, but as the match progressed this differences did not appear so noticeable.

Injury Handicaps Roslyn.

Part of the overwhelming score piled up by Bryn Mawr in the closing period was probably due to an injury suffered by Schwartz, Roslyn back, who pulled a tendon but did not leave the game. Schwarts had to be practically lifted off his mount at the end of each period, and this left the Roslyn defense weakened.

Gatens, Bryn Mawr back, played a stellar game and rode on even terms with Jim Cooley all the way, allowing the Long Island attack star only two goals. Gatens also took a share of the offensive by some neat feeding to his forwards.

Earl Hopping Jr., son of the famous internationalist, played a great game, tallying three of the seven counters credited to the losing four.

At the beginning of the match Bryn Mawr seemed to have little sense of stroking or organization. It was the first time two of its members had played in the combination. Several times they got free and appeared to be in a scoring position, but poor team work robbed them of tallies. George Earle, in particular, did not hit his stride till late in the game, but once he got his mallet going he chalked up four counters.

Cooley and Hopping Tally.

Cooley and Hopping tallied twice apiece in the first three periods before Smith broke the ice with a counter for Bryn Mawr. It was not till within five seconds of the end of the fifth period that Earle got free and tallied the goal which knotted the count, and from then on it was give and take, first one and then the other grabbing the lead.

With Schwartz crippled and not at his best, the Bryn Mawr attack tallied five goals in the last period, Cecil Smith getting two and each other member of the team collecting one.

McALLISTER BRIGHT STAR

Wins Century at Lewisohn Stadium and Returns Medal—Knobel and Fiore Stand Out.

A series of athletic events, city-wide in scope, featured the ninth annual Safe and Sane Fourth of July observance yesterday held in commemoration of the late Mayor William J. Gaynor, sponsored by Mayor James J. Walker and conducted by James V. Mulholland, director of games. It was estimated that more than a quarter of a million persons witnessed more than 10,000 competitors, men, women and children, clash in friendly rivalry at more than fifty playgrounds and more than a dozen municipal baths.

The contestants were as cosmopolitan in make-up a sthe spectators. All creeds and races vied for the prizes and even brothers raced against brothers, fathers against sons, and on some occasions mothers against daughters, and the old motto that youth must be served did not always prevail.

Competitions were held in every borough, Manhattan, Bronx, Kings, Queens and Richmond, but it was in the lower east side where most of the throngs gathered. At Seward Park more than 10,000 watched the events, while the best Brooklyn representation was in Highland Park, where 5,500 gathered.

Several Novel Events Held.

For the most part the events included 40, 60, 100 and 200 yard dashes, one lap run, high jump, standing broad jump and running broad jump. The program, however, was varied at several playgrounds. One even boasted a baby special, while several centres had firecracker races. Other novel events were crossing the brook, which was disguised as crossing the Delaware. There were shoe races, sack races and bobbie races. One centre had a Black Bottom contest.

What was perhaps the outstanding feature of the giant athletic carnival was the victory of Bob McAllister, the former Flying Cop, holder of world's records at various sprint distances, in a 100-yard dash at the Lewisohn Stadium, City College. Bob came unannounced, was a post entry, and sped away with the century in ten seconds flat, while the second man, P. Buckley, trailed him by ten yards.

When the medal was handed him, Bob generously refused to take it, saying that the reason he took part was due to the fact that he was training for the Olympics and that he was anxious to get all the actual competition possible. The first award went to the second man and the second to the third.

The meet at City College was one of five Amateur Athletic Union meets. The four others were at Crotona Park, McComb's Dam Park, Rice Stadium and Astoria Field.

Knobel a Double Victor.

At McComb's Dam Park Knobel registered two victories. He won the 300 in 0:34 4-5 by ten yards from a large field and triumphed in the running broad jump. Leo Anderson galloped off with the two-mile run, to win by 200 yards. Youth vanquished age in the shot putt. Jack Lavelle, a Notre Dame star, defeated Yahanis, a former junior metropolitan champion who has reached the age of 48. At Rice Stadium, the newly formed Pasadena Track Club ran off with the majority of places.

At Five Points Playground the Italians won every place, and at Thomas Jefferson they won all but two. The Slavs were predominant at Tompkins Square Park, while the Irish romped off with the spoils at East Twenty-third Street in the swimming events. F. Shea beat out his brother, W. Shea, in the feature 40-yard swim.

The lone triple winner of the day was J. Ficere, at Queensboro. He first competed in the eighty-five-pound running broad jump and then moved up to the 110-pound class. This difference of twenty-five pounds did not affect him, since he captured the 60-yard dash and the one-lap run.

A family party was held at Gravesend Park, where Miss A. Friedman won the 50-yard dash and the potato race and Miss C. Friedmen took the standing broad jump.

The Martins had cause for rejoicing at Yorkville Park, won the 40-yard dash and Buster the century and a second place in the 220-yard sprint.

Girl Swimmers Feature.

At the West Eighth Street Baths Anna Hussey and Henrietta Schrag had a personal fight of it. Anna came in first in the 100-yard free-style, with Henrietta second. The tables were reversed in the 50-yard backstroke, but in the 50-yard breast-stroke Anna beat out Henrietta.

At Carl Schurz Park in a crossing-the-brook mixed race Victoria Pastore vanquished John Rocili, who lives in the same house. Later, Victoria's older sister, Dorothy, won the firecracker race. Two sturdy little Italian brothers took two of the three places in the 36-yard midget race. Joe Marzithase won and his brother John was third. Frank, another brother, was the victor in the bobble race.

There were three sets of double winners at the Browne Playground. B. Fiore was first in the potato race and the 30-yard dash, while F. Bianca was second on each occasion. W. Rodriguez won the 40- and 100 yard dashes and was second in the two-lap event and the high jump. A. Andrewski won these two latter and was also second in the century. Maxie Ruff turned in a very creditable performance at McLaughlin Park. She was first in the high jump and in the baseball throw and was second in the 50-yard dash. S. Birnbaum and L. Birnbaum were first in the mile and half-mile, respectively. An unusually cosmopolitan gathering competed here.

Special to The New York Times.

BRIARCLIFF MANOR, N. Y., July 4.—One world's record was shattered, another established, at a water carnival in the lagoon of Briarcliff Lodge here today. All the contenders except Miss Betty Burgess of Cleveland represented the Women's Swimming Association.

Competing from scratch in a 200-meter backstroke handicap Miss Elaine Delany, 16 years old, covered the distance in 3:16 3-5 over the 50-meter course used for the Olympic try-outs of 1924 and wiped out the universal long course standard of 3:26, set by Sybil Bauer in January, 1926.

Her performance enabled Miss Delany to win the event by a safe margin from Miss Doris O'Mara runner-up from the three-second mark.

Victory For Miss McGary.

Miss Ethel McGary created a record for 1,000 meters free style, none being listed, when she won an invitation handicap from scratch in 16:00 2-5.

Miss McGary finished nearly 50 yards ahead of her only opponent, Miss Burgess, all around champion of Ohio, who had a start of 40 seconds on her.

A 100-meter handicap was captured by Miss Katherine Ames, allowed 8 second, in 1:16 1-5, but she was closely pressed by Miss Alice Mahoney, in receipt of 22 seconds, who gained the place.

Little Miss Eleanor Holm, 12-year-old aquatic marvel, won a 100-meter handicap for girls under 14 in the striking time of 1:20 3-5.

NEW YORK OARSMEN WIN ON SCHUYLKILL

15,000 See N. Y. A. C. Intermediates and Junior Scullers and Nonpareils Score.

HOOVER DEFAULTS TITLE

Does Not Defend Sculling Crown, Which Passes to Myers—Freeman Takes Junior Event.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 4.—New York oarsmen made their best showing in years in the annual Peoples' Day Regatta before a crowd of 15,000 on the Schuylkill this afternoon. The New York Athletic Club with a first place in the intermediate eights and junior quadruple sculls led the metropolitan district, while the Nonpareil Rowing Club won the junior four-oared gigs.

Edward W. Freeman of the Nassau Boat Club, New York, won in the junior single shells by a wide margin.

The New York A. C. intermediate eight then entered the senior eights, but was beaten by the national champions, the Penn A. C., by four lengths, the Pennsylvania Barge Club finishing third.

Stroked by Johnny Ashton, formerly of the Undine Barge Club of this city, the New York A. C. junior quadruple sculls won by half a length from the New Rochelle Rowing Club, with Penn A. C. third and the Fairmounts last.

New Rochelle came with such a rush in the last quarter-mile it looked as though the "Winged Foot" scullers would be overtaken, but Ashton sent back such a fast pace to R. V. Lange, R. Cameron and J. B. Walker, the challengers were not able to get closer than twenty feet. The New York A. C. four made the good time of 7 minutes 26 seconds against the wind.

N. Y. A. C. Intermediates Victors.

The New York A. C. intermediate eight-oared shell won by two lengths from New Rochelle and the rest of the strong field. The New York A. C. eight, stroked by A. W. Walz Jr., set a dizzy pace in the last half mile and gradually pulled away from its opponents.

New Rochelle and Pennsylvania Barge Club staged a remarkable battle for second place, the visitors taking the position by two feet. Penn A. C. eight contained six of the champion West Catholic High oarsmen, who won the E. T. Stotesbury schoolboy title here a month ago.

W. E. Garrett Gilmore of the Bachelors' Barge Club repeated his Navy Day conquest by taking the senior quarter-mile dash by a third of a length from Al Vogt of the Penn A. C.

Edward W. Freeman of the Nassau Boat Club of New York won the junior single sculls by at least a dozen lengths when the other three starters collided three-eighths of a mile from the finish. Freeman had more than a length lead at the time of the accident.

Springfield Rowing Association's junior eight scored its first victory on the Schuylkill in years when Stroke Kozak sent the crew over the line two-thirds of a length ahead of the Undine Barge Club.

Nonpareils Win Hard Race.

The Nonpareils of New York, stroked by Frank Miller, won the junior four-oared gig race in a grueling finish against the Fairmounts. Less than a half length separated the two crews at the finish. Every man in the New York four virtually collapsed at the finish, but it did not take them long to revive.

Allan J. Cassidy Jr. and John McKay of the Pennsylvania Barge Club scored an impressive five-length victory in intermediate doubles over the Vespers.

For the second time this year Ken Myers of the Bachelors' Barge Club defeated Bob Agnew of the Undine Barge Club in the championship senior singles. Myers won by six lengths. Walter Hoover, the champion, did not defend his title.

New York A. C., after winning the Junior Quads, was permitted to start in the intermediate class and lost by two lengths to the Vespers.

In the intercity doubles shell competition New York A. C. and Nassau Boat Club could not keep step with the Philadelphians. The Nassau oarsmen, Leo E. Menne and Frank A. Menne, beat out W. W. Simons and S. Y. Jenkins of the New York A. C. for fourth place by a half length.

Varuna Boat Club of Brooklyn put up a magnificent race in the intermediate four-oared gigs, losing out to Penn A. C. only in the last 100 yards by less than half a length. The Ariels of Baltimore were almost neck-and-neck with the other two crews until the final drive.

Special to the New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., July 4.—A great sprint just before reaching the tape gaven Cecil Walker a brilliant victory in the two-mile handicap at the Velodrome here tonight. He beat Eddie Madden, Willie Fenn, Dave Lands, George Dempsey, Anthony Young and Harold Smith. The time was 2:33 2-5. YOUNG RUDDY WINS AT NEW ROCHELLE Thrashes Way From Scratch to Victory Over Lee in 400-Yard Swim.

Takes 300-Yard Medley Race From Marquette—Yonkers Young Women Score Triumph.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., July 4.—Raymond Ruddy, the New York A. C.'s 15-year-old swimmer, gained another victory at a water carnival under the auspices of the New Rochelle Park Department at Hudson Park this afternoon.

Starting from scratch in a 400-yard free-style handicap which required heats, young Ray captured the final in 4:53 2-5 over a fifty-yard course in Echo Bay and finished a body length ahead of his clubmate, Edward Lee, who started from the three-second mark.

George Cronin of the Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A., but entered unattached, easily won a scratch 300-yard medley swim. Apparently without exerting himself toward the end he covered the distance in 4:23 4-5, and led home by four and six yards William Marquette of Northwestern University, Chicago, and Philip Lechnowitz, unattached, who earned the places in the order named.

Handicap to Braisted.

JAMAICA-ST. KITTS IN A CRICKET DRAW

Inter-Colonial Match Called With Jamaica 202 for 7 Wickets and St. Kitts 133 for 5.

COLUMBIA OVAL LOSES

Union County Eleven Upsets the Hitherto Undefeated Team in Title Event.

The intercolonial cricket game at New York Oval yesterday resulted in a draw, Jamaica declaring its innings closed for 202 runs for 7 wickets, to which St. Kitts responded with 133 for 5 wickets when time was called. Big interest was taken in the contest, about 1,500 enthusiasts turning out to see the play.

Jamaica batted first and, due to splendid displays by H. Smith, who carried out his bat for a great innings of 52, W. Thompson 43 and C. Daly 37, ran up the useful score of 202 for 7 wickets when the innings was declared.

Upon St. Kitts taking their turn at the wicket they fared badly, three men being out by a paltry 26 runs. E. Yearwood and Ted Margetson then became associated and knocked the bowling all over the field, and the partnership was not broken until 67 runs were added, Margetson being bowled by Prout for a fine effort of exactly 50, while Yearwood was not out at the close for 40.

Several Yachts Dismasted by Stiff Breeze as Fleet Races in Larchmont Regatta

LARCHMONT RACES DRAW RECORD FLEET

136 Yachts Compete in Stiff Breeze That Dismasts Several of Them.

TEN-METER CONTEST CLOSE

By SEABURY LAWRENCE

Special to The New York Times.

LARCHMONT, N. Y., July 4.—With a strong northwest breeze whipping the Sound into whitecaps and the harbor gay with yachts dressed in holiday colors, the forty-sixth annual regatta of the Larchmont Yacht Club was sailed today and a fleet of 136 yachts, the largest of the season so far, came out to race for the prizes.

The breeze came off the land in heavy gusts that went up to thirty-five knots strength in the stronger puffs and resulted in several of the yachts being dismasted during the afternoon. The largest of the boats to get into trouble was the new ten meter sloop Esquila, which lost her mast soon after crossing the finish line in a triangular race of 13¾ miles.

The Esquila's tall marconi stick cracked off twenty feet above the deck and the mainsail and upper part of the mast fell over the side. No one was hurt, although some members of the crew were under the billowing canvas as it dropped. The Esquila, which was sailed by Burton Hart, veteran racing helmsman, and which is owned by J. V. W. Reynders of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, was quickly picked up and towed into the harbor.

Another racing sloop that came to grief was the new six meter yacht Clytie, owned by Vice Commodore Henry B. Plant, which was dismasted early. Clytie was also towed in. Other boats to feel the pressure of the breeze were the Star class yachts Ace, owned by Adrian Iselin II., of the Port Washington Yacht Club, and Tempe II, the property of S. L. Adler of the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club. Both were dismasted during the race and towed in.

The starts and finishes were made between the committee boat and a mark moored one mile south of Larchmont breakwater. The general neighborhood of the starting line presented a gay touch when the Destroyers Lamson and Dallas, anchored near by and broke out their flags into a rainbow of colors.

Close Finishes Thrill.

There were some spectacular starts and also close finishes, with the racing yachts often heeled down on their beam ends by the heavy breeze. There was a hair raising finish in the Ten Meter class, in which, after a hard battle all around the course, Frank Page's Narcissus was the winner by six seconds from Commodore P. R. Mallory's Redhead, sailed by Walter Bowes. Esquila, soon afterward dismasted, was third, 41 seconds astern of Redhead.

The Larchmont O boats, ten meters, thirty - footers and Seawanhaka schooners sailed a 13¾-mile course, which gave them a broad reach to a mark off Great Captain Island, another across the Sound to a mark off Matinicock Point on the Long Island shore and still another reach to the finish line.

As there was no windward work for the big fellows, they made fast time of it. The Larchmont O sloop footed very fast in the heavy puffs, with much water on deck, as they breezed across. Celeritas was in front in the middle of the line, Nimbus second, to leeward, Gray Dawn and Mirage following. This was a close race around the course among Nimbus, Mirage and Celeritas, and they finished in that order, but, unfortunately, the first three crossed the wrong line at the finish and were disqualified. There were two dories moored as marks near the committee boat and the three leading skippers picked the wrong dory. Gray Dawn, which was the fourth boat to finish in the class, became the winner through the mistake.

Ten-Meter Start Brilliant.

One of the brilliant starts of the day was in the ten-meter class, in which twelve of the big sloops swept across the line bunched, with the water churned into foam in their wake. The leaders were so close that it was hard to tell which had the advantage, but Redhead, Esquila and Twilight seemed to have slightly the best of it.

Narcissus footed very fast on the first leg to Captain Island and took the lead, but the advantage changed several times before the finish was reached and Narcissus managed to get her bow home in front.

Sailing the long course, Leo Friede's Mermaid was the first to finish in the New York Yacht Club thirty-foot class, coming home about a minute ahead of W. C. Atater's Minx. Both of these yachts were flying protest flags when they finished, and the winner will not be determined until the race committee decides on the protests.

One of the best races of the day resulted in the international six-meter class, in which a record fleet of fifteen boats started. There was a mad scramble at the start, with Picaro, Lanai and Heron having the best berths. These yachts sailed a four-mile triangle, twice around, and when it came to racing there was nothing to it but Lanai. Sailed by C. Sherman Hoyt, this famous international yacht romped along in great shape and led almost throughout the race.

Lanai Right at Home.

Lanai, winner of both the Seawanhaka and Scandinavian cups, was right at home in the heavy going and was faultlessly handled by Hoyt.

The six meters had a beat on the last leg and Lanai came winging across the finish line 41 seconds ahead of Frank Herma's Heron, another good heavy weather boat, with Hawk, sailed by A. E. Luders Jr., third, 44 seconds astern, and Bally Hoo fourth, 31 seconds back of her.

There was a close finish in the R-Class with R. E. Meyer's Bob Kat first by 44 seconds over J. W. Alker's Yankee, with George Granbery's Fifi 47 seconds behind Yankee.

A big flock of star boats raced and the winner was Little Dipper, owned by Commodore George Corry, known as father of the class. Little Dipper had a hard battle with George Elder's Iscyra, finishing six seconds in front.

EVIDENTLY a man can learn to row on this side of the Atlantic, but he never learns the art of steering. Perhaps the scullers from this country and Canada would do better if they had coxswains in the single shells with them when they start down the course for the Diamond Sculls.

Hoover of Duluth was leading Jack Beresford in the final several years ago and ruined himself by pulling out of his course. He broke the blade of his oar over a stake and limped home like a lame duck. Just the other day young Joe Wright of Toronto was leading Lee of Oxford close to the finish of the final for the same great trophy. For no good reason he rammed a boom of logs and Lee went ahead to win. What became of Wright and his craft the cable stories didn't say. Probably nobody bothered to look.

It should be noted that the famous Grand Challenge Cup for eights was won by the Thames Rowing Club, the crew that just did manage to nose out the Kent schoolboys from Connecticut in the first heat. The lads from the Housatonic gave the ultimate winners their hardest fight.

The Returns From Nebraska.

The senior A. A. U. championships at Lincoln, Neb., produced but few surprises. There were great performances, but they were turned in by men from whom much was expected, men like Charley Borah, DeHart Hubbard, Chet Bowman and Johnny Gibson.

As predicted by almost all observers of track and field sports, the athletes at Lincoln did well in the sprints, hurdles and field events. But the lack of speed beyond the furlong pole was as noticeable as ever.

King of the Olympic Club won the high jump with a hop of 6 feet 2⅝ inches, which is nothing to boast of. Harold Osborn kicked off the bar below that mark and seems to have passed his peak as a jumper. It will take 6 feet 6 or better to win the Olympic high jump next year. Richards, Landon and Osborn did it for the United States at former Olympic games. Who will win the nomination at Amsterdam?

The winning throw in the javelin event was only fair and the height of thirteen feet made by Lee Barnes in winning the pole vault will earn no laurel crowns in international competition. But Barnes can do better than that and so can Sabin Carr, who wasn't at Lincoln. And no United States entry ever won the javelin throw at the Olympic games anyway.

From the Land of the Longhorn.

With Bill Johnston and Bill Tilden slipping backward on the tennis courts there has arisen a natural query: "Where will we find replacements for men like these?"

Well, we might try Texas. It's possible that the Flying Frenchmen will snatch away the Davis Cup this year, but we have our own crop of rising youngsters for the future tennis trade, and the Land of the Longhorn has produced a quartet of brilliant performers. These are Berkeley Bell, Lewis White, Louis Thalheimer and Wilmer Allison.

The lads from the Lone Star State average three or four full seasons under the age of the French stars. Bell is only out of the junior ranks a short while, and Allison is the twenty-two-year-old junior of the University of Texas who won the intercollegiate title on the Merion Cricket Club courts a few days ago. The doubles team of White and Thalheimer was put at No. 3 in the national ranking and Bell was No. 6 in the national singles ranking.

That's pretty good for Texas. What will California offer by way of rebuttal?

A Family Matter.

There are six Espinosas in the professional golfing trade, five boys and a girl. In the famous Smith family from Carnoustie there were five brothers who could hit the little white ball. The father was a greens keeper. Other families were famous in golf, but tennis never seemed to get beyond two in a family. That has been changed, however. The Palfreys have arrived.

The Palfreys are five sisters of Boston, all young and all rather snappy tennis players. Miss Helen Wills, of course, is still in the first blush of youth and is the leading lady of the tennis world, but some day "Miss Poker Face" will abdicate and one of these Palfrey sisters may succeed to the throne.

In the national girls' indoor championship, for instance, Sarah Palfrey won the title by defeating Sister Mianne in the final round, and in the doubles event Sarah and Mianne won the championship by defeating Lee Palfrey and Miss Marie Fensterer. The girls range from 12 to 20 years of age, and with five of them on the courts the Palfrey family is due to collect some handsome trophies and some honored titles in the next few years.

The Younger Set.

A close observer of tennis volunteers the information that James Quick deserves to rate right along with Bell, White, Thalheimer and Allison among the younger stars from Texas. Quick, a fellow-student of Allison at the University of Texas, was ranked No. 14 on the national junior singles list last season.

California offers John Doeg, the eighteen-year-old nephew of May Sutton Bundy and the youngest player ever named for a Davis Cup squad. It is said that Doeg has a younger brother who may turn out to be a better player than John. So much the better. John is a left-hander and was ranked No. 14 in the national rating, which isn't bad for an eighteen-year-old lad, and a left-hander at that.

Talent Near at Hand.

New York may claim recognition on the courts of the future if all goes well. It was just a few days ago that Frank Shields, a sixteen-year-old schoolboy from Columbia Grammar School, captured the metropolitan clay court championship from a field of 128 players.

Then there's Sidney B. Wood Jr., nephew of Julian S. Myrick and also of Watson Washburn, who learned his tennis in California and recently practiced it with great success at St. Cloud, in France. Wearing knickers and golf stockings on the court, this youthful resident of New York City created quite a stir by his costume as well as his playing. He defeated Paul de Ricou, one of the best of the French youngsters, in a five-set match, and finally fell before Lacoste.

With all these youngsters developing their ground strokes and overhead smashes there will be no cause for a total collapse of tennis fans if the Davis Cup goes overseas this year. We'll get it back again with interest.

RESOLUTE BEATS VANITIE AT LAST

TIME ALLOWANCE TELLS

Vanitie, Behind at Start, Crosses First, but Is Defeated Through Handicap.

Special to The New York Times.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., July 4.—In a big wholesale breeze, which drove the little fellows to double reefs, the Resolute defeated the Vanitie today for the first time since the two big cup yachts have met under schooner rigs. The Vanitie led at the line by a trifle over three minutes, but with her time allowance the Resolute captured the race and the Puritan Cup by 71 seconds.

For the first time in the memory of the oldest Marblehead skipper a yacht race here was postponed because of too much breeze. It blew about forty miles an hour this morning and all hands waited until afternoon for calmer conditions.

The Lynx turned up as a third staysail rig contender in the schooner class and won the start, with the Resolute close astern. The Vanitie, sailed by Robert W. Emmons 2d, mistook the signals and was 40 seconds after the Resolute, which, as it turned out, was more than sufficient to lose the race.

Vanitie Leads Early.

The first leg, ten miles to Boston Lightship, was a broad reach, and a half hour after the start the Vanitie was well in the lead, turning the mark 40 seconds ahead of the Resolute and 2½ minutes before the Lynx.

The next leg of seven miles was a close fetch, and the Vanitie pulled still further away, but had not saved her time at the second mark, where she led the Resolute by a minute and 32 seconds, the Lynx being well astern.

Had the beat to the finish been a trifle more than seven miles the Vanitie might have won, but the Resolute clung like a bulldog and finished 3 minutes and 6 seconds astern, just enough to clinch the race. The Lynx was nearly hull down.

The Vanitie, with the Prestige, Carolina and Synthetic, joined the fleet last night and the Katura and Ibsis came in today.

Cruise Starts Today.

The fleet will start at noon tomorrow for Rocport in the first of the seven runs of the Eastern Yacht Club cruise.

None of the fifties started in today's race, and only two of the forties.

The summary of the big schooners:

Boat.	Owner.	Elapsed Time.
Resolute,	E. W. Clark	2:40:03
Vanitie,	H. P. Whitney	2:36:57
Lynx,	N. S. Ayer	2:35:26

Corrected time—Resolute, 2:36:36; Vanitie, 2:38:57; Lynx, 2:39:31.

Five minutes after the finish the Resolute's mainsail bolt rope parted five feet below the truck and tore the sail at the head. She will use a spare one tomorrow, while George Ratsey, who was on hand, will have the old one shipped back to City Island.

The Chicago yachtsmen did not sail today, as they lost the match yesterday when they were defeated by the Corinthians. Some of them were guests on a few of the boats today, but all hands left for the West tonight.

DRIGGS'S 66 SETS NEW LINKS RECORD

Met. Amateur Champion Seven Under Par on Cherry Valley Course.

Special to The New York Times.

GARDEN CITY, L. I., July 4.—Eddie Driggs, recently crowned metropolitan amateur champion, set a new record for the Cherry Valley course here today when he won the sweepstakes handicap, playing from scratch, with a 66, clipping a stroke off the previous mark held jointly by himself and Jimmie Law, the resident professional.

Eddie picked up four strokes on par going out as the result of birdies at the fifth and eighth and an eagle three at the ninth, which he scored by means of a long drive and a brassie second to within two feet of the pin. Another eagle three at the tenth and two more birdies were responsible for his 33 coming in. A feature was his putting, he requiring only 28 putts for the eighteen holes.

NEWS OF GOLF CLUBS IN METROPOLITAN AREA

Exhibition matches by the big fellows apparently are not as popular in the metropolitan district as they were a few years ago. This deduction is drawn from the gallery attendance at special exhibitions on the last two Sundays. At Rockwood Hall a week ago, Johnny Farrell and Walter Hagen played against the Harmon brothers, and it was Johnny's first public appearance in his home district since winning the Met open. Less than 300 turned out for that event and it was free.

Last Sunday one of the biggest cards that has been offered to the public in recent years drew a gallery of not many more to Quaker Ridge, which is the heart of one of the most intensive golf developments in the district. A few years ago such a foursome as Farrell, Hagen, Armour and Cruickshank, holding among them virtually all the leading titles, would have attracted a crowd of record proportions.

The Quaker Ridge Club has won much praise for lengthening its course by some 500 yards in the Spring. Now the revamped layout measures nearly 6,000 yards, with two one-shot holes on each nine. The changes were made at the second, third and thirteenth particularly. Both the second and third are new and the thirteenth was lengthened from 112 to 232 yards. Formerly it was the twelfth. The old second was a one-shot and now it measures 430 yards.

Many local enthusiasts will find satisfaction in the news that Walter Hagen is again playing as a metropolitan pro, having severed his Florida connections a short while ago. With few exceptions practically all the star pros now are located in the local area.

With the peerless Walter again representing this district, the Met section will make a formidable attempt to hold the Canadian open crown won by Mac Smith last year. Already Hagen, Cruickshank and Farrell have announced their intention of making a bid for the title when play begins at the Toronto Country Club on Aug. 4.

The Metropolitan Mason's Country Club at Briarcliff Manor gives one the impression of being a fine old private country estate probably because an attempt has been made to keep the distinctive atmosphere that it had as the home of Walter W. Law. The structure, which is of stone, contains among other features a library of over 5,000 volumes, bowling alleys, pipe organ, lounges, two dining rooms and sleeping accommodations for forty persons.

"We must have a speedier bat" said the world's crack players

"A RACKET has got to be constructed along different lines. No bat today is fast enough for the game". That is what champions said. That is why a group of world famous stars asked Spalding to make a faster racket—one suited to the modern, lightning-fast, all-court game.

Spalding set out to make such a racket, and asked these stars for their suggestions. 500 experimental bats passed through their hands before one received their unanimous approval. But the 501st bat got it! That bat we named "Top-Flite". It was played by the winners, both men and women, in many of last year's important tournaments.

That bat is now ready for you. Lighter head—yet in perfect balance. Smaller head, which permits tighter stringing. Kro-Bat construction, to give it strength for many restringings. Open throat, which gives it a new, delightful flexibility. There is a Top-Flite here which will suit you exactly. Come in and find it. Price $15.

WHO HAS ACIDITY? HOW TO STOP IT

N. Y. State Commission Advises Saratoga Geyser and Hathorn Waters

Acidity is a symptom or cause of indigestion, bad breath, sour stomach, loss of appetite, drowsiness, etc. Unless acidity is reduced, bilious attacks are liable to follow and then uric acid and rheumatism.

Saratoga sparkling Geyser water, with meals, is nature's way of reducing acidity and its attendant ailments. Geyser taken between meals acts as a diuretic, stimulating the kidneys to eliminate the uric acid of rheumatism. Taken just before retiring, it often allays sleeplessness.

Hathorn, natural Saratoga eliminant and laxative, taken at least half hour before breakfast, has a gentle, internal cleansing effect which is far reaching in its good results. Its immediate effect is refreshing and stimulating. It regular use frees the system from waste products which may debilitate and wear down the physical strength and nervous energy. Hagen-Sarazen Beaten by Cruickshank-Armour

CRUICKSHANK WINS ON 5TH EXTRA HOLE

MAKES FINE PITCH SHOT

Finishes Brilliantly After Driving Into Rough—Sarazen's 74 Best on Fresh Meadow Links.

By WILLIAM D. RICHARDSON.

Special to The New York Times.

FLUSHING, L. I., July 4.—The holing of a six-foot putt for a birdie 4 on the fifth extra hole by Bobby Cruickshank gave the little Progress Club professional and Tommy Armour, the national open champion, a victory over Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen in a tense exhibition match on the Fresh Meadow Country Club course this afternoon.

The two ex-Scotians and the two former champions were all-square at the end of eighteen holes, and it was decided to continue until one side or the other won a hole, although the customary procedure on matches of this sort is to let well enough alone and call it a halved match. In view of the fact that considerable money was wagered on the outcome, it was agreed to proceed.

After the first four holes had been halved the indications were that the match might go on indefinitely and carry the players through another round, but on the deciding hole Cruickshank, after being in the edge of the rough with his tee shot and sixty yards from the green on his second, played a magnificent pitch from fifty yards off the green up to within two yards, and, after Hagen and Sarazen had missed their 4s, dropped a curling, downhill putt into the hole for the match.

The victory kept the winners' unbeaten record clean and completely upset the calculations of the Fresh Meadow members who regarded Sarazen and Hagen as an unbeatable combination and backed their judgment accordingly.

Pitches Prolong Match.

There was no particular reason for the match going as far as it did, for going to the seventeenth hole with a one-hole margin to work on and needing only two halves to win the match, Cruickshank played an atrocious mashie-niblick pitch into a bunker and Armour followed with one almost as bad. As a result, Hagen and Sarazen were able to win the hole in par figures.

Playing to the eighteenth which, although only 362 yards by the card, played much longer than that with the wind in the direction it was, Sarazen and Cruickshank both missed putts for wins, and after considerable maneuvering the hole was halved in 5s.

Sarazen had to hole a four-footer for a half with Cruickshank on the first extra hole. On the second Hagen, the only one on the fairway with his drive, had the opportunity to clinch the match, but looked up on his second shot and flubbed it completely. Sarazen saving his side there. On the third Sarazen missed a short put that would have ended the match; and on the fourth Armour, after being far off the line and in the rough on his tee shot, came out to within 4 feet and halved with Hagen who was the one closest to the hole.

On the deciding hole, Sarazen and Cruickshank were in the rough on their drives. Sarazen, having to play his second out of a bad lie, pushed it off into heavy rough on the right and was bunkered on his third. That left it up to Hagen who, just short of the green on his second as was Armour, was again short and failed to get his next putt up to the hole so that Cruickshank had the crucial putt for the win and holed it.

Sarazen's Total Best.

From a golfing point of view the match was hardly what one would expect from technicians such as were involved in the match. The best individual score was a 74 for Sarazen, the home club professional, and several putts that were by no means dead to the hole had to be conceded to give those figures. With the same reservations Hagen was 75, Cruickshank 76 and Armour 78.

It was, however, a spectacular match to watch and some brilliant shots were played during the course of the round, especially two by Armour. One of these came at the tenth hole, where he got a birdie 3 after being bunkered. The shot that he had left out of the bunker was one of length; he not only had to get the ball clean off the sand, but hit it on the upstroke to clear the face of the bunker. He managed it perfectly and wound up by holing a twenty-foot putt.

That put his side 1 up after Hagen and Sarazen had squared it by winning the eighth and ninth. Cruickshank entered the picture on the eleventh when he holed an eight-footer for another birdie. Sarazen got one of the holes back with a 2 at the short twelfth and he squared the match with an eighteen-foot putt for a birdie 3 on the fifteenth.

Armour's second classic shot came at the sixteenth when, after topping his second shot, he played a duplicate of the stroke he played to the last green at Oakmont, his ball finishing up two feet from the pin for an easy birdie 4. The main virtue of the shot was its timeliness.

Victors' Start Brilliant.

Cruikshank and Armour, winners of the international four-ball matches at Miami last Winter, started out as if they intended to wipe Hagen and Sarazen right off the earth. A fine approach by Armour gave him a 4 to win the first hole; Cruikshank nearly holed a 3 on the second and then holed a 7-foot down-hill putt to halve the third after being out of bounds. At the next one Bobby rammed in a 40-footer for a 2 and the Scottish pair was 2 up.

Armour came to the rescue on the fifth, Bobby holed a 15-footer on the sixth to halve with Sarazen. It looked as if the open champion and his partner would be 3 up at the seventh until Hagen stepped in with a 20-foot putt for a half, and then the two Scots played the next two holes badly, losing them both and having their lead completely wiped out.

Again they appeared to have the match in hand when they won both the tenth and eleventh, but once more they slipped. Back to square wren Sarazen won the twelfth and fifteenth, Armour and Cruikshank regained the lead on the sixteenth, but squandered their opportunities on the seventeenth and almost lost the match on the eighteenth.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

All American Trade Exchanges Were Closed Yesterday—The Second Half-Year Begins.

Observing Independence Day, all financial and commercial markets in the United States were closed yesterday. Little business of consequence was done in Europe—something which has now become a matter of course on American holidays. This tendency to await New York's initiative is not the smallest testimony to the financial hegemony which American finance and industry now exercise over the outside world. In the older days, when London dominated other markets, including our own, the course of the New York stock market during a British holiday would sometimes be described as "restricted by the absence of arbitrage trading." But evidence that New York did not care to risk moving until London had given the signal was a very rare experience.

With today, it may be said that the second half of 1927 begins in the financial markets. A "second half" always has an interest of its own, from the fact that predictions of financial experts at the beginning of the year are almost invariably restricted to the first six months. As a rule, however, the second half has provided no great surprises in recent years. Possibly 1923 might be considered an exception, for the fairly developed "boom in trade" which distinguished that year's early months was followed by rapidly declining trade activity. But it had become evident long before midsummer that the movement of trade expansion had gone too fast in 1923, just as the deflation crisis of 1920 had been plainly foreshadowed in the month of May. It was in 1924 that midsummer really marked a positive reversal of financial tendencies, and that happened only because of two visible incidents in the outside situation—the rapid recovery of grain prices on news of the European and Canadian harvest shortage in a season of American abundance, and the multiplying signs that Mr. Coolidge would be elected in November.

Probably the offhand view of Wall Street is that the coming half-year will repeat the experience of 1926 and 1925; in other words, that the moderate slackening of trade which followed the great activity of springtime will in turn be replaced by increase of trade activity and industrial profits to as high a point as has yet been reached, or higher. If the stock market of the past few weeks and months has been based upon any serious convictions on the subject (which may be doubted, since the Stock Exchange has shown impatience at any talk of trade conditions) that must have been its underlying belief.

The result may confirm such expectations. We are living in a very remarkable period, in which all the cards on the financial table have seemed to fall to America. There are at least four essential considerations, visible to every one, which should help toward sustained prosperity—abundant credit, based on a very strong bank position; low stocks of merchandise, which will compel the placing of new orders if the consuming public's requirements rise again; full employment of labor at good wages, and unshaken public confidence in both the financial and political situations. Yet the scope of operation for these important influences will depend on how certain other visible influences affect the situation.

The Stock Exchange has already shown that we may have to deal with the over-use of credit in haphazard and at times infatuated speculation. The bond market has shown that there is such a thing as tying up too much even of investment capital. Reports from numerous industries speak frankly of increasingly close competition and of greater difficulty in insuring satisfactory trade profits. Bearing on that last-named tendency of the day, the question of the gradual and persistent fall in prices of industrial products has to be kept in mind; a movement which, at some point never clearly determined might become distinctly troublesome.

It may turn out that all these counter-considerations will be modified, or removed, or actually reversed, in the second half of 1927. If not, their scope of operation will at least give the period the interest which comes with new experiences.

OPEN BERLIN TRADE PARLEY

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Company. By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 4.—Important results are expected from a conference begun here today between representatives of the Federation of British Industries and leaders of the National Association of German Industries. The meeting is a continuation of the one recently held in London.

The principal object is to discuss the results of the Geneva Economic Conference, especially as far as they concern tariff provisions and restriction of import and export. The conference also intends to take up the plan to make the League of Nations settle the question of international credits and trusts and delve into the problem of international affairs and double taxation.

No official report was issued in regard to today's discussions, but it is believed the formation of a German-English chemical trust is brought nearer, because this industry is strongly represented on both sides.

The principal British delegates are Lord Gainford, Sir John Brunner, director of the Imperial Chemical Industries, William J. Woolcock, director of the Association of British Chemical Manufactures, and Eddley Warham, director of the Ashington Coal Company. Leaders on the German side are Dr. Sorge, Honorary Chairman of the National Association of Industries; Dr. Duisberg of the Dye Trust, and Dr. Deutsch of the Deutsche Bank.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

All of the financial and commodity exchanges as well as banking institutions will reopen this morning after remaining closed over the prolonged week-end holiday. Business was entirely suspended in the New York financial centre and elsewhere throughout the United States yesterday in observance of Independence Day.

Two Reports of the Week.

Two announcements of paramount interest to the stock market community will come out this week and may be expected to figure importantly in Wall Street operations. The first will be the compilation of the Stock Exchange showing the amount of brokerage loans as of June 30, to be made public the middle of the week. Leading commission houses have been making urgent efforts to reduce the amount of outstanding loans, so that there is hope for a compilation not as unfavorable as many commentators have been predicting. It seems to be a foregone conclusion that the statement of unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation as of June 30, to be made public on Saturday, will show another sharp decrease. If that expectation is fulfilled, the total of unfinished business easily may be brought perilously close to the low levels of 1910. Wall Street, notwithstanding its protestations that the tonnage figures are no longer significant, is actually concerned over the slimness of the Steel Corporation's backlog.

An Economic War.

One of the large economic services sees ahead a conflict of economic forces within the next few months, in which three unfavorable factors for business will war with three favorable ones. The favorable ones are, first, the expected gain in building; second, improved urban purchasing power; and third, a persistent rise in the favorable balance of trade. On the other side it sees ranged a reduction in freight traffic which may follow short crops; second, competition in the motor industry; and third, a huge expansion in speculation and new financing. The bureau adds that it is anticipating a victory for the favorable elements.

Expect New Rule on Proxies.

It is regarded as virtually certain that the New York Stock Exchange will shortly announce—probably this week—a new ruling of the Governing Committee by which Exchange firms will be prohibited from issuing proxies for stocks recorded in their name but not actually owned by them. The reform, which has been persistently advocated by Samuel Untermyer, special counsel of the Transit Commission, is understood to have received the approval of the Exchange's Law Committee. The Governing Committee will meet on Wednesday, at which time an official announcement of formal action is expected.

The "Short Account."

Indications of an increase in the outstanding short interest in the stock market are seen in the enlarged demand for stocks in the loan market. This increased demand is reflected more in private transactions between commission houses than in the official loan crowd. Commission houses drew attention on Saturday to this greater borrowing demand for stocks as evidencing improvement in the technical position of the stock market.

Enter the Boll Weevil.

The boll weevil, that pest of cotton producers which for two seasons played but little part in the country's economics, is due for a more important rôle this year, it was indicated by developments last week. The opinion is now expressed that the absence of the pest in the past two seasons was not the result so much of improved control as by the changes of the weather. This year the weather has been of the kind, if not to spread the weevil, at least to spread reports of the weevil. Added to the late start and reduced acreage of the crop, the weevil reports make for predictions of considerable lower output this year. These factors, with the flood in retrospect, have made some traders remark that the season thus far has provided a full complement of speculative features for the market.

Electrification of Railroads.

The electric manufacturing industry, which has already taken a substantial nibble at the business of electrifying steam railroads, is hopeful of even better luck in this quarter. The New York Central has a program of electrification of long standing, although it must be said that little of material nature has been done to extend existing electric lines up to the present. The Pennsylvania, however, is steadily increasing its electric mileage and the line between Philadelphia and New York may soon show evidence of new application of the principle.

MARKETS IN LONDON, PARIS AND BERLIN

British Stock Trade Is Quiet, With Government Liens Firm.

LONDON, July 4.—The Stock Exchange opened the week quietly. British Government loans continued firm. For the first time the 4 per cent. consolidated loan was quoted as one series, the difference between the "A" and the "B" series disappearing on the deduction of dividends.

Dealings began in three new foreign State loans, the City of Dantzic, State of Saxony and National Mortgage Bank of Finland, but only on the first named was a premium established.

Oil shares were quiet, with a general downward tendency. A further decline in London stocks of rubber amounting to 569 tons had no effect on the securities. The price of rubber was 16½ pence a pound.

Diamond shares again showed weakness. De Beers closed at 14 9-16, showing a fall of 5-16. Rand Mines rose 1-32 of a point.

In the money market, loans were easy at 3½ to 3 per cent., and discount rates closed steady. Business in sterling on New York was restricted by the Independence Day celebrations and the rate was unaltered.

Subscriptions will be invited tomorrow for the City of Berlin £3,500,000 6 per cent. bonds, offered at 98½. A cumulative sinking fund to redeem the whole issue by July 1, 1957, will be established.

Paris Trading Remains Quiet.

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Company. Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 4.—The Bourse opened today on the same reserved tone as was evident last week. Business was small in volume and showed little tendency to change.

Some French securities showed a certain liveliness at opening session, but the increased activity was not confirmed. The quick fall in De Beers had the effect of restraining all international recurities.

The report of satisfactory progress in the new French loan, however, caused a slight rise in French rentes. The 3 per cents. closed at 57.40 to 67.55; 4s, 62.40 to 61.25; 5s, 76 to 87.80; 6s, 87.30 to 98.55.

Berlin Opens Dull, Gains Later.

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Company. By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 4.—Because of the increasing tightness of the money market the Berlin Stock Exchange opened the week very sluggish.

It soon became evident that a number of brokerage houses, having failed to obtain sufficient contingent advances, had tried to meet payday with day-to-day loans. The result was that the interest rate rose from 8 to 9 per cent., and some houses started dumping stocks in order to raise cash. An additional depressing factor was the unfavorable semi-annual report of the Reichsbank.

All stocks dropped 6 to 8 points in the first hour, some even 10 to 16 points. A reduction in the private discount rate to 5% per cent. failed to halt the decline.

Later the market recovered slightly and the tendency became visibly more confident.

BOND ISSUE FOR HOTEL AT FORTRESS MONROE

$750,000 Mortgage to Be Placed on Building on Site of the Old Chamberlin.

An issue of $750,000 first mortgage bonds of the old Point Comfort Hotel Corporation, which is erecting and will own and operate a hotel on the United States Military Reservation at Old Point Comfort, Va., generally known as Fortress Monroe, has been obtained by Robert Garrett & Sons, investment bankers, of Baltimore. The hotel will be known as the Chamberlin-Vanderbilt, and will occupy the site of the Chamberlin Hotel, which was burned.

About three and a quarter acres of land have been granted by the United States Government for fifty years as the site of the new building, with the privilege of renewal for fifty years at the discretion of the Secretary of War. The arrangement has been approved by an act of Congress and by an act of the Virginia Legislature. The grant of land carries exemption from rent and taxes.

The Chamberlin-Vanderbilt will be the newest addition to a chain of hotels which is headed by the Vanderbilt Hotel in this city, and includes the Bon Air-Vanderbilt at Augusta, Ga., and the Condado-Vanderbilt at San Juan, Porto Rico. Walton H. Marshall, who with a group of associates recently bought the Vanderbilt Hotel in this city from the Vanderbilt family, heads the Chamberlin-Vanderbilt Hotel Corporation. Associated with him are William Astor Chanler, Charles D. Wetmore, Edmund L. Baylies and Thomas B. Yuille.

BOND OFFERINGS IN VIEW.

Two Issues, Totaling $3,250,000, Based on Engineering Works.

An issue of $2,750,000 Moffat Tunnel District 5 per cent. bonds will be brought out soon by R. M. Grant & Co., Inc., the fourth in connection with the construction of six-mile railroad and water tunnels through the Rocky Mountains at Denver. The railroad tunnel is now practically "holed through"; the water tunnel was holed through on Feb. 18, 1927.

B. J. Van Ingen & Co., and Eastman, Dillon & Co. expect soon to offer an issue of $500,000 Roosevelt Water Conservation District (Maricopa County (Ariz.) 6 per cent. bonds.

Offering of a new issue of $40,000 Town of Lyme, Conn., 4¼ per cent. school bonds, due on July 1, 1928 to 1935, is being made today at prices to yield 4 per cent. by Remick, Hodges & Co. and R. L. Day & Co.

GOVERNMENT INTEREST CUT

Lower Rate Saves $60,000,000 a Year, Mills Estimates.

The average rate of interest paid on the United States debt has declined from 4.29 per cent. in 1921 to 3.97 per cent. on May 31, according to a summary by Ogden L. Mills, Under-Secretary of the Treasury, published in The New York Young Republican. This has involved a saving in interest charges of $60,000,000 annually, he estimates.

Mr. Mills holds that the reduction in the national debt cannot be credited to policies of the Wilson Administration, for the reason that "in 1919 and 1920 the problem had not arisen in the form which it subsequently took and which called for a definite determination of policy."

Mr. Mills also points out that the interest-bearing debt was reduced from $23,738,930,000 on June 30, 1921, to $18,610,910,000 on May 31.

Another Loss in Foreign Currencies Held—Note Circulation Is Increased.

BERLIN, July 4 (AP).—The Reichsbank report as of June 30 shows the following changes, in reichsmarks:

Gold and bullion	Dec.	276,000
Reserve in foreign currencies	Dec.	2,296,000
Bills of exchange and checks	Inc.	417,233,000
Silver and other coins	Dec.	13,762,000
Notes on other banks	Dec.	14,998,000
Advances	Inc.	125,298,000
Investments	Dec.	136,000
Other assets	Dec.	61,056,000
Notes in circulation	Inc.	595,894,000
Other maturing obligations	Dec.	100,015,000
Other liabilities	Inc.	13,128,000

Total gold holdings are now 1,802,569,000 reichsmarks.

	1927.	1926.	1925.
June 30	1,802,569	1,492,224	1,061,717
June 23	1,802,845	1,492,210	1,061,641
June 15	1,803,588	1,492,161	1,040,194
June 7	1,815,496	1,491,999	1,015,841
May 31	1,815,555	1,491,949	1,015,661

The addition to the bank's gold reserve since the low point of April, 1924, when it stood at 441,815,000 gold marks, amounts now to 1,360,754,000 gold marks, or $323,633,738. The highest gold reserve since the war was 1,852,194,000 marks on March 23, 1927. When the war began the bank's gold holdings were 1,262,190,000 marks. They were increased to 2,587,780,000 gold marks on Dec. 30, 1916, the highest point in its history.

June 23	3,219,315,000	2,598,140,000
June 15	3,242,047,000	2,712,859,000
June 7	3,686,210,000	2,804,919,000
May 31	3,710,190,000	2,977,952,000

The note circulation on Dec. 31, 1926, which was 3,735,526,000 marks, was the highest reached since the war. Before the return to the gold standard the bank's circulation was stated, on Oct. 31, 1924, at 1,780,920,000,000,000 of the old marks, but the great depreciation of the paper mark at that time made the gold value of the circulation then outstanding less than the present maximum.

16 LONDON TRUST COS. REPORT PROSPERITY

According to Leland R. Robinson, President of the Second International Securities Corporation, the figures of sixteen leading London investment trusts for the fiscal year 1926-1927 indicate continued and, for the most part, increasing prosperity. The combined issued capital of the sixteen investment trusts for which 1927 figures are now available is £45,113,576, of which £17,861,829 has been paid in on debentures, £13,467,492 on preferred stocks and the remainder on on common.

The average net earnings applicable to common shares for the fiscal year were 16.53 per cent. on the common capital, as compared with 16.36 per cent. in the previous year. If profits realized on the turnover of their investments were added to the foregoing figures for interest and dividend return, the averag earnings on common capital of these investment trusts would exceed 20 per cent., according to Mr. Robinson.

Dividends paid averaged 12.47 per cent. on the outstanding common stock, as compared with 11.88 per cent. for the previous year. None of the sixteen investment trusts whose 1927 dividend records are available lowered disbursements to shareholders, while nine increased their dividends.

"The remarkable dependability of investment trust earnings," Mr. Robinson said, "coupled with consistent increases over a period of years in their dividend rates, explains the high prices generally obtaining for their common stock, the average yield at current prices and dividend rates for these sixteen investment trusts being only 5¼ per cent."

Safety in Distribution

A great margin of safety lies in the distribution of holdings.

It is safer to purchase 10 shares of stock in 10 leading diversified industries than to purchase 100 shares in just one issue.

Unfavorable developments are unlikely to affect all ten at the same time. If safety is desired then distribution is needed.

READING TO BUILD $2,000,000 STATION

Structure in North Philadelphia Will Handle Only Express Passenger Trains.

TO BE PIVOT FOR NEW YORK

President Dice Announces Provision for Parking of Train Patrons' Autos.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 4.—Plans for a $2,000,000 passenger express station to be erected at Broad and Huntingdon Streets, North Philadelphia, and to serve as the pivotal point for the Reading Railroad's service to New York, were disclosed here today by Agnew T. Dice, President of the Reading Company.

The company has acquired a large parking area near the site of the new station where outward-bound patrons, especially those going to New York and returning the same day, can leave automobiles until their return. This feature was emphasized by Mr. Dice.

With the signing of contracts for the new station, the railroad will have authorized the expenditure of more than $22,000,000 within a year in an effort to recapture much of its passenger business to New York and to increase freight facilities between Philadelphia and the Pennsylvania coal regions.

The North Philadelphia Station, which is expected to be in use within eighteen months, will replace the present north and southbound stations at Huntingdon Street and become the company's only general express stop inside the city limits.

Mr. Dice said the station was destined to become one of the most important traffic points in the city, since the railroad planned to utilize the facilities there for transfer of Reading "main line" and New York passengers. All trains to and from the downtown Reading terminal will stop there and it will link the railroad with the Broad Street subway now under construction.

The station is to be constructed of Indiana limestone and will be 180 feet long and 800 feet in depth. A Doric colonnade will extend along the white-fronted facade. The platforms will be 1,150 feet long and below the street level.

"MESPAT"—AN INDIAN SETTLEMENT

Among those who had "for conscience sake" followed the "Mayflower" was the Rev. Francis Doughty, who first settled at what is now Taunton, Mass. He soon discovered he had "jumped out of the frying pan into the fire." A "controversie" arose, and Mr. Doughty was forced to go away from Taunton with his wife and children. Applying to the authorities of New Amsterdam for a tract of land, a patent was granted to him for some 13,332 acres at "Mespat."

This tract embraced a large part of what is now Long Island City. Today some of that same property sells for $5,000 per front foot.

However, "Mespat" had a hard time getting along. Continued Indian raids made it far from a quiet haven, also, the Rev. Doughty became involved in several legal disputes which resulted in his moving to Flushing and taking a church at the fixed salary of 600 guilders.

Behind our guaranteed First Mortgages there is property worth twice their value. This property lying in Long Island City, Flushing and other Queens cities is becoming more valuable every day. These Mortgages pay a continuous yield of 5½%. Write for special folder.

INDUSTRY EMPLOYS FEWER THAN IN 1923

BUT OUTPUT IS LARGER

Wage Scale Higher; Reduction in Payroll Less Than Half Reduction in Number of Employes.

The general index of employment in the manufacturing industries, published in the current number of the monthly Labor Review, organ of the Statistical Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, shows that by the latest returns employment in manufacturing industries has decreased 2⅜ per cent. during the past twelve months and nearly 11 per cent. since 1923. The bureau's figures by months compare as follows with the last two years and with 1923 (they are based on an average of 100 for 1923):

March	91.4	93.7	92.5	101.5
February	91.0	92.9	91.6	99.4
January	89.4	92.1	90.0	98.0

On the other hand, the Labor Review's index number of total payrolls shows the decrease from a year ago to have been six-tenths of 1 per cent. and from 1923 only 4⅝ per cent. The figures of the payroll index, based, like the figures for employment, on 100 as the monthly average for 1923, compare as follows:

	1927.	1926.	1925.	1923.
February	96.4	97.9	95.1	95.2

The much smaller percentage decrease in total payrolls as compared with total actual employment is ascribed to the fact that average wages for the relatively smaller number of men actually employed have risen substantially since 1923. Reports that have been made by industrial managers have agreed in stating that the policy of higher wages has resulted in so much larger individual production per capita that it has been possible to reduce the total payroll and yet increase the total output. The President of the Bethlehem Steel Company stated last year that, whereas in 1923 the company's average force of employes was 62,350, in 1925 the average dropped to 60,098, but that production remained in excess of 1923.

The question has been raised what became of the 11 per cent. of the manufacturing laborers of 1923 who had been dropped between then and the present time. The Labor Bureau's figures refer only to the manufacturing industry and therefore do not cover casual skilled or unskilled labor, or direct employment on public works, or farming employment, or such incidental occupations as the driving of taxicabs. One suggestion made on the basis of the Labor Bureau's figures was that, although they did not show reaction in the output of industry, they possibly explained the numerous rumors which were afloat during recent months regarding increasing unemployment in certain large labor centres.

FINDS OUTLOOK GOOD.

National City's Review Expects Fall Expansion of Trade.

The business of the country at the turn of the half year was moving in good volume, though with indications of unevenness here and there which reflect the presence of some retarding influences, the monthly review of economic conditions of the National City Bank says.

"While figures on electric power consumption and bank clearings indicate production and trade to be still running at record-breaking levels," the review says, "the recent decline in steel activity to levels somewhat below those of a year ago and a moderate falling off in railway shipments of merchandise and less than car lot freight give evidence of recessions in some quarters which are not altogether seasonal.

"On the other hand, account must be taken of the fact that business has a great deal to contend with in the form of floods and unseasonable weather for trade, while unemployment resulting from the coal strike and the reduction of activity in the automobile industry has doubtless been a handicap in the regions affected. These conditions, however, are not in themselves important enough to interfere with the usual expansion of trade in the Fall months, which we look forward to with confidence."

SOFT COAL OUTPUT IN JUNE.

Manufacturers' Association Places It at 80 Per Cent. of Normal.

Bituminous coal production for the first three weeks of June was 24,186,000 tons as compared with 27,787,000 tons in the same period last year, it was announced yesterday by Noel Sargent, Manager of the Industrial Relations Department of the National Association of Manufacturers, 50 Church Street. Production was, therefore, at the rate of 80 per cent. of that of a year ago. As the industrial consumption of such coal had declined about 4 per cent. since last year, Mr. Sargent estimated there was an actual decrease of 16 per cent. in the amount reaching the market as a result of the United Mine Workers' strike.

Mr. Sargent said the independent fields now operating were capable of mining much more than the additional 935,000 tons weekly which would enable the present demand to be supplied by current production. They were not doing so, he said, because many industrial purchasers of soft coal were consuming surpluses accumulated before the strike began in April.

MORTGAGES ON INCREASE.

Company Reports 85 Per Cent. Gain in Year's Earnings.

In the past six months, according to Henry J. Simonson Jr., President of the United States Bond and Mortgage Corporation, new mortgages and extensions for Manhattan show a total of 8,172; for Long Island, including Brooklyn, Queens and Richmond, 26,838, and for the Bronx, 9,314.

Net earnings of the United States Bond and Mortgage Corporation for 1926 increased 85 per cent. over 1925. According to Mr. Simonson, the mortgage business needs greater uniformity of practice and regulation, best gained through a national mortgage law.

MIDDLE WEST'S TRADE LARGER THAN IN 1926

But Retail Purchases Are Smaller —High Record in Live Stock Receipts.

The July bulletin of the Kansas City Reserve Bank states that reports from Middle Western trade "reveal a lack of uniformity in seasonal trends of activity in various branches of trade and industry in the district. Some branches were affected more adversely than others by continuance of abnormally cool weather, declines in prices of products and other deterrents. However, the volume of business evidenced by payments by check, while not materially different from that for April, was substantially larger than in May of last year.

Wholesale trade in dollar value of goods sold in six reporting lines was at about the level for the preceding month and the corresponding month last year, while retail trade at department stores declined 10.8 per cent. from April and was 2.7 per cent. smaller than in May a year ago. Sales of lumber at retail yards in city, town and country increased less than 1 per cent. during the month but were much smaller than in the previous May. Implement dealers did a heavy business in sales of harvest machinery, but in sections where the wheat crop was short, sales were disappointing. The outstanding feature of the trade situation was the heavy receipts of live stock and grain, the month's marketings of cattle, hogs, wheat and corn establishing new high records for the month of May in recent years.

"Combined sales of the reporting department stores for the first five months of 1927 were 3.3 per cent. in excess of sales for the like period in 1926. Department store stocks at the close of May were smaller than the month earlier and a year earlier. Wholesalers of dry goods reported retail merchants were carrying small stocks and were buying in small quantities."

TO VOTE ON RUBBER FEES.

Exchange Plans to Stimulate Wider Interest in Market.

The members of the Rubber Exchange of New York will meet next Tuesday to vote on an important amendment to the by-laws. The amendment would make reductions of as high as 40 per cent in the rates of commission for both members and non-members.

F. R. Henderson, President, says he believes the amendment would invite a wider public interest in the market, and that both rubber manufacturers here and producers abroad, because of the savings in commissions, would avail themselves more of the hedging facilities offered by the Exchange.

The Board of Managers has approved the amendment, which contains the following changes in commissions: On each contract bought or sold for a resident of the United States or Canada, not a member of the Exchange, $15 instead of $25; on each contract for a person residing outside of the United States or Canada, not a member, $20 instead of $30; for members of the exchange in the United States or Canada, $7.50 instead of $12.50; for foreign members of the exchange, $12.50 instead of $17.50, and for each contract bought or sold by one member of the exchange for another giving up his principal on the day of the transaction, $1 instead of $1.25.

Anticipate Your Banking Requirements

He was doing a good export business, turning his foreign drafts over to his small local bank and waiting four or five months for collections. When we first met him, his bank was holding over $30,000 of these drafts.

Just then his chance came to take on a nice piece of new business. But he didn't have enough ready cash. The best his bank could do for him was a short term loan totally inadequate for his needs.

After that he let us show him a better way. Now, as he ships, we discount his drafts at once. His funds are not somewhere "Following the Equator" or "East of the Sun," but always liquid, ready for more work.

Ours is a commercial banking service flexible enough to meet the constructive requirements of any sound business. Our facilities are complete for either domestic or foreign transactions. Our experience covers twenty-four years, during which we have aided in solving many problems as perplexing as yours. Our terms and conditions are moderate, simple and equitable. And our service is prompt, personal, confidential and cooperative. See if we can help you—with counsel as well as with capital.

ENDURING FINANCIAL RECORDS

A limited number of copies of The New York Times each day are printed on imperishable rag paper which will last indefinitely in files. Banks and business houses that place their announcements in The New York Times will have the assurance that their advertisements appearing in the newspaper preferred for such announcements will also be a permanent record.

104% Increase

In 1925, security prospectuses mentioned American Appraisals 213% more frequently than those of any other appraisal organization. In 1926, this lead had increased to 317%. Bankers accord increasing recognition to the principle that the better known an appraisal is, the greater is its value in supporting the facts underlying a new security.

Experienced Securities Sales Manager

A man is sought with proven ability to create a sales organization and train salesmen. He must have a personality and education that will attract men of the better grade. His past record must show a successful career, bond experience and forceful managerial ability. He must be a man who can build from the ground up; a thorough business man of initiative, tact, diplomacy and resourcefulness. We want a man who is not now a victim of reverses or a "has been," down on his luck, but one whose ability and qualities outlined above have kept him from these things.

The opportunity is with one of the leading Investment Banking Houses. The bonds to be sold are seasoned investments—nationally known. Compensation will be arranged through a very liberal commission contract. The territory is New York City and environs. Replies must state experience and qualifications fully and will be held in strict confidence. Our organization has been advised of this advertisement. P 841 Times Downtown.

FIRST LECTURE
FREE REAL ESTATE COURSE;
EARN WHILE LEARNING.
Today is the first of a series of five lectures. The course continues every day this week at 2 P. M. and consists of the following:
1. HOW TO GET PROSPECTS AND LEADS.
2. HOW TO APPROACH AND GAIN INTERVIEW.
3. HOW TO SELL REAL ESTATE.
4. HOW TO CLOSE THE SALE.
5. WHAT YOU MUST KNOW ABOUT REAL ESTATE LAW, CONTRACTS, DEEDS, MORTGAGES, &C.
This course of lectures was originally prepared by us for the University of Buffalo.
EXPERIENCE NOT NECESSARY.
We do not want the "high pressure" type of salesman. Your character and sincerity mean more to us than experience.
We are willing to spend our time and money in giving you this course, WITHOUT ANY COST OR OBLIGATION on your part, because we are confident that you can make good if you do what we teach you.
EARN WHAT YOU ARE CAPABLE OF
on a liberal commission basis. Others are doing it now—and have been for over a year. And they came to us without any previous experience in Salesmanship or Real Estate.
Won't you show as much confidence in yourself as we are showing in you?

OCEAN GROVE, N. J., July 4.—The American immigration laws are "dangerous and destructive," former Governor Edward C. Stokes declared today in an address in the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association Auditorium. Mr. Stokes, who is Chairman of the New Jersey State Republican Committee, recently announced his candidacy for the United States Senatorial nomination.

"I do not believe in unrestricted immigration," he said, "but neither do I believe we should regulate immigration by an arithmetical formula. What we need is selected immigration, based on quality and not quantity.

"Our present immigration laws are dangerous and destructive. We try to Christianize the foreigner and then tell him that he, a Christian, is not fit to mingle with us. He thinks us hypocrites. Christ said, 'Come unto me.' We should be a little more friendly and a little more diplomatic, rather than insulting our friend.

"America is needed in the world today because of the break down of the British Empire. Formerly the policeman of the world, this empire is now broken up into separate Governments. We are going to have rebellions and wars unless America can take over the leadership and make the people of other lands good citizens of their countries. But we cannot do this by offending them."

After paying a tribute to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, Mr. Stokes said the transatlantic flight hero had done much to "reform the press of America."

"Lindbergh blotted out the references to crime and scandal and filled the columns with bravery and great deeds. No one else has ever done so much to clean up the press," he asserted.

ROBBER NOT A SUICIDE, AUTOPSY DISCLOSES

Identity of Youth Killed After Shoe Store Hold-Up Still Baffles the Police.

Detectives of the Poplar Street station, tried unsuccessfully yesterday to establish the identity of the 22-year-old robber who was shot and killed by a policeman Saturday night after holding up the manager and two clerks of the Emerson Shoe Store, at Fulton and Pearl Streets, Brooklyn.

Pending the arrival today of information from Detroit, Mich., as to the possibility of the youth's having worked there for Dodge Brothers as an automobile demonstrator, the detectives questioned again employes of the Hotel Commodore, where the bandit under the name of John Holland Jr., lived at various periods during the last year. Hotel records show he registered each time from Detroit, and in casual conversations there spoke of having worked for an automobile company in that city.

It was said at the Commodore that "Holland," quiet-spoken and mild-mannered paid his bills promptly. The last time he registered at the hotel was on Wednesday, having lived for the week before at a rooming house at 129 East Forty-seventh Street.

At the East Forty-seventh Street address he had told Charles Cardona, the proprietor, he was in New York for a vacation and asked not to be disturbed daily until noon. The police searched his room there, but found nothing.

At the Kings County Hospital morgue, Dr. M. E. Martin performed an autopsy yesterday. The police were not sure whether the robber had been killed by Patrolman James J. Reedy after the hold-up, or had killed himself. Both the hold-up man and the patrolman used .38 calibre revolvers and each fired two shots. According to Dr. Marten the autopsy disclosed it would have been impossible for the youth to have shot himself behind the right ear where the bullet entered.

Fire Near Picture Theatre.

While 500 persons sat in the Columbus Motion Picture Theatre at 81 Eighth Avenue yesterday at 3 P. M. a fire started in the new subway directly in front of the theatre. George Olive, manager of the house, saw it first and quickly shut the doors to the theatre. A still alarm was sent in for firemen and he and John Altieri, head usher, attacked the flames with a hand extinguisher. Fire apparatus, under Battalion Chief John Flood, drew up with little noise and the blaze was put out without alarming the throng in the theatre. Meanwhile, a crowd assembled, thinking the theatre was afire, but it was quickly dispersed.

PLAN BURIAL OF 7 VICTIMS.

Relatives to Remove Bodies to South Orange, N. J., Today.

Special to The New York Times.

BELMAR, N. J., July 4.—Arrangements for the burial of seven victims of yesterday's grade crossing tragedy were being completed here tonight by relatives. Bonifinio Damiano, husband of Mrs. Catherine Damiano and the father of four children killed in the crash, came here today. The bodies of the members of the Damiano family and the two others will be taken tomorrow from the Hardy Morgue here to South Orange.

At the Ann May Hospital in Spring Lake it was reported that the condition of Rose Damiano and Anthony Damiano, who were injured when the car driven by their mother stalled in the path of a train, is improving. Mrs. Damiano, her four children, and Mildred Balintino and Santo de Felips, boarders at the Damiano home, lost their lives.

The police investigation has practically exonerated James Whidgbee, negro flagman, who is held in $10,000 bail. Whidgbee will not be released on bail until tomorrow. Officials declined to accept the offer of New York & Long Branch Railroad Company corporation property as surety. Ten thousand dollars cash or $25,000 private property bond was requested.

THE THRILLING STORY of the flight of the America to Europe, the difficulties and experiences encountered, as well as the information of scientific value, told by Commander Byrd himself in The New York Times. No other New York newspaper will carry his narrative.—Advt.

THE TRAGEDY IN QUEENS

The throb of pity caused by the story of the young widow in Queens who killed herself and five children is instantly succeeded by the question: Could not something have been done to prevent this? We hunt in vain for evidence that organized society was at fault. * * * Then we come back to The World's account to the sentences telling how the father had been employed; how he had bought luxuries—a radio set, an eight-cylinder car; and how he had been hurt in an automobile accident.

Freeman, a stock salesman for a Wall Street firm, lived long enough to spend $2,000 in hire of specialists and nurses. There was no insurance.

Five small children—and there was no insurance. It is commonplace enough, no doubt. Yet in this instance what a difference in six lives a few thousand dollars of insurance would have wrought! Year in and year out civic leaders, social workers and others talk about insurance against disaster as almost an obligation. The State supervises the insurance business; many businesses go out of their way to provide insurance for employees; a main object of many fraternal bodies is insurance. Many cannot save, but practically all can insure. Editorial.—Courtesy New York World.

"Like riding on velvet," says President Butler

PRESIDENT NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER, of Columbia University, is one of the many leaders of American life who always "take the Century" when traveling between New York and Chicago.

When he arrived in New York from a recent Chicago visit, President Butler wrote to an officer of the New York Central:

"Coming home on the Century was like riding on velvet."

It is the velvety smoothness of the Century's overnight flight on the famous water level route that has made this train the favorite of five out of six business executives.

The water level route is the comfortable route
